FRENCH FEAR U. S.; MAY RUSH GERMAN GRAB

Essen to Be Taken in First Advance.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—(United Press.)—Considerable interest was evidenced here tonight over the United States senate resolution suggesting that the American force be withdrawn from Europe. It was pointed out that such withdrawal would constitute "moral embarrassment" for France, but would not in any way interfere with the aggressiveness of the French.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—Fear that the United States may protest openly or through a veiled suggestion for further negotiations on German reparations may cause the French to send troops into the Ruhr to seize guaranties before Jan. 15.

From high sources it was learned today that the French ministers are worried that Washington may interfere in the situation, thereby rendering more difficult the application of the Poincare-Foch plan. It is understood that no action will be taken until the German delegates have had an opportunity to address the reparation commission Monday on their failure to make all coal deliveries demanded but action may start at any hour after the Germans admit default.

The presence of French troops in Dusseldorf affords a deep bridgehead in the Ruhr, and will enable armored cars and tanks, supported by infantry and machine gun detachments, to seize Essen within a few hours after the order is given.

Germans May Make New Offer.

The declaration that Germany is in default on coal deliveries was postponed today following the German delegates' demand to make explanations to the reparations commission. The commission decided to permit Herr Bergmann and Herr Fischer to appear Monday and state their case. The French delegate refused the British plea to delay this hearing until Wednesday.

From German sources it is intimated that the German delegates may submit new offers for reparations payments in 1923, but it is not expected that they will be sufficient to modify the French plans. Germany is willing to accept a two year moratorium if the payments in kind are included with the cessation of cash installments, but it rejects gages.

Poincare Tells Cabinet of Plan.

Premier Poincare today outlined the plan for seizing portions of Germany to President Millerand and the cabinet, who endorsed it. The French president announced only such military operations are envisaged as will be sufficient to afford protection to the French technical committees and customs collectors, as well as general control officials.

The principal military advance of the French will be aimed at Essen, which is the nucleus of railways and factories headquarters in the Ruhr, and seizure of this city would paralyze any German efforts to resist.

Rhine Troops to March In.

The French troops already on the Rhine will be used for the occupation owing to their knowledge of the German language. They are accustomed to dealings with the Germans, and therefore there is expected to be little friction. Infantry forces have been heavily reinforced, armored cars, tanks, aviation, and some cavalry patrols have been moved forward. Little artillery will be necessary, the French believe.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that the troops will be used chiefly for policing and protecting French officials and workers. Recent attacks on allied officials in Germany and Bavaria have accentuated the need for safeguarding any foreigners engaged in supervising and controlling the affairs.

Premier Poincare expects the reinforcement of a small contingent of Belgians as material evidence of their solidarity. It is not expected that Italy will be represented militarily, but Italian officers and officials are expected to be included in the allied committees.

Strike in Ruhr Threatened.

The first signs of coming trouble were reported today. The miners in the Ruhr threatened to strike on the grounds of insufficient pay and bad food. The French plans for the seizure of the zone embrace the provisioning of the Ruhr miners to a certain

DR. E. G. HIRSCH DYING, DOCTORS TELL FAMILY

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch, for years pastor of Sinai Congregation, 46th street and Grand boulevard, and one of the leading pulpit orators and scholars of the country, was reported dying this morning. Members of his family were summoned to his bedside at his home at 4608 Drexel boulevard earlier in the evening, when physicians in attendance announced that they had abandoned hope for his recovery. They were told that Dr. Hirsch, who is seventy-one years old, could not live through the night.

Drs. Isaac A. Abt, Otto Schmidt, and Solomon Strouse, all of whom have been in attendance on Dr. Hirsch, held a consultation shortly before midnight. They then announced their conclusion to the members of the family and left the residence.

Dr. Hirsch has been confined to his bed for several days. He was absent from his pulpit last Sunday, and on Jan. 3 it was first announced that he was seriously ill. At the time no announcement was made as to the cause of his illness, as the physicians were unwilling to alarm the family unnecessarily. It was privately stated, however, that he was suffering from pneumonia.

POLICE MATRON, 20 YEARS ON JOB, KILLED BY AUTO

Mrs. Mary Murray, 60 years old, 3328 West Congress street, police matron at the Clark street station for the last twenty years, was killed by an automobile at Jackson boulevard and Kedzie avenue last night. Daniel Clark, 18 years old, 4312 West Monroe street, driver of the car, is being held by the Warren avenue police.

Four persons were injured yesterday when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an Aurora and Elgin line funeral train near the cemetery at Hillsdale, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Thiele, Mrs. Mary Jaschke, and her son, Walter, were the injured persons.

A reward of $500 was offered by William R. Lloyd, 921 Sedgwick street, architect's draftsman, for information leading to the arrest of the driver of the "vampire" automobile which killed his 7 year old daughter while she was playing in front of her home Friday.

Quarrels with Husband, Takes Poison; Will Live

Mrs. Stella Weller, 26 years old, 1443 Ogden avenue, following a quarrel with her husband, Albert Weller, last night swallowed a quantity of poison, apparently in an effort to end her life. Weller notified the police and they took Mrs. Weller to the county hospital. Physicians said that she would live.

WOMAN, TRAPPED BY FLAMES, DIES

Fire Sweeps Flat After Gas Explosion.

Mrs. Lea Nathanson, 65 years old, was overcome by a coal gas explosion and then burned to death in her apartment on the second floor at 2179 De Kalb street last night.

Jean Isaacson, 14 years old, on the first floor of the apartment building was overcome by the gas. Her life was saved by the heroic work of Policeman George Hospen. He heard the explosion, rushed to the scene and carried the girl to safety.

Fire Prevents Rescue.

Before Hospen could reënter the building, flames were raging in the hallway, barring his way to the second floor. Firemen were called. Before they subdued the fire it had virtually destroyed the interior of the entire apartment building.

Firemen found Mrs. Nathanson's body on the kitchen floor of her flat. Efforts of physicians to revive her were futile.

Son Tries to Save Her.

Mrs. Nathanson was alone in the apartment at the time of the explosion. Her son, Abraham, who lives at 1323 South Kedzie avenue, was in the neighborhood when the fire broke forth. He rushed to his mother's home, but, like Policeman Hospen, he, too, was late. Even then he would have rushed into the flames in an effort to reach his mother, but firemen held him back. His effort, they said, would have been suicidal.

The first floor of the apartment building is occupied by the family of Mrs. F. Isaacson. She and her sons, Peter and Gustave, detected the odor of gas and rushed to the street. The little girl, however, was overcome.

He Thought He Was Shot; He'd Only Been Hit by a Fist

Albert Michaels, 23 years old, 1903 North Mozart street, a husky piano mover, was bested last night first, by moonshine and then by a stranger with whom he got into a row at North Mozart and Cumberland streets. When he came to, Michaels declared he had been shot in the chest and was taken to Alexian Brothers hospital. The supposed bullet wound was a small cut inflicted by the stranger's fist.

TRAIL, THEN ROB MAN OF RING WORTH $1,200

Trailing him from the street car on which he had been riding to his home at 5344 South Park avenue, two bandits last night held up J. F. Dillworth and robbed him of an eight carat diamond ring valued at $1,200. Two robbers, one of them armed with a small wrench, knocked down Clarence Smith, 416 Hart street, in front of the home of a friend at 2159 West Ohio street last night and robbed him of $25 and his watch.

Three robbers entered the saloon of Simon Holmes at 7620 South Morgan street and, holding up Patrick Collins, the bartender, took $60 from the cash register. Leaving the saloon, they found Holmes just alighting from his car and robbed him of his gold watch and $70 in cash.

Peter Dickens, 25 years old, 424 South Morgan street, and Joseph Bracke, 23 years old, 2147 Milwaukee avenue, were arrested by Policemen Granger and Pidgeon of the Des Plaines street station, after they are alleged to have beaten Theodore Kuryso, 879 North Hermitage avenue, and robbed him of his watch and $8.

SENATE VOTES 57-6 TO BRING SOLDIERS HOME

Urges President to Act Immediately.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The senate today, by the impressive vote of 57 to 6, declared for the immediate withdrawal of the American troops from Germany, as advocated by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

At the conclusion of an all day debate it adopted a resolution offered by Senator Reed (Dem., Mo.), asserting it to be the sense of the senate that the American forces should be brought back from the Rhine at once.

After running the gauntlet of vigorous discussion, attempts to pigeon hole it, and amendments, the Reed resolution emerged with the approval of the senate finally in this form:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the senate of the United States that the President should order the immediate return to the United States of all troops of the United States now stationed in Germany.

"In giving this expression of its opinion the senate disavows any unfriendly or partisan attitude towards any nation or nations of Europe."

One Change Is Made.

In its original form the Reed resolution "respectfully requested" the President to order the return of the troops at once, but some senators contended that this language might be interpreted as a senatorial attempt to interfere with executive prerogatives.

At the suggestion of Senator Hitchcock (Dem., Neb), ranking Democratic member of the foreign relations committee, Senator Reed proposed a substitute, and then accepted an amendment proposed by Senator New (Rep., Ind.), constituting the second paragraph of the measure. The purpose of Senator New's amendment was to prevent undue emphasis being laid upon the resolution as a gesture on the part of the United States in the reparations controversy.

Jones Objects to Vote.

Senator Reed secured consideration of his resolution today by unanimous consent. After it had been debated for several hours, Senator Jones (Dem., N. M.) sprang a surprise by moving to refer it to the foreign relations committee. He contended that to adopt the resolution at this time would be "an affront" to the President. He was supported in this motion by Senator Pomerene (Dem., O.). The motion furnished an acid test of strength. Senator Reed promptly demanded a roll call on the motion, and it was beaten by the decisive majority of 22 to 39.

After this striking disclosure of the resolution's strength, some remarkable acrobatic feats were performed by senators to get on the band wagon. Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.), Republican leader, Senator Watson (Rep., Ind.), Senator McCormick (Rep., Ill.), Senator McKinley (Rep., Ill.), and Senator Spencer (Rep., Mo.), and many others who had voted to send it to the foreign relations committee, joined the overwhelming array, which then rose to the support of the resolution on the final roll call.

The Six Negative Votes.

The four Republicans who finally went on record against the resolutions were Nelson (Minn.), New (Ind.), Reed (Pa.), and Sterling (S. D.). The two Democrats opposing were Myers (Mont.) and Williams (Miss.).

What the administration will do in response to the resolution remains to be seen. If, however, it shows no disposition to carry it into effect indications are that congress will attach a rider to the army appropriation prohibiting use of funds for the maintenance of American troops in Germany.

Secretary of War Weeks today took occasion vigorously to deny statements attributed to him to the effect that instructions had been sent to Maj. Gen. Henry T. Allen directing him to withdraw the American army of occupation on the Rhine the moment the French advance into the Ruhr. The secretary stated that he had issued no such instructions, that there was not a word of truth in such reports, and that the matter had not even been discussed at yesterday's cabinet meeting.

Reed Warns of Danger.

Opening the debate on the resolution Senator Reed warned the senate of the danger of keeping American troops in such an exposed position in view of the disturbed conditions in Europe, particularly as a result of the collapse of the premiers' conference in Paris.

"From the first I have believed that when the armistice had been signed and that when our allies and associates

Flynn Paid $100,000 to Reid, Charge

Records of payments of $100,000 to Commissioner of Public Service William H. Reid by the Pottinger-Flynn Coal company is in the hands of Attorney General Edward J. Brundage.

The indictment of Reid was declared yesterday to be inevitable.

Disclosures of grafting by city hall and school board officials in coal purchases have come to the attorney general hand in hand with complaints of parents that hundreds of school children are compelled to sit huddled and shivering—their health endangered—in poorly heated schoolhouses. This, the prosecutors say, renders negative any hopes the malefactors may have had of obtaining a "confession bargain." It had been reported that Reid had offered to go before the grand jury.

His Checks Identified.

The first figures definitely connecting Reid with the $5,000,000 worth of city and school board business obtained by the Pottinger-Flynn company came when James Osborne, Reid's secretary, identified in the grand jury room checks aggregating $13,000 as those given him by Mortimer B. Flynn, and which he in turn indorsed and deposited to the account of Dr. Reid.

Mortimer B. Flynn, sole owner of the Pottinger-Flynn company, and Dr. Reid are neighbors. Reid, who was originally a practicing dentist, came into prominence and power with the election of Mayor Thompson. He is now the owner of a $25,000 home, magnificently furnished.

Mortgaged His Chair.

Mayor Thompson, in campaigning some time ago for Dr. Reid's election as ward committeeman of the old Thirty-first ward, had this to say:

"Dr. Reid is one of my most loyal friends and supporters. I owe a lot to Dr. Reid's help in my election. He was so sincere and earnest in my behalf that he mortgaged the last thing he owned—his dentist's chair—to aid me."

The mayor's gratitude took the form of the appointment of Dr. Reid as smoke inspector, despite the fact that he was not an engineer, as required to be by law to hold this position. Dr. Reid came to be known as the cabinet member closest to Mayor Thompson.

Flynn was a Democrat. Nevertheless, Reid was able to crowd out Fred Lundin and other "Lundiners" from the city coal bins, getting a practical monopoly for Flynn on all the city business. Soon Flynn reached out for school contracts. The special grand jury investigation showed that he got them.

Broadening Inquiry Scope.

Attorney General Brundage was asked last night:

"If you are planning Reid's indictment by the special grand jury, must not there be some other deal than the admitted payments to Reid's secretary by Flynn? Or is the scope of the school board grand jury to be enlarged to permit of indictments on strictly city hall deals?"

"Reid handles all the money for the Pottinger-Flynn company," was the answer.

"Flynn is talking, but his books, a truck load of them, and his canceled checks tell us more of his graft payments," Special Assistant Attorney General Frederick A. Brown admitted.

Definition of Conspiracy.

The possibility that Reid might claim he was legally entitled to the money, on the theory that the payments were legitimate "commissions" on sales he Bastrop, La., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Jeff Burnett, the only klan member under arrest in the Mer Rouge murders, has left the jail on sick leave. It is freely predicted that he will not return. Burnett was given permission to go to a hospital under guard. He was taken out immediately by Deputy Sheriff Lorry Calhoun, whose name today entered the court records as a klansman. It was announced that the prisoner was to be taken to a hospital.

BY ROBERT LEE.

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Bastrop, La., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—When the public hearing on the murders of Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards closed this afternoon it became patent to any one concerned that this is an inquisition into the methods of the Ku Klux klan, that ritual murder may be proved against the klansmen, and that the United States government does not propose to countenance petty obstructions in the way of its share of the investigation.

There were high lights in startling and swift succession.

Martial law came within a sarcastic phrase of being declared.

Paints Dreadful Tortures.

Dr. John A. Lanford and Dr. Charles W. Duval described the torture and mutilation of the murdered men with such vividness that little remains for the state to show that a premeditated and prearranged ritual was carried out in the "executions" of Daniel and Richards.

J. L. Daniel—Old Man Daniel—the father of the murdered war veteran testified as to the merciless flogging he received while masked and bound and told of the disappearance from the sight of men of his son.

W. C. Andrews, a taciturn man who speaks through tightened lips, one of the victims of the lash wielded by members of the black hooded fraternity, told under oath of the events which he remembered of that fatal Aug. 24.

Murder Charge; $5,000 Bonds.

Dr. B. M. McKoin, accused of murder but free on $5,000 bonds, blithely assumed a place in the limelight.

And the federal government took such a determined stand that Judge Fred M. Odom was constrained to issue an order to Sheriff Carpenter modifying his instructions of yesterday which caused the disarming of the federal secret service operatives. They carried their guns today.

The courtroom was jammed this morning, following the hour's delay occasioned by the conference between the judge, Attorney General Coco and Chief of Federal Agents A. E. Farland.

The crowd came eager to learn if the state could complete the establishment of the corpus delicti—prove that the horribly butchered torsos found in lake La Fourche on Dec. 22 were indeed the bodies of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards.

Before court adjourned until Tuesday morning—Monday is a legal holiday here—even the most calloused klansman in court could scarcely dispute the identification.

THROUGH A FATHER'S EYES

Perhaps the most astounding scene that was witnessed in this little courtroom this morning—difficult to narrate and incredible in this day and year—can best be emphasized by focusing the narrative in Old Man Daniel.

The old man sat in a front row, chin on hand, his lips compressed, his fingers knotted. And before his eyes he saw coldly, scientifically reconstructed the lacerated fragments of flesh and battered bones that were his son.

The shattered body was held up against the courtroom wall, sewn on a dun cardboard with pebbled surface, and two learned pathologists, in staid medical terms, drawled out a description of the revolting maiming and murdering. Daniel sat there facing the blasted bones, some still discolored with blood. His shoulders did not shake; his hands did not quiver, nor did his eyelids blink to hold back the tears.

Pathologist on Stand.

Dr. Duval was the first of the pathologists to testify. He recited the revolting details as to the manner in which the body of Daniel was tortured and torn apart, leaving it in such a

How Hooded Killers Crushed Two Men Into Pulp in Terror Machine Told by Physicians

Bastrop, La., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Introduced in the open hearing today to support the state's evidence against the masked murderers of Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards were two reports signed by Dr. Charles W. Duval and Dr. John A. Lanford, pathologists, who examined the mutilated bodies following their discovery on Dec. 22, in Lake La Fourche.

One report describes the condition of the body of Daniel, which had been weighted with chains and cast into the lake sometime during the night of Aug. 24, last. The other deals with the body of Richards, slain at the same time.

The two reports are practically identical, showing that the two men were submitted to the same incredible tortures, except that in the description of Daniel's body the report discloses that a crude operation had been performed on him, while Richard's was not so mutilated.

What Pathologists Found.

The pathologists' statement first describes the attentions given the body of Daniel by the undertaker, and continues:

"The body of F. Watt Daniel was removed from the burial box by the undertaker to an improvised table for the purpose of conducting a postmortem examination. The body is completely wrapped in a dripping wet white sheet and in a woolen blanket. Then coverings are removed by the prosecutor immediately preceding the autopsy. The odor of embalming fluid is pronounced.

"Inspection of the body shows it is that of a well developed and well nourished white man, without head, feet, and hands. It is partly clothed with the remains of a soft collar, white shirt, blue serge woolen trousers, and underwear of white cotton material.

"About the hips, and arranged like a diaper, is a suspension basket made of four heavy galvanized wires. The wires composing the basket are angulated in front. There is a black leather belt with plain sterling silver buckle holding the trousers in their natural position around the waist.

"About the neck, in the correct position, is a black colored neckwear tied in the form of a bow. On the neckband of the shirt, posteriorly, are red embroidered letters, 'F. W. D.,' which are handsewed to the collar band.

Pockets Are Examined.

"On removing the belt from the usual straps on the trousers, it is found that the leather is closed and intact around the waist, hips and upper part of the thighs. The trousers are removed by cutting with scissors and the several pockets examined.

"In the watch pocket is found a wrist watch, with leather strap attached to one side. The crystal is crushed and the hands indicate 10 o'clock. On the back of the watch is engraved 'F. L. Daniels, Mer Rouge, La.'

"There is also found in the watch pocket a flattened pad of United States paper money, the outer bill showing a $5 denomination. The two ordinary side pockets of the trousers are empty. The left hip pocket contains an unmarked white handkerchief. The trousers have no right hip pockets. There are no special markings on the white underwear.

"It is noted that some of the bones of the extremities, particuarly the upper, are protruding through the fragments of the clothes and the flesh.

Condition of the Flesh.

"The flesh, including the skin, while in an advanced state of decomposition, is intact and the nature and relations of component parts are readily differentiated. In general, the skin covering the body does not peel off in layers and is more or less dry and encrusted. This latter condition is part of the result of dehydrating substance previously used by the undertaker. This substance resembles sawdust which has been impregnated with chemicals and deodorants. On scraping off this material the skin is of a leathery consistence, showing a condition of adipocere and is firmly attached to the underlying structures.

"On removing the clothes there is noted an entire absence of all the external genitalia. Closer inspection shows that these organs were removed by an excision with some sharp cutting instrument, as evidenced by the relatively smooth remaining skin edges.

"The skeletal muscles and tendons throughout the body are in comparatively good condition and, in consequence, readily recognized. Their consistency is flabby, but not friable. It is noteworthy that the muscles and other soft tissues are entirely free from microscopic evidence of gas and not filled with fluid except in the deeper parts, particularly those of the thigh, buttocks, and shoulders. However, in these situations it is only moderately in excess.

Blood Had Been Drained.

"One of the striking features is the paleness of the muscles, indicating scarcity of the blood within the vessels, except in certain areas adjacent to bone injuries and where direct traumatism has occurred. These areas are noticeable in the soft tissues of the arms, forearms, thighs, legs, chest wall, and back.

"Particularly in the latter there is evidence of extensive hemorrhage beneath the skin, as the seventh cervical vertebra and as low as the tenth dorsal. The blood extravasations are chiefly on the right side of the vertebra column. In all these areas the muscles and soft tissues are of a dark, greenish black color, in contrast to the pale pinkish brown color of the exsanguinated muscles and the reddish brown color of veteral muscles.

"The tendons and ligaments about the stumps of the legs and forearms are ragged and uneven as though they had been torn or pulled from their attachments. The viscera of the throcacic and abdominal cavities are in a marked state of decomposition and decay. Only the liver, heart, stomach, intestines, and bladder are entirely recognizable. The stomach and intestines are completely collapsed and contain no gas.

All Bones Found Fractured.

"The bones of the body, particularly those of the extremities (legs and arms) are found fractured. These fractures are compound and comminuted. The striking features of the fractures of the long bones are their character of similarity and symmetry. The humerus of both arms, the radius and ulna of both arms, the femur of both thighs, and the tibia and fibula of both legs are fractured in three different places.

"These fractures regularly occur at the upper, middle, and lower portions, respectively, in each instance. As a rule they are equidistant and approximately three and one-half inches apart.

"The character of the fractures indicates that they were produced by a crushing force or one in which the force was applied simultaneously from more than one direction. This explains the great number of small bits and fragments of bone, varying in size and shape, which are found at the fracture sites.

"Thorax—The most of the ribs, together with the right clavicle and breast plate [sternum] are fractured and dislocated. The first eight ribs on the right side present fractures regularly at the angles posteriorly, while the first six ribs of this side present in addition fractures anteriorly and near their costal junction.

"On the left side the first seven ribs are broken from their costal junction, and the tseventh rib in addition is fractured at its posterior angle.

Breast Plate Broken In.

"The breast plate shows that the manebritum is dislocated from its costal attachment and its union with its middle portion. The fractures posteriorly are of the 'green stick' variety, while those anteriorly are complete.

"The appearance and location of these fractures to the bones of the thoracic cage would indicate that the force was applied simultaneously upon the front and back of the torso.

"The vertebral column and the pelvic girdle are found intact, showing neither fracture nor dislocation.

"Head—The greatest portion of the skull is missing, there being present only parts of the occipital bone and a piece of the sphenoid. These were sufficient to recognize the topography of the base of the skull, as they contained the foramen magnum and its connection with the bones of the neck, which latter were in their proper relations and unbroken.

"The scalp and underlying tissues are present for several inches beyond the margin of the basal skull bones, forming loose overlying flaps. The posterior skin flap is covered with short light brown hair. No brain tissue is noted.

Deductions of Physicians.

"Pertinent comments — The gross anatomical findings in this case, namely, lacerations, amputations, and hemorrhages, of certain of the soft tissues in association with multiple comminuted fractures of the bony structures, permit of the conclusion that some one or more of these injuries was the primary and the other the contributory cause of death.

"The character of the injuries to the soft tissues and their proximity to the injuries of the bones indicate that the lesions to the soft parts and to the bones were dependent one upon the other and produced simultaneously.

"The striking symmetry and character of the bone fractures and their relationship to the injuries of the surrounding soft tissues suggest that the body was subjected to some specially constructed device, designed for inflicting punishment.

condition that the technical description (printed elsewhere on this page) is unbelievable.

In a calm, monotonous voice he calmly illustrated his simple story, couched in scientific terms, with the bleached bones, held together by white thread, suspended on the wall above the courtroom.

His account was one of tortures rivalling the Spanish inquisition and other extreme punishments in the pages of history. He told of a fiendish operation performed on Daniel before his death, and declared the arms, feet and heads of the victims were brutally torn from the bodies, after a machine had broken the bones. A mechanical device smashed the chests of the helpless men and crushed out their lives, he said.

Confirmed by Dr. Lanford.

Dr. Lanford followed him on the stand. As in the case of his colleague, he was subjected to a close questioning to establish his professional capacity.

Lanford is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, a student in Rockefeller institute, Harvard university, and now is a professor in Tulane university. He showed a record of more than 6,000 autopsies.

He, too, identified his formal report, signed by himself and Dr. Duval, and made a part of the record, and then, in reply to questioning by Assistant Attorney General Guion, went into horrifying detail concerning the diabolical machine—the crushing, irrestible hopper—into which the living bodies of the two victims were fed.

He showed by the most careful and precise description how the bones of the lower legs, the upper legs, the fore arms, and the upper arms of both men—twenty-four bones in all—were broken three times each.

Fearful Details Related.

That is to say, the upper right arm was broken once near the shoulder, again in the middle, and again near the elbow; the same thing was done to the left arm.

And then he showed how the left arms similarly were treated; and then legs. Twenty-four bones each broken three times each; seventy-two distinct breaks; and all done with such mathematical precision as to preclude the possibility of purely human agency.

On the question of how this was done Dr. Lanford was closely questioned.

"It could only have been done by a machine," he said. "It was either a machine devised for the purpose or it was a machine which exactly fitted the purposes of the men who did the work."

The bones crucified on the cardboard were arranged in a fashion to show how the breaks in each were regular and systematically occasioned. Both men must have been placed in the same contrivance to cause identical wounds.

Every rib in both bodies was broken as if by some terrific weight or pressure.

FED INTO TERROR ENGINE

"And it was pressure against a fixed base," Dr. Lanford said. "The pressure was so great that the ribs were broken down on each side. The watch in Daniel's pocket was crushed. This could only have been done by an irresistible pressure. The heads were crushed off. Little remained above a line three inches from the shoulders."

Of the remainder of the medical testimony little can be said. It has been hinted at. Women sat aghast when it was clinically outlined by the physicians. But there was no doubt that the series of mutilations worked on the bodies of the two men followed a careful plot.

After his testimony was completed Dr. Lanford made a statement to the press.

"I think there can be no doubt," he said, "that these murders were carried out by ritual. There must have been some prearranged scheme of carrying out these executions. I can't believe these men were killed on the impulse of the moment.

Premeditation Is Shown.

"It is possible to think that men might be hewed down in the height of anger, but to take two men and break every bone in systematic order is against all the rules of probability. I should not be surprised to discover that the men who committed these murders did so with every preparation for a long and painful series of tortures.

"Feet were hewed off.

"The hands were hewed off. There had been no surgery on the body of Richards. But there was on Daniel."

Old Skipwith stood in the doorway of the courthouse as the physician testified.

"Is he an expert?" he asked a reporter. He was told he was.

Old Skip didn't grunt aloud. But he shrugged a shoulder in a sort of silent contempt.

VICTIM OF LASH TESTIFIES

Andrews, the Mer Rouge farmer, was the first witness of the day. He told the first story which has come out in the hearing of the beating he received at the hands of his captors. He began by saying that he had gone to Bastrop early on Aug. 24 to attend a barbecue and baseball game. He was accompanied by J. T. Norworthy, and they went in Andrews' car.

"We got there about 9 or 10 o'clock in the morning, in time to see the baseball game," he said. "We left just before sundown."

"What time did you return?" he was asked.

"I started to return, but I didn't get there."

"About a mile or so out of town, up on a dump—that old tram road out there—I was held up by a bunch of black hooded men. There were about fifteen or twenty of them."

Scene on the Public Road.

"Was that on a public road?"

"Yes. One man came to the side where I was driving, pointed a gun at me, and told me to get out. I did. I was blindfolded and my hands tied before me. They set me off at the side of the road, about twenty-five to fifty feet away."

"What did they say to you?"

"They said they wanted me. One of them said, 'Here's one of the men we want.'"

"Did you then recognize any of them or recognize their voices?"

"No. I recognized the voice of J. L. Daniel, father of Watt Daniel. Then I heard them say they wanted some others. They got Richards next. When they put him beside me he asked, 'Is that you, W. C.?' and I told him it was. I said, 'I guess they are going to get all of us,' and he said, 'I reckon so.'"

CALLS HIS CAPTORS "BUDDY"

"They got Watt Daniel and Tot Davenport. I recognized Watt's voice when they told him to get up. I guess one of them shoved him or did something like that when he was slow in obeying. Watt said, 'Wait a minute, buddy, don't be so fast.'"

"Why did he say 'buddy'? Those hooded men were not buddies, were they?"

"Guess they were not," said Andrews, smiling.

There was a barely suppressed laugh that ran the rounds of the courtroom at this.

Attorney General Coco resumed the examination.

"What happened then?"

"They put us in a car—at least they put me in a car—but I couldn't recognize any voices, so I didn't know who else was in the car. They started back down the road."

"Toward Mer Rouge, do you mean?"

Knew Where He Was.

"No, judge; leastways I don't think so. I could tell they were turning the car around, and I judge we came back this way, for after a bit I could smell the old pulp mill mighty strong."

There was a shout of laughter at this, which drew a reproving rap on his desk from Judge Odom. There is a pulp mill located near Bastrop.

"And did they keep you there?"

"No. It seems like to me they took us out on the Monroe road somewhere. After we stopped somebody told me to get out of the car, and I did. They led me off a piece by my arms and asked me what did I know about the attempted assassination of Dr. McKoin. I said I didn't know anything about it whatever, and gave an account of myself on the night they say somebody shot at McKoin, telling them I was at Gallion that night."

Refused to Believe Him.

"Did they seem satisfied with your alibi?"

"No, sir; they said they knew I had something to do with it and would whip me to make me tell. They told me to remove my clothes, but my hands were fastened so I couldn't so they did it themselves and threw me down on my face and whipped me."

"Were you only flogged, or were you injured in other ways?"

"Well, I got a lick in my face some way and one in my side that raised up a knot about as big as my fist, but I wouldn't be able to tell you if they kicked me there or hit me with something.

"They left me lying there on the ground and then they whipped old J. L. That was the first I knew that J. L. was with us. I heard him holler and plead. They accused him of the same thing they did me, but I was suffering so I couldn't listen to what they were saying to him.

"Then they came back to me and told me if I couldn't talk and wouldn't talk, they was a-going to hang me, and I expected they would. I hadn't no idea till they turned me loose in Collinston later but what they meant to kill me.

"Go Ahead and Kill Me."

"I told 'em to go ahead and hang me, but that wouldn't make me know anything about what they were asking me, and I couldn't die but once anyway, and I was suffering so much I didn't much care if I did die."

"What happened then?"

"They put us in the car. I didn't know then but what it was only me in the car and some man that I saw later had a black hood on down to here (mid-breast) took me out of the car and turned me loose right across from the depot in the main street of Collinston, and told me I was to stay there and not look back, but catch the train back to Mer Rouge about 10 or 11 o'clock."

"Did you look back?"

Helped Away by Friends.

"Yes, sir; I did. He had walked away from me about as far as from here to the door by that time, and I could see he had on his black hood yet and then J. L. and Tot came up and helped me across the tracks to where I could lay down because I was suffering so I could hardly walk."

"Did the mob that kidnaped you wear klan regalia?" Andrews was asked.

"No, they wore black hoods and their hats on over those."

Andrews said he believed they were members of the Ku Klux Klan—"maybe not the klan as an organization, but members."

He declared he had never had any trouble with McKoin. Andrews was asked by District Attorney Dave Garrett who, for the first time, took a hand in the hearing, what was the significance of his statement that Daniel said to him, "I guess they're going to get us all."

"None that I know of," he said.

OLD DANIEL REPEATS STORY

Mr. Daniel was the last witness of the day. The old gentleman, wracked by the sights and words that had filled the courtroom with horror during the testimony of the pathologists, spoke in tired, halting sentences, telling again the story of that 24th of August.

He was trying, in his gentle, polite way, to answer the questions of the attorneys; he used the small, hesitating gestures that seem to say, "O, what's the use"; and he was dropping in an occasional and unconscious phrase about Watt; what Watt said, and what he said to Watt; Watt called him "Papa," as is the custom of grownup children here; and the thing came out that made the courtroom sit up and stare at McKoin, hunched down in his gallery chair.

"I have paid McKoin hundreds of dollars in doctor's bills," he was saying. "We were fellow Masons. Watt was one of his best friends. One day Watt told me that he and two other boys had been surrounded by a crew of masked Klux on the road.

"And he said that he knew one of the men was McKoin. He told me another one of them was Capt. Skipwith. And he named a third man."

Name Brings a Gasp.

"Who was that third man?" asked Assistant Attorney General Guion.

"That was Lorry Calhoun."

That made the courtroom sit up. It made Dr. McKoin turn a shade grayer. It caused the sheriff to clear his throat. Skipwith is the cyclops of the klan. He stuck his head into the courtroom this morning. It was just for a moment. He came gingerly down the center aisle for a few steps, tossed a newspaper to his son, who sat there, turned, and retraced his steps to the corridor.

Watt Daniel had recognized him in that band of masked marauders. McKoin, his laughter changed to a gray note, also had been recognized.

And the third was Lorry Calhoun. He is a deputy sheriff, the one sent to Baltimore to bring McKoin back to Bastrop. But because the charges against McKoin were withdrawn on agreement Calhoun wasn't needed. But he was that deputy.

Neither Identifies Assailants.

Attorneys for the state had tried earnestly to make Andrews refresh his memory to the point of identifying some of the members of the flogging crew. It was no use. He couldn't remember one of them.

Nor could Mr. Daniel remember. He said he had been tightly blindfolded but not so tightly but that he could see pine straws lying on the ground, and this told him that they were in a pine forest.

There was nothing humorous when Mr. Daniel talked; and not with Andrews, either.

But the pathetic hopelessness that distinguished the father who for four months had sought his son only to find him dead by the ritual of the most barbaric ceremonial uncovered in modern times, muted the holiday spirit of the court room to a mournful silence.

When He Last Saw His Son.

"The last time I saw Watt was that morning," he said, in his faltering way.

He has a deep voice, but not bold or brazen; subdued rather, and with the sweet note of sorrow in it.

"He and I left home together; he in his car and I in mine. He said to me, 'Papa, I've got some insurance matters to look after and I'm going on ahead so I can see the ball game.'

"I never saw him again. Never again alive."

He didn't see him when he and the four boys were taken out of the cars in the gulley in the Bastrop road. They were all blindfolded and bound. At Collinston a witness saw a truck with Watt Daniel and Thomas Richards in it. They were bound hand and foot and lying in the bed of the truck. Masked men were driving. One of these men has been identified. This is why the name of Lorry Calhoun struck a queer note in the proceedings.

Old Man Denies Whimpering.

There was a slight contradiction in the testimony of Mr. Daniel and Andrews. Andrews said he could not have been far from the scene of the beating of old Mr. Daniel because he could hear him crying out in his agony. When they asked Mr. Daniel about this, he shook his head.

"I didn't say anything when they beat me," he said. "I never begged any man yet and I don't aim to. They could beat me to death."

He said that Andrews groaned, though. Andrews didn't deny it.

"It hurt awfully bad," he said. "I guess they must have hit me forty or fifty times. Finally I got so numb that I didn't know or care what they were doing. I suppose I groaned. But I didn't know what I was doing."

LASH FOLLOWS LASH

That was when he was lying on the ground, a masked man on his head and others at his feet, inside the circle of klansmen, while still another masked man flailed without mercy his bare flesh.

He was asked if he knew or had reason to suspect who did it.

"I don't know," he said. "But I have found out enough to think it was the klansmen."

Then the attorneys thereafter used the word "klan" without restraint. This is the top of the first hill. It has been expected that trouble would come when the name or the word klan appeared in the records.

But the state softly guided its case up this first hill and the name of the mysterious order of the invisible empire, under which the masked men have operated in Morehouse parish, trickled into the proceedings so gently that before any were aware it had become as definitely a part of the daily grind as the very asking of questions itself.

Admit Somebody Is Dead.

The corpus delicti has been established. This was the first task of the state.

And it was the task which the klans men have regarded as hopeless. Skipwith has repeatedly declared from his improvised throne room in the court square that it was ridiculous to suppose that any one of ordinary understanding could identify bodies held under water for four months; and, even if they could, it was utter rot to charge that such bodies could give evidence of mutilation or torture before death.

"Never heard of such foolishness," he is wont to say. "Why, them bodies has been in La Fourche for four months. And more than a ton of dynamite has been dropped in there. There ain't any such thing as recognizing them. I understand the medical men have found evidence of broken bones and other mutilation. It sounds ridiculous."

If this is the plan of the defense it met with a sad blow when Dr. Duval and Dr. Lanford finished their testimony.

His Son Never Answered.

But with all the cold, calm and detailed description of the physicians, laying down without interest the mute narrative of the bodies taken from the shadowed waters of Lake La Fourche, and with the importance of getting into the evidence the established corpus delicti, there was nothing so poignant today, so deeply graven on the hearts of those who listened, as the last sentence of W. C. Andrews as he concluded his testimony.

He asked if old Mr. Daniel said anything when he sat bound and blindfolded by the roadside at the scene of the kidnaping.

"Yes," said Andrews. "He did. He called 'O, Watt.'

"There wasn't any answer."

HANDS OFF U. S. AGENTS

Because it is of widest importance, as affecting the federal investigation of the klan in Morehouse parish, it seems proper to report in detail the clash which arose over the disarming of A. E. Farland and his squad of operatives.

When Judge Odom opened the hearing yesterday he instructed the sheriff and his deputies to search and disarm all those who came. This was done.

"But it was done in a very one sided way," Mr. Farland said. "Our observation of the disarming showed that some were permitted to pass with a friendly slap on the shoulder. But all Mer Rouge men and all those known to be demanding an investigation of these murders carefully were searched. The courthouse was filled with hastily sworn deputies with guns in their pockets. Then we were told that we could not carry them. The court insisted on this order. I protested to Washington."

At noon there came a hot wire from Attorney General Daugherty. It directed Farland and his men to go armed. They were told to submit to arrest and await action by the United States district attorney.

It concluded with the intimation that the federal courts would be backed to the limit. This was taken to mean that troops would be sent in, if necessary.

Previous to this message there was a conference between Judge Odom, Adjt. Gen. Toombs, Mr. Farland, and Attorney General Coco and his assistants, in which it was plainly stated that martial law would be declared if the sheriff, a known klansman, was permitted to handle the arms situation. The charge was made that under such an arrangement klansmen might pack the courtroom and incite to riot. The Mer Rouge people would be without protection.

In this conference the judge held firm, but it was intimated that unless the situation was kept at normal the proclamation for martial law would be published instantly. With things in such a tremulous state, with known klansmen armed and seated at all points in the courtroom, and with the Mer Rouge men, disarmed and grouped together in the little north gallery, the session continued until noon.

So They Take Two Guns Each.

It was then the order came from the attorney general at Washington. In the afternoon the federal operatives carried two guns each. A little later the judge issued this order:

"The report that the court issued an order to disarm the special agents employed by the government to work on this case is absolutely without foundation. The court ordered that no one be permitted to enter the courtroom armed except the sheriff and the deputies on duty.

"I have subsequently modified the order so as to permit the special agents of the government to remain armed while in the courtroom not because I think they are in danger but for a reason which I think is good."

The judge was asked to explain the reason which he "thinks is good," but he declined.

CHICAGO LEGION POST HONORS WATT DANIEL, COMMANDER'S BUDDY

A resolution of sympathy was sent to the parents of Watt Daniel, victim of the Ku Klux Klan in Louisiana, yesterday by the Harold A. Taylor post No. 47 of the American Legion, 111 West Chicago avenue, whose commander was Daniel's comrade in service.

The resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, Claude L. Foubare, commander of the Harold A. Taylor post No. 47, was a member of the same company with Sergt. Fillmore Watt Daniel of Mer Rouge, La., and

"Whereas, We are of the belief and firm conviction that Sergt. Fillmore Watt Daniel gave up his life for a noble cause in the same manner and spirit that he had offered his life to his country;

"Be it resolved, That the members of Harold A. Taylor post No. 47, through its commander, Claude L. Foubare, extend to the parents of the said Sergt. Fillmore Watt Daniel its heartfelt expression and condolences of sympathy, and

"Be it further resolved, That an engrossed copy of the said resolutions be transmitted to said parents of Sergt. Fillmore Watt Daniel [illegible] the memory of a great American soldier, both in war and in peace."

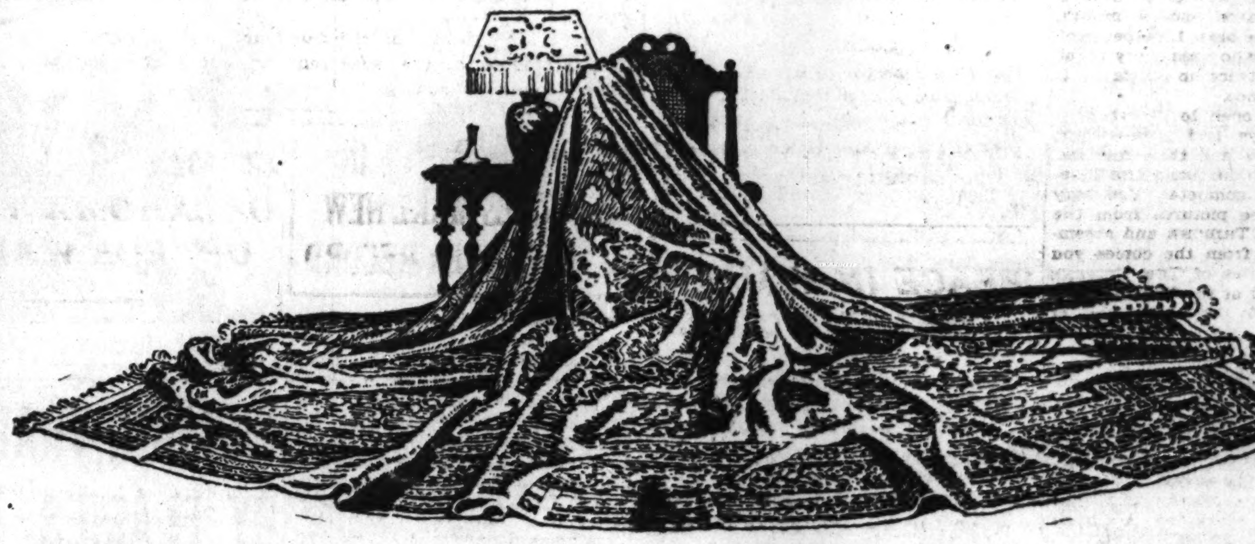
ANNUAL SALE of



ORIENTAL RUGS
With Price Reductions of 25% to 50%
on more than two thousand Rugs of all sizes, from the small mat and threshold rugs to the largest room rugs—all varieties.

This will be, without doubt, the most advantageous sale of really fine Oriental Rugs that Chicago has seen in many years—from the standpoint of quality, variety and value.

Every rug buyer knows what the name Nahigian stands for in integrity, quality and value-giving, so any comment on this point is superfluous.

These reductions of 25% to 50% on regular stock bring the cost down so low that the question of whether or not one can afford real Oriental Rugs instead of machine-made domestics is entirely eliminated.

Our recent direct importations from the rug weaving districts of the near East, assembled at Constantinople and Sultanabad, Persia, have been the largest in the history of this establishment—hence our statement in the first paragraph.

The regular prices, as always, are plainly marked on all rugs, with the reduced-price ticket attached.

Early attendance is advised because of the large response that invariably follows the announcement of this annual sale event.

Rugs selected will be held for future delivery if desired.

$10,000 IN PRIZES FOR MOVIE FANS! CONTEST IS OPEN

Tribune to Pay for Your Skill, and It's Fun.

Are you a movie fan?

Do you think you are familiar enough with the actors and actresses of the silver sheet to identify their pictures when you see them?

Would you like to earn one of 1,327 cash prizes totalling $10,000, by demonstrating your skill?

Then—read on:

THE TRIBUNE today announces a new contest—one that will interest men, women, boys, and girls, everywhere—one that is open to all without cost. You pay nothing. You do no work. Just amuse yourself and prove your skill.

Contest of Skill and Fun.

THE TRIBUNE'S new Movie Puzzle Picture contest starts today. In the Coloroto Magazine Section of this issue you'll find the first set of three pictures. All are composite pictures of well known movie actors. Each consists of the forehead of one player, the eyes and nose of another player, and the mouth and chin of still another. The three composite pictures will, when cut apart and assembled, make three complete pictures of movie actors who are celebrated the world over.

Every Sunday for twelve weeks THE TRIBUNE will print a set of three Movie Puzzle Pictures. There will be thirty-six portraits published in all. The $10,000 in cash prizes will be paid to the persons sending in the most nearly correct named and the neatest sets of the thirty-six pictures.

Simple, Easy: Costs Nothing.

If you attend the movies with any regularity, here's a contest made to order for you. Its extreme simplicity makes it easy. No work to do. No money to pay. Just cut the pictures apart, assemble them correctly, name the actor or actress whose portrait results from your rearrangement of the various clippings, and you are ready to qualify for one of the hundreds of prizes. You may win the first prize of $1,000. You may win a $500 or a $250 or a $100 prize.

It makes no difference what movie theater you attend, whether you go on Monday evenings or to Saturday matinée. You may be just a "now and thenner"—one who drops in at a movie show perhaps once a month. You may be a true blue, 1,000 per cent type of fan—one who goes every night in the week and twice on Sundays. It makes no difference.

The contest is open to everybody—men, women, boys, and girls—except TRIBUNE employés and their families. You need not even purchase THE TRIBUNE in order to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals in THE TRIBUNE and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of THE TRIBUNE may be examined at the Tribune office or in the public libraries, free of charge.

How to Arrange Pictures.

The pictures must be cut out, assembled, and pasted or pinned together. Beneath each assembled picture you are to write the name of the actor or actress you think the picture represents. Cues will be given in descriptions below each composite published to help you solve every one. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count.

Pictures are to be submitted in sets of thirty-six only. Hold all your pictures until you have the complete set of thirty-six. Do not mail them in as the sets of three pictures appear. Wait until the thirty-sixth picture has appeared and then send them all in together. Send or mail your pictures to "Puzzle Pictures," THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago, making sure to attach your name and address. All pictures must be in by midnight, fifteen days after series No. 12 is published.

The judges will be a committee of three members of THE TRIBUNE staff, whose decision will be final. In case of ties the full award will be paid to each tying contestant.

Prizes to Be Awarded.

The prizes to be awarded in this $10,000 cash prize contest are as follows:

First prize	$ 1,000
Second prize	500
Third prize	250
Fourth prize	100
Next three, $50 each	150
Next twenty, $25 each	500
Next 200, $10 each	2,000
Next 1,100, $5 each	5,500
1,327 prizes totaling	$10,000

The contest is now open. The first three Movie Puzzle Pictures appear in the Coloroto Magazine section of today's TRIBUNE. Turn to that section now and see how easy it is to compete for the big cash rewards. Get the scissors and cut the three pictures published today into the sections indicated. You'll then have nine sections of player photos—three foreheads, three sections showing eyes and nose, three showing mouths and chins. Rearrange them and—presto—you have three complete new pictures—all of players it is then easy to identify.

Simple? Easy? Fun? You just know it is!

And big prizes for those most skillful.

Men, women, boys, girls! Let's go!

MICHIGAN GIRL 'SUICIDE' FOUND WORKING IN CITY

Miss Bernice De Hart, former student in the State college at Harbor Springs, Mich., was found yesterday living under an assumed name at 3353 Seminary avenue. She left her home in Vickeryville, Mich., on Nov. 24, saying she was going to commit suicide because of a broken romance.

She was overjoyed in meeting her father, H. G. De Hart, postmaster of Vickeryville, who was taken to her address by Sgts. Ronan and Wachholz. He had believed her dead until a few days ago. A river near the town was blasted and woods were searched to find her body.

Miss De Hart, who is 23 years old and pretty, was employed as a correspondent at Philipsborn's, Inc. She had assumed the name "Margaret Mansfield."

'PEACE IN YOUR HANDS,' TURKS TELL ALLIES

Parley Is Near Break Twice in a Day.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LAUSANNE, Jan. 6.—The Near East peace conference is still alive but it received two severe jolts today. French and Italian delegates were pessimistic tonight.

The first jolt came when Riza Nur Bey, the second Turkish delegate, bolted a meeting of the committee on minorities and the entire Turkish delegation backed up his letter and sarcastic remarks in a letter to the allied delegates.

Ismet Pasha handed out the second jolt when he told the allies that the "key to peace" was in their hands. This was in reply to Lord Curzon's ultimatum on capitulation which did not ultimate.

Turks Stand Pat.

Ismet Pasha, before the full conference, refused to reconsider his previous position on the juridic régime, and the chief British delegate told him to "go home and think it over."

The Turk leader told the conference that the allied proposal for mixed tribunals was incompatible with Turkish sovereignty and that Turkey could not tolerate foreign judges under any circumstances. He asserted foreigners must live under the same laws as the Turks if they wished to come to Turkey, 'declaring the Turks could not submit to a special régime.

Lord Curzon at the last meeting of the conference declared if the Turks did not reconsider their position and suggest something constructive to the conference on this point he saw no need for going on. Lord Curzon today remarked that unless some decision is reached on the disputed point he saw no hope of any treaty of peace, and again asked the Turks to reconsider. Ismet answered immediately, saying that the Turkish reply was final.

Breaks Up Armenian Session.

Riza Nur Bey, second Turkish delegate, broke up the final session of the subcommission on minorities this morning when he walked out of the room, refusing to hear any further discussion on the question of an Armenian national home. The Turks had listened to two speeches on the subject, one by a British expert and one by an Italian expert. Then they demanded the floor, though it was the turn of M. De La Croix, the French expert, and, after a skirmish, during which Riza Nur Bey raised his voice several times and threatened to leave, he finally was given his own way. The other delegates described his attitude as most insolent.

He declared that the allies were right in pressing the case of the Armenians because they, by their intrigues, had brought the Armenians to such a pass. He said the Turkish delegation would hear nothing further on the subject, and when the chairman pressed the right of M. De La Croix to speak, the Turk quit the room.

POSTAL RECEIPTS IN 50 CITIES MAKE NEW DECEMBER RECORD

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—December postal receipts in fifty selected cities were the largest in the history of the service, with a collection of $29,150,025.33, it was reported today by the postoffice department. This represents a gain of $2,422,749.65, or 9.6 per cent over December, 1921.

St. Louis became a "million dollar a month" city with a gain of 15.03 per cent over last year. Other cities in this class include New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and Boston. Richmond, Va., with an increase of 21.46 per cent, reported the largest percentage gain for the month. Detroit was second with 17.85 and St. Paul third, with 17.65.

Only two of the fifty cities reported decreases—Jersey City, N. J., of 14 per cent, and Jacksonville, Fla., of 4.65 per cent. Chicago showed the largest gain in dollars and cents, with receipts of $390,996.91 above those of December, 1921. New York City had the largest total collection, $5,490,027.75, a gain of $207,609.53, or 3.93 per cent, over December, 1921.

COUE GIVES HIS FIRST CLINIC TO ILL OF GOTHAM

Cures Stuttering Boy but Not Arthritis.

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Emile Coué, teacher of auto-suggestion, gave his first clinic in this country this morning in a private house at 339 West 76th street.

Most of the patients were relatives of physicians. There were some children and a number of cripples in the group. M. Coué, bright and alert as usual, went to each individual in turn, asking for an account of his ailment.

After he had questioned every one he told them to clasp their hands and say "I want to open my hands, but I cant." While they were repeating this he kept murmuring under his breath, with sudden eruptions of "Press them tighter, press them tighter." Then he told them to say to themselves, "I can open my hands," and they did.

Cannot Cure Arthritis.

A woman suffering from arthritis of the knee joint was told that while he doubted the possibility of cure in her case, at least she might be helped. This is one of the ailments that Coué specified as being almost impossible to treat by autosuggestion.

Another of the patients was a boy of 14 who stuttered, and had to clap his hands together with nervous force before he could speak at all. As soon as he saw him, Coué was sure this was a case he could help.

"Clasp your hands together and say to me, 'I am not stuttering any more'."

Cures Stuttering.

He clasped his hands together and said it. Another boy who stuttered responded just as easily to autosuggestion. Six patients suffering from asthma were told they could be cured. But in many cases M. Coué said that the best his visitors could hope for would be improvement, not cure.

'23 BECOMES '89; OKLAHOMA "FIXES UP" FOR WALTON

Dons 6-Guns and Chaps for Barbecue.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 6.—[United Press.]—Oklahoma reverted to the days of the wild, wild west tonight, in preparation for Gov. Jack Walton's old fashioned inauguration, barbecue, and homecoming.

Cattlemen from the plains, picturesque in their tall sombreros and high heeled boots, shouldered their way through clusters of blanket Indians, painted ladies, and men from the bad lands as the elite and the riffraff of the state swarmed into the capital, astride cow ponies, behind ox teams, or driving motor cars.

A realistic touch was added by a shooting affray in front of one of the crowded hotels at dusk. An unidentified guest, brandishing a gun, was shot and killed by two police officers after a revolver duel.

White mule, choc beer, and other varieties, flowing freely, gave characteristic atmosphere to those with a memory of the days that were.

Pawnee Bill, ranch owner and a prominent figure in Oklahoma territorial days, was here and gathered a bunch of '89ers around him to discuss Indian fighting.

Pawnee Bill and the Miller brothers of 101 ranch fame, will head the sixteen mile parade Tuesday with Walton. The parade will start the celebration.

Several hundred Pawnee Indians, wrapped in blankets and carrying a supply of real war paint to use in Indian dances Tuesday and Wednesday nights, arrived tonight.

The ranger band of northwestern Oklahoma will arrive here late Sunday. Dressed in chaps, sombreros, and with six shooters strapped to their waists, the bandsmen will represent settlers who opened up the strip and developed it into what is Oklahoma today.

COAL FAMINE ENDED
BY ST. LOUIS INVENTOR.

The coal situation is again acute. Shipping difficulties and the heavy demand have made all available coal stocks dangerously low and has put prices at a new high peak. The quantity stored is so small that thousands are unable to get coal at any price.

But a St. Louis inventor has discovered a wonderful new kind of heat—an oil-gas burner that fits any heating stove, cook stove, or furnace and gives three times the heat of coal, at less cost.

It is called the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner and burns 95% air and 5% coal oil (kerosene). It has no wicks. It can be installed in three minutes—without changes to your stoves—is absolutely safe, will last a lifetime. Any child can operate it. It's much cheaper than coal or wood or gas. Already over 150,000 homes have installed this amazing device.

Write to Mr. B. H. Oliver, 2172-A Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo., at once and he will send an attractive free booklet, a special low price to meet this great emergency, and also a 30 day Free Trial Offer. Write at once before a terrible cold spell makes the demand for these burners so great that it will be impossible for you to get one. Local distributors who want to earn $100 to $500 a month in full or spare time helping to relieve the suffering that is sure to come with continued cold weather should at once request sales plan.—Adv.

Japanese Steamer Sends Out S O S After Collision

MARSEILLES, Jan. 6.—The radio station here reports that the Japanese steamer Dakar Maru has sent a wireless call for assistance after a collision.

The Dakar Maru, of 4,384 tons, was last reported on Nov. 23 as arriving at Batavia, Dutch East Indies, on the trip from Yokohama to Hamburg.

Fifty Passengers Drown When Mexican Ship Sinks

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Jan. 6.—More than fifty passengers, mostly miners, were drowned yesterday when the steamer Thomas sank on a reef near Navidad, state of Jalisco.

FRIENDS HONOR THE MEMORY OF COL. ROOSEVELT

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Nearly 200 friends and associates of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt took part in Oyster Bay today in the third pilgrimmage to the former President's grave in Young's Memorial cemetery. Winding up to the crest of the hill shortly before noon, the party was led by Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania and James R. Garfield of Ohio, secretary of the interior in President Roosevelt's cabinet.

There was a short silence as the party reached the tomb before Oscar S. Straus, the chairman of the memorial service in the place of the Rev. Lyman Abbott, said: "This is a holy day. It is an inspiration to come here and rededicate ourselves to the principles to which his whole life was given."

Gov. Pinchot then read from the address of Col. Roosevelt at Carnegie hall on March 20, 1912: "We, the people, cannot turn back," he said. "Our aim must be steady, wise progress. In the long fight for righteousness the watchword for all of us is spend and be spent. It is of little matter whether any one man succeeds or fails; but the cause shall not fail, for it is the cause of mankind."

At the close of reading of the speech, James R. Garfield stepped out from the group and placed a wreath upon the iron gate of the tomb.

DANCER DENIES HE WAS PAID ESCORT OF RICH WOMEN

Tells Mrs. Schoellkopf's Love for Tango.

Fascination of the tango for Mrs. C. P. Hugo Schoellkopf, beautiful young wife of a Buffalo millionaire, which is believed to have opened the way for her becoming a victim of a sensatinoal $500,000 jewel robbery, was recounted here yesterday by Walter Scott Stout. The robbery occurred on New Year's day in the New York apartment of Mrs. Schoellkopf's professional escort, Frank Barrie Carman. Additional mystery has been thrown about the affair by Mrs. Schoellkopf's efforts to frustrate prosecution of Carman.

Mr. Stout, who is dancing instructor of the Junior league, and who conducts a fashionable studio in the Fine Arts building, 410 South Michigan avenue, denied the implication of Mrs. Schoellkopf that he was a professional squire of wealthy dames. Mrs. Schoellkopf had named him as "one among many who have escorted me socially."

Met Woman in Honolulu.

"I was never her dancing escort nor the paid escort of any woman," he declared. "Three years ago I was the dancing host at the Moana hotel at Waikiki beach, Honolulu. Among the guests at the hotel were Mr. and Mrs. Schoellkopf. At that time the world was in the grip of the tango craze, which is responsible for our acquaintanceship.

"Mrs. Schoellkopf is a born dancer and had taken tango lessons. The lure of the dance appeared to have caught her as it had so many other women. But men who could dance the tango were scarce, and when I had been introduced to her we danced many times."

Couple His Guests Here.

Two years ago, Stout said, he returned to the United States, then went to Toronto, Canada, to visit his parents, but soon came to Chicago and opened his dancing studio.

"I did not see Mrs. Schoellkopf again until last February, when she and her husband passed through Chicago on their way to Mexico, where he was to inspect some mining property," Stout continued. "She called me up from the Drake and I invited both of them to my studio. They accepted and I gave Mrs. Schoellkopf several dancing lessons while they were here and also gave her a tea dance, inviting several of my students."

TRIES TO SHIELD CARMAN.

New York, Jan. 6.—Mrs. Irene Schoellkopf's professed determination to frustrate the prosecution on her actor-dancer friend, Frank "Barrie" Carman, accused of complicity with two others in robbing her of $500,000 worth of jewels, today impelled District Attorney Banton to order his staff to help the police "bring this whole matter to light."

GIVES TWICE THE HEAT
WITHOUT COAL OR WOOD.

New Burner Burns Oil in Any Stove—
Cheaper than Coal or Wood.

A wonderful new burner which works in any coal or wood stove is the proud achievement of the International Heating Company, 4552 North Broadway, Dept. 2015, St. Louis, Mo. This remarkably simple and inexpensive invention heats stove and oven in half the time and does away with all the dirt, ashes, and drudgery of using coal or wood. It gives one of the hottest and quickest fires known, controlled by a simple valve. It can be put into any stove in a few minutes. The recent big cut in the price of oil makes it a great money saver. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on 30 days' trial to any reader of this paper. They are making a special low price offer to one user in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today.—Adv.

STEFANSSON NOW HORN TOOTER FOR POLAR PARADISE

New York, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Vilhjalmur Stefansson, arctic explorer, today announced his abandonment of his career as an explorer, to devote his efforts to proving to a skeptical world that within a decade or two the North Polar ocean will be crossed by a network of commercial aviation routes and that the artic regions, hitherto known as mysterious, uninhabitable lands, will be the source of developed resources unlimited in magnitude.

"I am through with exploring," he said. "I will devote myself seriously to the abolition of the polar regions. The aura of mystery surrounding the north is a pall of ignorance. The polar regions are a state of mind."

Wants to Aid Development.

Mr. Stefansson said his decision to give up the polar explorations which have made him internationally famous was prompted by his conviction that the age of exploration of the north now was to yield to the age of commercial development. He felt, he said, that he should give up exploring while he was still young enough to develop his new career as a "propagandist" or enlightener of the north. Exploring was a young man's game, he added.

Development would be made within the next generation Mr. Stefansson asserted. The temperature 1,000 feet above the north pole in July, he said, was about the same as that 1,000 feet above France in April, and the light conditions were ideal. An Arctic route from London to Tokio, he pointed out, would be only two-thirds the length of one charted from west to east.

Fears of the Imagination.

The popular attitude toward the arctic regions, Mr. Stefansson said, was much like the medieval attitude towards the unexplored regions beyond the horizon—the terrors in both cases being largely imaginary.

"Fear alone stands in the way of the developing of a land area twice the size of the United States," he declared.

"Oil, coal and other resources are there. Climatic conditions are conquerable. People are living and flourishing in places where there are colder winters than those at the north pole. For example, the lowest temperature at the pole is about 60 degrees below zero, while 70 below has been registered in North Dakota. At Verkhoyansk in Siberia the mercury has dropped to 93 degrees below zero."

FOUR BOY AUTO THIEVES TAKEN AFTER GUN FIGHT

Stray Bullet Hits Girl in West Side Battle.

Four boys, the oldest 20 years of age, who have cruised the far west side in stolen small cars for the last month, according to the police, holding up victim after victim, were arrested late yesterday by officers of the motor division under Capt. John Naughten.

Two were captured after a running gun battle with Motorcycle Policemen William Beyer and Ben Weick, in which a 14 year old girl, an innocent bystander, was struck by a stray bullet. These two named their companions, and the other two were taken into custody late last night.

The pair captured by Officers Weick and Beyer are Otto L. Voldrich, 20, 1815 South 49th court, Cicero, and Tony Pace, 17, 2338 Austin avenue. The two who were picked up later by Lieut. Axel Jensen's squad are Salvador Pisano, 16, 1344 West Taylor street, and Frank Eula, 16, 725 South Loomis street. All are being held at the Austin station.

Girl Not Seriously Hurt.

In the battle with Voldrich and Pace, Cecelia Bunn, 14, 429 North Springfield avenue, was struck in the left ankle by a stray bullet. She was taken to St. Anne's hospital where it was said the wound was not serious.

Pace is said to have a police record and confessions have been obtained, Capt. Naughten said, which implicate at least three of the four in recent holdups which have been puzzling the police. For a month, the Austin, West North avenue, and West Chicago avenue, districts have been receiving complaints from residents who said they had been held up by three or four young Italians in a small car.

The police believe the four captured yesterday to be the ones responsible for the series, and the victims have been notified to appear to identify them.

Open Fire On Officers.

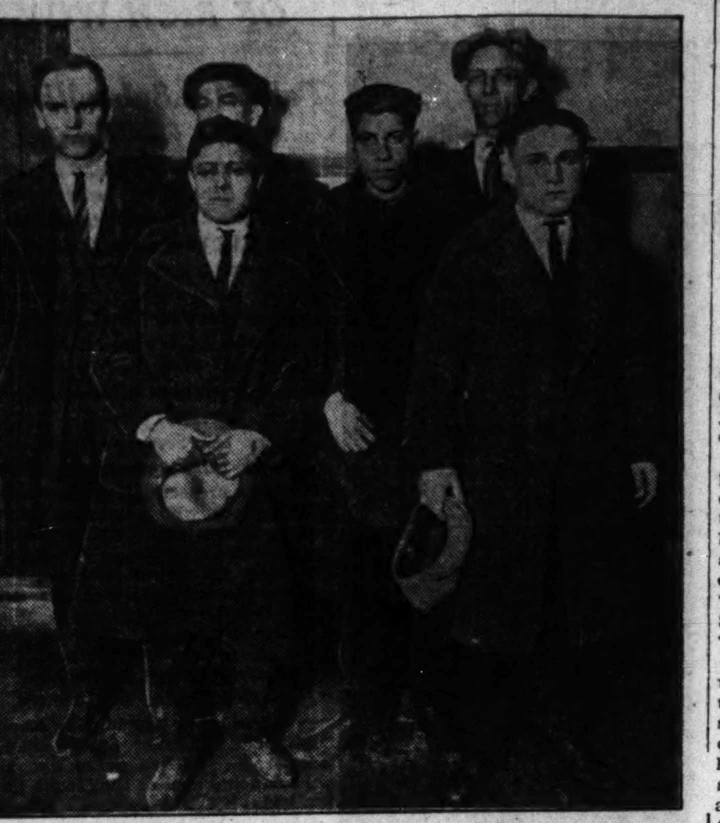
Officers Beyer and Weick first sighted the four in a light automobile at Crawford and Chicago avenues. At an order to halt the driver of the car sped south on Crawford avenue with the policemen in pursuit. At Huron street the car skidded across the sidewalk and into a shed, the four occupants jumping out and scattering. As they hit the ground, they pulled guns and started firing at the officers who had dismounted from their machines and were following closely.

Pursued by bullets from the other two, and firing as they ran, the policemen gave chase to Voldrich and Pace. Pace was finally caught by Officer Beyer in front of 625 North Hamlin avenue, while Voldrich was seized by Officer Weick at Avers avenue and Ohio street.

Bottlers' Association to Fight Bootlegging Ring

A campaign against bootleggers will be launched at the convention of the Illinois State Bottlers' association opening at the Hotel La Salle Jan. 11, according to James T. Patterson, secretary. He saws "unscrupulous persons are trying to use the organization as a blind for bootlegging."

CAPTORS AND CAPTIVES



Policemen Beyer and Weick—at the rear with caps on—and four west side youths, alleged to be thieves, rounded up after a gun battle yesterday. The band of automobile robbers, left to right, are Otto Voldrich, Salvador Pisano, Tony Pace, and Frank Eula.

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Lucius G. Ross, an instructor at Cornell university, shot himself through the heart with an army revolver last night. He had been in ill health for the last year.

N. U. TO CONDUCT WOMEN'S CLASS IN CITIZENSHIP

A citizenship school for women of Illinois, the first in the state to be opened by a university, will be conducted at Northwestern university Jan. 20 to 31, under the auspices of the Illinois League of Woman Voters.

Dr. George W. Kirchway of New York, former warden of Sing Sing, and members of the Northwestern faculty will be the principal lecturers. Subjects will include legislation and ballot instruction, public school efficiency, budgetmaking and purchasing in cities, methods of voting, and public utilities.

SEEK EASTERN MAN HERE.

Chicago police were asked yesterday to search for Martin E. Larey of New York, whose mother died recently, and who is supposed to be a newspaper man.

'VICE DIRECTORY' OF 200 PLACES TO GRAND JURY

Huge List of Addresses and Names Compiled.

Documentary evidence supporting the assertion that "Chicago is a wide open town" will be given to the grand jury when it begins its investigation of the local situation tomorrow.

The addresses of more than 200 places where prostitution is solicited openly, as well as a complete list of the names of owners and inmates, will be included in the data, it is said. In addition there will be a general outline of the inner workings of the huge "graft ring" that collected more than $1,000,000 during 1922 through selling "protection."

The evidence has been collected by trained investigators working under the leadership of Dr. Phillip Yarrow, superintendent of the Illinois vigilance committee, and Samuel P. Thrasher, head of the Committee of Fifteen, for several months. These two men have announced their intention of assisting the grand jury in its investigation.

Inquiry Costs Thousands.

"We have spent thousands of dollars getting this evidence together," Mr. Thrasher said. "It is conclusive in every respect and, to make sure that we are not wrong, we have rechecked every place as many as three times."

Mr. Yarrow appeared before Chief Justice Michael McKinley in Criminal court yesterday morning and presented a number of written reports of his investigators. He explained that he had been waiting for an opportunity to take his evidence before the grand jury. This, he said, came with the announcement several days ago that Judge McKinley was to instruct the grand jury to investigate vice conditions.

Time for Cleanup.

"I am grateful for the aid that you and others are giving me in this matter," the chief justice said. "I am convinced that the law governing vice is being violated in a most flagrant manner in many parts of the city. It is time that a general cleanup should be made.

"I am of the impression, however, that too many cooks might spoil the broth, so I am going to ask you and Mr. Thrasher to confer with Mr. Smoot, whom I have appointed to take charge of the presentation of evidence. You will work with him and turn over to him any evidence you may have."

Mr. Smoot is Attorney Harry Smoot, representing the Juvenile Protective association, who asked Judge McKinley last Tuesday to instruct the grand jury about the "cleanup."

Later in the day Mr. Thrasher went to the office of Acting State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas and expressed his desire of aiding in the investigation.

Complete List of Places.

Mr. Thrasher had in his possession a complete list of disorderly houses. He also had the names of a majority of the owners of the places, as well as the names of the inmates. He was in conference with Mr. Jonas for more than an hour and left to seek Attorney Smoot.

Mr. Jonas said later he was satisfied the investigation would bear fruit, and that before it was over there would be indictments for hundreds of men and women. During his talk with Mr. Thrasher he said that he learned of the situation from an entirely new standpoint.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR.

Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 W. Lake street, Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

PLENTY OF SPEED LAW IF ENFORCED, COUNCIL IS TOLD

Drunken Drivers Blamed for Most Fatalities.

Study of methods to cut down the annually mounting automobile death toll was begun yesterday by the city council police committee. In 1922 the figures reached 736.

After listening to remedies suggested by the police department, Judge Francis Borrelli of the Speeders' court, Royal C. Allen of the Chicago Motor club, Harry J. Bell of the Chicago safety council, and others, Chairman Thomas F. Byrne appointed a subcommittee to study all the plans presented and recommend more legislation, state or city, if needed. The subcommittee is also to devise means of better enforcement of vehicle laws.

"Ninety Per Cent Careful," He Says.

Mr. Allen declared 90 per cent of motorists are lawabiding, and he called attention to a dozen unenforced laws of the state and city which, he said, could take care of the reckless 10 per cent without any more lawmaking.

The Chicago safety council urged, first of all, that the "practice of fixing arrests and interfering with prosecutions" be abolished. It also urged that a safety text book be adopted in the public, private, and parochial schools and that chauffeurs of trucks and taxicabs be compelled to attend traffic classes.

James A. Kearns startled the aldermen with the statement that of 284,000 cases against motorists disposed of in the Municipal court since 1913 only thirteen defendants have been held to the Criminal court. In all, 1,058 persons have been sentenced to the House of Correction and 123,739 have been fined. The others were discharged or otherwise released.

Hits Drunken Drivers.

According to Sergt. Harry Goldstein, who represented the county highway police, 20 per cent of the motor accidents on the county highways are caused by intoxicated drivers.

Judge Borrelli urged the aldermen to see that physicians are provided to examine motorists arrested while intoxicated and to appear in court and testify as experts to the condition of the defendants so arrested.

"I have been on the Speeders' court bench only a week," Judge Borrelli said, "but I have decided to send to jail every driver who appears before me charged with intoxication if I have positive testimony that he was intoxicated."

Bundesen Praised for Anti-Noise Campaign

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, was referred to as "Chicago's fearless health chief" in a bulletin issued yesterday by the Industrial Research laboratories. The bulletin declares that under Bundesen's régime "a few arrests and fines have almost eliminated the unnecessary noise and that has been done because Chicago's health chief believes in doing his duty."

INSULL EXPLAINS DEAL OPPOSED BY BUNDESEN

Doctor to Be Forced Out, City Hall Report.

Samuel Insull, president of the Commonwealth Edison company, explained yesterday the anxiety of the company to gain possession of a ten acre plot at West Thirty-first street and South California avenue, by purchase from the city.

The Edison company has retained Daniel J. Schuyler, former law partner of Corporation Counsel Ettelson, in connection with its attempt to purchase the property. Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen, who has refused to recommend the sale of the land on which the Lawndale hospital stands, may be ousted for his insistence that another hospital be provided before the land is sold.

Statement by Insull.

"We need this land in connection with our development in that part of the city," Mr. Insull told a TRIBUNE reporter.

"We have large holdings adjacent to the city's property. We intend to put up a plant there costing many millions of dollars. It will have a capacity of between 600,000 and 700,000 horse power.

"Electricity is a necessity to Chicago and the development of our machinery for grinding it out must keep pace with the needs of the city. The company is willing to pay a fair price for the property. It is not asking any favors. It wants to do the fair thing both by itself and by Chicago."

It being Saturday afternoon Mr. Insull said he was unable to lay his hands on records to show the exact price the company is willing to offer the city. He said, however, that this information will be available today. There is nothing "secret" about the proposed deal, he asserted.

Bundesen Stands Pat.

Though it is asserted on good authority that his temerity in refusing to waive the health department's rights to the property is likely to cost him his job, Health Commissioner Bundesen stuck to his guns yesterday.

"As long as I am health commissioner I shall never recommend the sale of the site without another hospital in view to be used in the event of a contagious disease epidemic," the commissioner said, according to the city news bureau report.

Both Corporation Counsel Ettelson and Mr. Insull said that this point had been discussed. It was asserted that the Edison company is willing to give the city a lease on the hospital site until a new location can be found and utilized.

Need New Hospital.

Health authorities, however, declared that to safeguard the city against lack of hospital facilities in case of a smallpox epidemic a new hospital should be built before the city relinquishes title to the old one.

It was pointed out that the Lawndale hospital site was acquired twenty-six years ago; that at that time the site was "out in the country," and that to acquire a site for a "pest-house" at present anywhere between Fort Sheridan, the Desplaines river, and the Indiana state line undoubtedly would involve strenuous objections of property owners, consequent litigation, and much delay.

Deny Ax Will Fall.

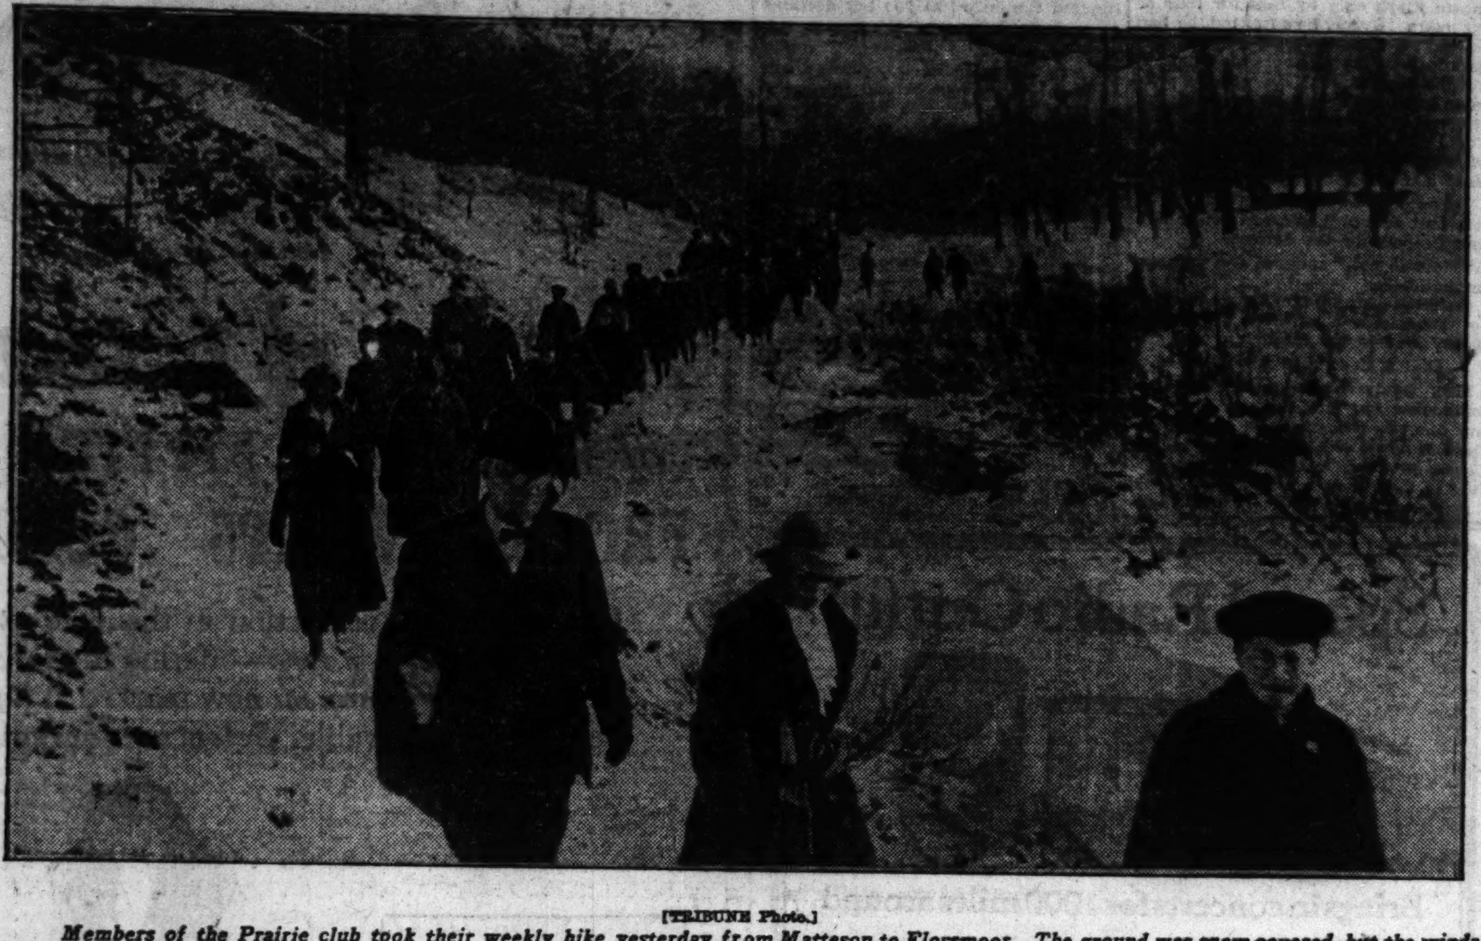
Both Mr. Ettelson and George F. Harding, city controller, who participated in the conference in Mr. Harding's office on Friday, at which Dr. Bundesen was reported to have been "drawn across the coals" for his failure to "go along with the administration" in the hospital deal and other administration matters, were emphatic in their denials yesterday that they even thought of demanding Dr. Bundesen's scalp as a price of his recalcitrancy.

"My life is an open book," Mr. Harding said. "I'm proud of my votes in the city council and in the state legislature. To connect me with any deal which has even the remotest hint of being shady is unjustifiable. If I thought anybody was trying to put the screws on Dr. Bundesen, I would be the first to fly to his assistance. I didn't even know the Commonwealth Edison company wanted the land."

Contest Over $12,000,000 Booth Estate Is Settled

New York, Jan. 6.—Contest of the will disposing of the $12,000,000 estate of the late Mrs. Angie M. Booth, widow of the founder of the Ward Steamship line, has been settled out of court, attorneys announced today.

HIKING TOWARDS LONGEVITY



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Members of the Prairie club took their weekly hike yesterday from Matteson to Flossmoor. The ground was snow covered, but the winds were mild and no one even got chilled. They walked too fast for that. Can you think of any better way to spend an afternoon than this?

BEST MEN IN THE COUNCIL OUSTED BY MAYOR: M. V. L.

Lists Able Citizens He Drove Out.

"Why does Mayor Thompson oppose, thwart, and drive out of the city council its best members?" the Municipal Voters' league asks in a report issued yesterday.

"Has any one ever heard of his fighting Ald. Kenna, Coughlin, L. B. Anderson, Johntry, Mulcahy, Madderom, Walkowiak, Devereux, Powers, Franz, Agnew, Haderlein, Caspers, Hendricks, Moran, Armitage, O'Toole, Lynch, Toman, or Kostner?" the report questions further.

Good Men Driven Out.

"No," the report answers. "Contrast these with the names of twenty other men whom the mayor has either driven out of the council, directly or indirectly, replacing them with men more to his liking, or who have refused to stand for reëlection because they found it impossible to do constructive work in a council controlled by the city hall machine. We submit on their own strength, these names—only a partial list—well known in Chicago:

"Former Aldermen John H. Passmore, James A. Kearns, Oliver L. Watson, Charles E. Merriam, Lewis D. Sitts, Willis O. Nance, A. A. McCormick, Harry E. Littler, Robert M. Buck, Earl J. Walker, Frank H. Ray, the late Nate A. Stern, John N. Kimball, John Hrubec, Edward J. Werner, Albert J. Fisher, Herman Gnadt, John R. Anderson, George Pretzel, and Hiram Vanderbilt.

"Such men in the council today would make that body respected anywhere. These men fought your battles. Many of them you deserted on election day.

"The council in 1915 was the best in Chicago's recent history. After seven years of Mayor Thompson the council is as bad as the worst.

"The league herewith presents its report on the records of aldermen from wards twenty to twenty-seven, inclusive:

TWENTIETH WARD.

"Henry L. Fick—Council veteran. Voted three times for the people and once for Faherty's experts; voted for confirming Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees, but after their indictment voted to force their resignation. Made a strong and effective fight to clean up Maxwell street market. Voting record shows some improvement.

"Matt Franz—Finishing eighth year. Voted three times against Faherty's experts; voted for confirming Davis and Severinghaus and against forcing their resignation. Voted for asking legislature to increase city's tax rate. Weak and ineffective.

TWENTY-FIRST WARD.

"Denis A. Horan—Finishing third year. Voted once against Faherty's experts; voted to force resignation of Davis and Severinghaus after their indictment; voted to investigate holdup of city employés in Riverview park picnic scandal; but voted for asking legislature to increase city's tax rate. Put on the fast weakening finance committee by the Thompson followers, in preference to council veterans of high character.

"Leonard Rutkowski—Not a candidate for reëlection.

TWENTY-SECOND WARD.

"Joseph Cepak—Finishing first term. Voted 100 per cent for the people against Faherty's experts; voted to force resignation of Davis and Severinghaus; voted to investigate Riverview park scandal; but voted for increased tax rate; introduced resolution to repeal ordinance forbidding sale of cigarets near school buildings. Made the European junket last summer. Very fair voting record, but lacks force.

"Anton J. Cermak—Elected president of Cook county board. Not a candidate for reëlection.

TWENTY-THIRD WARD.

"Joseph O. Kostner—Finishing third term. Voted 100 per cent against Faherty's experts. Voted against confirming Davis and Severinghaus and for investigating Riverview park scandal. Voted for raise in tax rate. Member of finance subcommittee on purchases for fire department. Introduced resolution for investigating Burlington building fire, but objected to extending this to purchases of fire department equipment.

"John Toman—Finishing fifth term. Has declared himself not a candidate.

TWENTY-FOURTH WARD.

"Has no alderman. Fine chance to elect an intelligent, capable representative.

TWENTY-FIFTH WARD.

"Alderman James B. Bowler—Finishing eighth term. Voted three times for the people and once for Faherty's experts. Voted to confirm Davis and Severinghaus. Voted against investigating Riverview Park scandal. Voted to ask legislature to increase city's tax rate. Member of committee which aided in settling street car strike last summer. As chairman of subcommittee on redistricting did a great deal of the work for redistricting ordinance.

"John Powers — Finishing seventeenth term. The oldest alderman. One of the leaders of the discredited element of the council. Voted once against Faherty's experts. Made the motion to confirm Davis and Severinghaus as school trustees; voted to ask legislature to raise Chicago's tax rate and voted against investigating Riverview park picnic scandal. When Ald. Wallace was thrown off the finance committee for exposing Faherty's $3,000,000 experts, Ald. Powers, a survivor from old boodle council days, was put on the committee by the mayor's men, but somewhat to their surprise has insisted that the city live within its income.

TWENTY-SIXTH WARD.

"James McNichols — Finishing fourth term. Voted twice against Faherty's experts; voted to confirm Davis and Severinghaus, but after their indictment voted to force their resignation; voted to ask legislature to raise Chicago's tax rate. Fair voting record, but lacks effectiveness.

TWENTY-SEVENTH WARD.

"John J. Touhy—Finishing third term. Voted four times against Faherty's experts; voted to confirm appointment of Davis and Severinghaus, but after their indictment voted to force their resignation; voted to ask legislature to increase tax rate, but voted for investigating Riverview park picnic scandal; has maintained a good name in the city council and fought against the worst element in his ward.

"Maurice F. Kavanagh—Elected Cook county commissioner. Not a candidate for reëlection."

Quincy Man Elected Hotel Association Head

The Illinois Hotel association at its twenty-second annual convention yesterday elected George T. Thompson, Quincy, president; E. J. Stubbins, Cairo, vice president; and David W. Clark, Lincoln, secretary treasurer. The executive committee consists of Lieut.-Col. Earl L. Thornton, Chicago, chairman; G. W. Byers, Champaign; and August F. Ratz, Alton.

PARTIES DEFER TO GET CITIZENS' VIEW ON MAYOR

BY PARKE BROWN.

As the citizens' mayoralty committee—it will have another name soon—began its real work yesterday it became apparent that both Republican and Democratic leaders are inclined to give the organization an opportunity to act before they trot out their mayoralty candidates.

The committee's representatives informally called on some of the leaders and found them willing to receive recommendations concerning the selection of candidates. It is probable that several conferences will be necessary, and for that reason action is not expected from either the anti-ring Republicans or the regular Democratic organization before the end of this week.

The next meeting of the Democratic managing committee has not been called, and it may not be held until a week from tomorrow—Jan. 15—and by that time it is expected the citizens' committee will have indicated two or more candidates whom it would be glad to support.

Await Committee's Selections.

And on the Republican side it is predicted that action will be withheld until similar recommendations have been made for consideration there.

The executive committee of the citizens' committee was enlarged to a total membership of twenty-nine, consisting of the following:

James Mullenbach,
Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank,
Miss Harriet Vittum,
E. A. Bancroft,
Clarence S. Darrow,
A. S. Peabody,
W. T. Alden,
Silas H. Strawn,
B. A. Eckhart,
George A. Schilling,
Miss Alice Thompson,
Wiley W. Mills,
Gen. Abel Davis,
F. B. Johnstone,
Miss Mary McDowell,
Miss Julia Lathrop,
Peter S. Lambros,
Dr. H. A. Johnston,
George C. Sikes,
L. E. Myers,
Felix Streyckmans,
James C. Jeffery,
J. R. Palandech,
Urban A. Lavery,
George F. Porter,
Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen,
Otto Cullman,
David Rosenheim,
Dr. Graham Taylor.

To Open Loop Office.

James Mullenbach and Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank were selected as vice chairmen, Felix Streyckmans as secretary, and George F. Porter as treasurer. Treasurer Porter was authorized to find and open headquarters in a loop office building or hotel as soon as possible.

Attorney General Brundage, former Gov. Deneen and State's Attorney Crowe, all of whom had been absent from Chicago for several days on separate missions, returned to the city, but it is not expected any get-together effort will be made for several days. Since it has become certain that Thompson is going into the Republican primary it is understood all the anti-ring leaders are becoming more anxious to unite the anti-Thompson vote. It is reported they believe the citizens' committee may show the way.

Similarly, the leaders of the Democratic organization, seeking to avoid a bitter primary fight leaving wounds that might not heal before the election, believe the expected action of the citizens' committee may help to lessen the danger of serious discord.

Offers Maine Estate as Presidents' Summer Home

Augusta, Me., Jan. 6.—Sherman Douglass of Lamoine, a member of the Maine legislature, announced today that he was willing to present his estate, known as Shore Acres, six miles from Bar Harbor, as a summer home for the President of the United States.

BURNS OIL IN ANY STOVE.

Cheaper than Coal or Wood—Gives Twice the Heat in Half the Time.

A wonderful new burner which works in any coal or wood stove is the proud achievement of the International Heating Company, 4552 North Broadway, Dept. 2001, St. Louis, Mo. This remarkably simple and inexpensive invention heats stove and oven in half the time and does away with all the dirt, ashes, and drudgery of using coal or wood. It gives one of the hottest and quickest fires known, controlled by a simple valve. It can be put into any stove in a few minutes. The recent big cut in the price of oil makes it a great money saver. The manufacturers offer to send this remarkable invention on 30 days' trial to any reader of this paper. They are making a special low price offer to one user in each locality to whom they can refer new customers. They also want agents. Write them today.—Adv.

HURLEY DEMANDS ARRESTS IN EVERY "TRIANGLE" SUIT

Free love, which he says is responsible for 75 per cent of divorces in Cook county, received a smashing blow yesterday when Judge Timothy D. Hurley asserted that he will refuse a hearing on all "triangle" divorce cases unless the complainant first obtains a warrant for arrest of the erring mate and the co-respondent on statutory grounds.

Declares War on Free Love.

The threat, which included the promise that Judge Hurley would act as examining magistrate in each case and hold the guilty couple to the grand jury if the evidence warranted, followed his denial of a decree to Mrs. Yetta Kwinn, 1601 South Turner avenue. Mrs. Kwinn had testified that Morris Kwinn, restaurateur at 907 Roosevelt road, had established himself with Miss Pearl Mayo in a "love nest" at 726 South Ashland avenue.

"Free love never will gain my sanctoin as long as I sit as chancellor of this court," said Judge Hurley. "Easy divorce regulations and meek submission of aggrieved mates has sanctioned illicit love, it seems, when one recalls that nearly 12,000 divorces were granted last year, in nearly 75 per cent of which 'other persons' appeared as the disturbing factor. What a horrible commentary on our morals and law enforcement the fact that not one of these 'love moonshiners' ever was brought face to face with the fact that they are moral murderers as well as violators of both God's and man's law!

Jail for Offenders.

"Not another illicit alliance or clandestine love affair will be condoned by issuance of a decree bearing my signature if I can find the principals within my jurisdiction, and that is the state of Illinois, in a case of this kind. At least, I will drive them out of Cook county in fear of a jail sentence if a case is properly presented to me."

FORTY-NINE IN ONE SWOOP.

The cases of forty men and nine women, arrested on Friday night in a disorderly house at 518 South State street, were continued by Judge Daniel P. Trude yesterday until Jan. 16.

The MASON & HAMLIN

FOR a piano to be endowed with rare tonal beauty is one thing—but for a piano to retain its beauty steadfastly over a long period of years is quite another. The Mason & Hamlin Piano enjoys a universal reputation for long life. It is one of those fine products of craftsmanship that passing years do not age.

Mason & Hamlin Pianos that have been in continuous service year after year bear but slight evidence of long usage. Years after the average Piano has lost its charm, the beauty of the Mason & Hamlin remains unfaded. This is due to that epoch making invention, the famous Tension Resonator, the source of the Mason & Hamlin's enduring, richly colored tone.

The first cost of the Mason & Hamlin is slightly higher than that of other pianos, but its longer natural lifetime makes it, in the end, by far the most economical investment.

We invite you to hear and play this extraordinary instrument. Mason & Hamlin Pianos are on exhibition and for sale in Chicago only at the Music Rooms of the

HUSBAND HELD ON STORY OF SON IN BERWYN DEATH

Woman's Body Exhumed; Reveals Injury.

Jeroslav Broz, a factory foreman, was arrested yesterday in connection with the death Dec. 27 of his wife, Emma, 33 years old, 6515 West 26th place, Berwyn. Her body was exhumed from the Bohemian National cemetery. Coroner's Physician E. H. Hatton said his examination revealed that she died from a fracture of the skull instead of meningitis, the cause given in her death certificate.

This evidence was supported by testimony at the inquest yesterday of Broz's son, Charles, 13 years old, that he saw his father beat his mother four days before her death. Broz denied his son's charge.

Husband Supports Inquiry.

The coroner began his investigation at the request of a man who identified himself as one of her relatives. An anonymous letter also aroused his interest. The letter asked why Mrs. Broz was buried with her gloves on and why her face was swollen. Broz was questioned and declared a willingness to go into the matter. He said he wished to free himself from suspicion.

"She hurt her head by accident," he testified at the inquest yesterday. "I was helping her into the house that Friday night when she fell and hit her face on the corner of a table. She seemed to be intoxicated."

Testimony of his son varied materially regarding this incident. The boy declared he had seen his father beating his mother with a heavy rule.

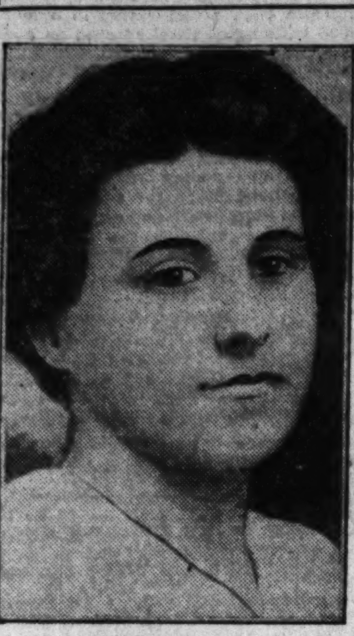
Sends Boy to Cellar.

"When they came into the house," he said, "father sent me down to the basement. Then I heard mother scream. I tried to come back up stairs but the door had been locked. I rushed outside and looked in through a window.

"Mother was on the floor crying for him to stop beating her. He was standing over her, hitting her with his fists and with a heavy rule. He was demanding to know where she had been. She fainted and he carried her to a bed."

The inquest was continued to Jan. 13 for further investigation.

KILLED



Mrs. Emma Broz, who the coroner says was killed by a skull fracture. Her husband says it might have been caused by a fall. He is under arrest.

7 SAW HERRIN PARADE OF DEATH, BUT NOT ACCUSED

Allbi Witnesses Saw No Weapons, They Testify.

BY WALTER RODERICK.

Marion, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Seven more alibi witnesses took the stand in Judge Hartwell's court today and testified that not one of the five defendants on trial was among the crowd which marched six guards from the Lester strip mine through the streets of Herrin on the morning of June 22 last, bound their necks together with a rope, and shot them down in the Herrin cemetery.

While the stories of the witnesses differed on such points as the size of the crowd, whether or not it contained women and children, and whether there were five or six prisoners ahead of the procession when they saw it, they all agreed as to the absence of the defendants from the mob. All of the twenty alibi witnesses who have testified thus far have pictured the procession as a rather orderly parade composed of three distinct parts.

Victims Marched Ahead.

First came the six hatless and coatless victims, marching two abreast. Behind them came the captors who had them in charge, variously estimated at from ten to twenty in number. At a distance of several feet behind these came the crowd, numbering anywhere from 100 to 800 men, women, and children.

All of the witnesses have testified that not one of the five defendants, Otis Clark, Bert Grace, Peter Hiller, Leva Mann, and Joe Carnaghi, was in the group of captors. All have positively denied that Leva Mann, Joe Carnaghi, or Percy Hall, who is under indictment but not on trial, was marching ahead of the mob brandishing guns and clearing the way for the procession, as testified to by state witnesses.

Tandy White, a miner who said he had known all of the defendants for at least four years and some as long as thirteen years, was the first witness today. He testified he was south of the school house on 13th street in Herrin between 8:30 and 9 o'clock in the morning when the procession passed by, and he was sure he did not see any of the defendants. He said he saw six prisoners.

Harold M. Crain, a former miner, who admitted he had been making a living by selling industrial insurance among the miners, said he had known Hiller and Carnaghi all his life, had gone to school and played ball with them. He knew Mann too, but had known Clark only by face for four or five years. Grace, he admitted, he had not known until the trial started. He placed the time of the procession at 8:15 in the morning. He said the prisoners were followed by a group of "twelve or seventeen men" and that 8 or 10 feet behind these came some 200 persons. A group of children was sandwiched in between.

"Was any of these defendants in that first group?" asked Attorney William Seeber, for the defense.

"He was not," snapped the witness, emphatically.

On cross-examination Crain testified he 'never saw a revolver or firearm of any kind in the crowd.'

Didn't Recognize Any One.

Mrs. Tandy White knew all of the defendants but saw none of them or any one she recognized in the crowd. She had never seen Otis Clark wearing glasses previous to the trial, she said. Similar testimony was given by Felix Guthne, a miner, and Blaney Stetsman. Guthne admitted he saw "a little blood" on one of the prisoners' face. He characterized the crowd as "all strangers."

Henry Basinger, another miner, estimated the crowd at 200 but declared he saw no women or boys in it, nor did he see any weapons. Harry Roberts, miner, testified the crowd was at least fifteen feet behind the small party of "strangers" who had the prisoners in charge.

For the first time since the Herrin massacre coal was being shipped today from the Lester strip mine, which has passed from the ownership of W. J. Lester to Robert H. Sherwood, an Indiana operator, and is now being operated by the Caloric Coal company.

UNWED MOTHER SCORNS LEGAL TITLE OF WIFE

And She Has Sneers for World's 'Good Women.'

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Hell hath no fury like that of a legally "good woman" scorning the unmarried mother who has stolen her husband.

Mrs. John S. Curtin, acting on this feminine principle, swore out a warrant for the arrest of the "other woman," Miss Kathleen Morrell, 5524 Wentworth avenue. Miss Morrell is the unwed mother of six of Curtin's children. She was released from the county jail last night on $1,000 bonds. Her case will be heard in the Court of Domestic Relations on Jan. 16.

Mrs. Curtin is the wife of the former president of the New Era Coal company. She is the mother of one of Curtin's six children.

Sneers at "Good Women."

"I suppose the good women in this town will call me another Mrs. Tiernan and damn me with abuse," Miss Morrell remarked after her release from jail. And her mouth, wistful in repose, twisted into a sneer as she said "good women."

Later Miss Morrell, a quiet, plain woman attired in an almost shabby dark blue dress and coat, dissected her own case.

"If they'd read my story in a magazine or had seen it in the movies they would call it a tale of perfect love," she said. "But because I am a real person, they call me a 'love pirate.'

"In books a woman gets at least an even break. In real life she always gets the bad break, especially if there is a 'good woman' connected with her case.

In Love at 19.

"Mr. Curtin won my love when I was 19 years old," Miss Morrell continued. "At first I didn't know that he was married. He was good looking, liked me, and I loved him. When I learned that he was married and had a 10 year old son, it was too late for me to stop loving him. Love is love. Many wives don't know what love is. I do. And I'm not a legal wife."

As Miss Morrell outlined her life, she was calmest when reiterating, as she frequently did, her love for Curtin. She said she wants to marry him whenever "that woman divorces him." Miss Morrell was vehement only when speaking of the way people are likely to regard her.

"Love pirate! That sounds as if I had fine clothes, went cabareting, enjoyed booze parties, and had jewels showered upon me. How different my life has been!

"When you have five children you haven't much time to go out.

"Spoiled the Children."

"No, Mr. Curtin and I led a very simple life. He would come 'home' (and she lingered on the word) about every two weeks and spend the weekend. I always told the children their father was a traveling man.

"I'm afraid we spoiled the children. I never wanted to threaten to 'tell their father,' and when he did come he always brought them presents. Why, even on Friday, when I was arrested, he had gone out to buy shoes for them."

SCORNS "GOOD WOMEN"

MISS KATHLEEN MORRELL.

Miss Morrell looked with pensive scorn on the slightly tarnished gold band on the third finger of her left hand as she referred again to Mrs. Tiernan and the Tiernan-Poulin paternity case as she said: "Women thought they made themselves out a little better by trying to make it harder for Mrs. Tiernan. Now, I suppose, they will try to be good by calling me bad. It's funny, isn't it?"

She Craved a "Scene."

As she scorns Mrs. Curtin for being "just like a woman" she mourns that Mr. Curtin's wife didn't stage a "scene."

"I'd rather she had pulled my hair and scratched my eyes and had a showdown than all this disgraceful affair," Miss Morrell insisted. "Then she could have let Mr. Curtin choose between the two of us." For the first time, a look of complacent triumph came over her face as she dreamed of the choice the man would have made.

Miss Morrell's first thought, on being released from the jail, was of the welfare of her five children, Kathleen, Jeanette, Stanley, Alice, and Rose, now in custody at the Juvenile Detention home. And as she fights with woman's primitive instinct to protect and keep with her the children she loves and which are hers, she scorns the other woman, who has fought with a woman's primitive claim to keep the man she wants and who belongs legally to her.

SANITY TEST FOR PERSISTENCE.

Alleged to have annoyed Miss Ethel Abbott, 36 years old, cashier of the Hotel La Salle, for the last two years, Edward Ryan, 40 years old, 521 South State street was sent to the psychopathic hospital for examination yesterday by Judge Joseph Schulman.

KIMBARK BANK CLOSED; $140,000 DEPOSITS TIED UP

Kimbark State bank, 10758 South Michigan avenue, with deposits totaling about $140,000, yesterday closed its doors on orders of H. S. Savage, state bank examiner for Cook county, pending examination of its financial standing.

Assistant Examiner Ralph Fairbairn was placed in charge of the bank's accounts and an audit is expected to be completed by tomorrow, when the bank will be placed in the hands of a receiver.

"Weak investments" was given as the cause of the institution's difficulties by Mr. Savage.

The bank is capitalized at $100,000. Its total liabilities were stated to run to about $150,000. It was not a member of the Chicago Clearing House association. While the concern deposited with the Continental and Commercial National bank, it did not clear through that institution.

Sees Cheap Electric Power Within Reach of Chicago

"Electricity could be had in Chicago for 1 cent per kilowatt hour, or about one-ninth of what we are now paying, if we had a huge plant under public ownership located on one of our great waterways or at one of our great mines," declared Carl D. Thompson, secretary of the Public Ownership League of America, yesterday in his address to the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel Morrison on "How to Electrify America." "Public ownership is desired because the state has adequate power, financial resources, legal power, and coördinating ability to develop such a system on a large scale," he contined.

WAITS ALONE 40 HOURS TO BATTLE 2 DESPERADOES

Two escaped convicts have vowed they will not be taken alive. You are a policeman. You know their hiding place. Would you choose duty and better than an even chance of death to lie in wait for the criminals for forty hours—alone?

Sergt. Hugh McCarthy of the detective bureau chose to take the chances involved. Rather than risk the chances that the two men, one a murderer and both robbers and well armed, would be tipped off by the presence of a squad of policemen, McCarthy kept the long vigil alone.

His was not the bravery which often develops through fear on the spur of a moment and often melts into indecision or weakness on reflection. It was the studied rocklike courage which enables a man to face death for forty hours in a darkened room alone without calling for help.

Kills One, Wounds Other.

The criminals finally arrived. McCarthy engaged them in a hand to hand struggle. Confronted by the pistol of one of them, he shot him through the shoulder. In the struggle with the second, the policeman shot and killed him.

Both for his courage to wait for two score of hours with the possibility of death in every footstep in the hall outside the bandit's room at 1103 West Adams street and for his bravery in the struggle with the bandits when they did arrive, THE TRIBUNE has awarded Sergt. McCarthy its $100 hero prize for the month of December, a month replete with acts of heroism.

After learning that Jacob Spock, later identified as the man who killed Walter Jarosz in his butcher shop at 4217 West Division street on Dec. 23, and Richard R. Preston, who escaped with Spock from the honor farm at Vandalia, Ill., were hiding with a third man, an ex-convict, at the Adams street address, McCarthy visited their room and there arrested Winifred Knight, whom Spock and Preston had taken with them the night they fled from the honor farm.

Goes to Long Vigil.

The girl was taken to the detective bureau and McCarthy went back to his long vigil.

The girl was arrested on Dec. 28. About 11 o'clock on the morning of Dec. 30 Spock and Preston came to the room. Spock looked in, saw McCarthy, and attempted to close the door. McCarthy stuck his arm through the aperature and prevented Spock from closing it. McCarthy finally forced his way into the hallway. The official report of Chief of Detectives Hughes on the battle which followed reads:

"Preston slammed the door and pulled his revolver. Spock rushed at McCarthy as Preston pointed his gun at the sergeant. McCarthy thereupon shot Spock, who was grappling with him. Holding Spock in front of him, he shot Preston in the right shoulder, causing him to drop his revolver. Spock was mortally wounded and died almost instantly.

"I consider this act of bravery on the part of Sergt. McCarthy of the very highest order, as he was in a hand-to-hand struggle with two desperate armed escaped convicts, one of whom was a man who had committed murder. McCarthy was dependent on his own courage, ability, and resourcefulness, and acquitted himself with honor to himself and the department, and I recommend his name for THE TRIBUNE bravery award with the greatest pleasure."

Spock and Preston were identified as participants in fifteen robberies and six larcenies.

Many Heroic Acts in Month.

Others who pressed McCarthy closely for THE TRIBUNE prize and who are given honorable mention for their brave acts during December are:

Sergt. Charles J. Eitz, Chicago avenue station—For his rescue of occupants of a burning building at Clark and Ontario streets at 12:15 a. m., Dec. 30. The building contained about fifty people and Eitz had it cleared of occupants by the time the firemen arrived.

Patrolman Simeon R. Kennedy, Warren avenue station — For mortally wounding John Reese a few seconds after he had shot and killed Patrolman William J. O'Malley at Van Buren and Paulina streets at 1 a. m. on Dec. 30.

Patrolman Leo W. O'Neill, Cottage Grove station—For capturing a colored holdup man, who had shot O'Neill in the left shoulder. The patrolman grappled with the holdup man and disarmed him. The bandit had robbed Edward Bracken, 3142 La Salle street, of $45 a few minutes before.

Patrolman Edwin T. Strandberg, Town Hall station—For his rescue of Charles McGranahan, 6 years old, from a burning building at 872 Buckingham place at 2 p. m., Dec. 22. Strandberg broke a basement window and found the boy unconscious on the bottom step of the basement stairs.

Probationary Patrolman Joseph F. Karch, Cottage Grove station—For his capture of three men who held up a soft drink parlor at 2973 Wentworth avenue at 5:10 a. m. on Christmas day. Karch wounded two of the bandits in a battle in an alley.

Patrolman John J. Gaynor, South Chicago station—For his capture of Anthony Smigier, 8821 Houston avenue, alleged holdup man, on Dec. 1. Smigier stuck a gun in the patrolman's stomach. Gaynor, who was in citizens clothes, drew his pistol and knocked Smigier's weapon from his hand.

WOMEN URGED TO PAY MORE HEED TO LABOR LAWS

Women should watch the details of legislative bills with the same care that they use when watching domestic details of cooking, sweeping and dusting, Miss Laura Miller, national W. C. T. U. director of "Women in Industry," told delegates to the Mississippi valley industrial conference at its closing session yesterday at the City club.

"Women," said Miss Miller, "are supposed to be good at watching detail, yet action of the women on industrial laws in many Mississippi valley states suggests that women were not 100 per cent on the job when women's laws were worded.

"There is no more reason why leading women of any state should bring forth crippled, foundling laws than they should bear crippled, doorstep children. The Smith-Hughes act in Illinois had all enforcement teeth taken out of it in the 1921 legislature, and not one of the women voters seems to have paid any attention."

Urging a constitutional amendment regarding child labor, Mrs. Florence Kelley, general secretary of the National Consumers' league, under whose auspices the conference was held, declared that "children have no votes, no organizations, no wisdom drawn from experience of life," but that any legislation for them would be "for the good of all the people."

WOUNDS PROVE FATAL.

Wounds received on Dec. 31, when he was shot by an unidentified assailant, proved fatal to A. C. McCume, colored, 23 years old, in Bridewell hospital yesterday. He was owner of a lunch car at 31st street and Vernon avenue.

By GEO. H. CAPPER
Vice-President Capper & Capper

BACK AND FORTH swings the great pendulum in the Clock of Life—ticking off the seconds, and the minutes, and the hours for a universe of mortals, and each oscillation brings us nearer to the goal we seek—the inauguration of our new merchandising plan, made possible only by the "union of two mighty forces."

We deprecate the use of superlatives in advertising, but how else, pray, is one to faithfully describe the terrific onslaught made upon our clothing stocks within the past few days? Tremendous, magnificent—and the half has not been told.

Let the good work go on, friends; come tomorrow, keep coming and buying until not a garment remains—and then, a new merchandising plan will be flashed upon the screen of commerce, through the operation of which every clothing buyer in America will either directly or indirectly benefit—a plan requiring vision to conceive, and courage to put into effect.

To "speed up" the inauguration of our "new plan" our entire stock of Fine Suits and Overcoats
is offered at these radical reductions:

All $45 Suits & O'Coats now $32.50

RUSSIA AND EUROPE.

One of the most portentous facts today is the revival of the real Russia. The real Russia is not represented by Lenin as doctrinaire any more than it was represented by the Romanoff family and the bureaucracy which maintained them. Lenin's doctrine of communism, of the dictatorship of the proletariat, is the concoction of Karl Marx, a German theorist. The jargon of the minority which controls Russia is all borrowed, imported, just as the language, the ideas, the manners, and the blood of the czardom were imported.

But Mother Russia is mightier than her invaders, whether the repulsed Bonaparte or the apparently victorious Marx, whether invaders of the sword or of the idea. Always beneath the superimposed structure of imported forms or ideas run the fathomless forces of the Russian soul, seeking unceasingly, pursuing remorselessly its racial destiny.

Under the czars with their Teutonic and Scandinavian blood, their ideas of government and administration made in Germany, their manners and culture imported from France, their foreign policies modeled on that of western Europe, Russia seemed to have been carried westward into the European system. But Russia under its showy incrustation of European culture remained in its unplumbed depths Asiatic. Its show of administration was German in form, yet Russian in spirit and result. The life of its court and higher aristocracy were like a Louis Quinze drawing room in a feudal keep. It was drapery. It was the foliage of a parasitic growth. Beneath and all about flowed always the overwhelming if silent flood of Russian life.

Imported dynastic affiliation and entanglements played their part in Russian history, but the artificiality, the forced and factitious character of these incidents, momentous as they often were in the fortunes of the Russian people, was well and perhaps finally illustrated in the French alliance and the entrance of Russia into the war against German militarism.

Yet there was a core of truly Russian interest and tendency even in this alliance, because German and Austrian ambition, ever growing in power, had placed itself in the path of the Russian hope of access to the Mediterranean.

That was under the régime of capitalist imperialism, as Lenin would put it. But observe the movements of Russian policy under the dictatorship of the proletariat and communist internationalism. Moscow has tried to mix in the squabble with Kemal over the control of the straits. There now appears the scheme for the absorption under a federal scheme, which, we predict confidently, will be centralized more completely than our own national state, of the independent republics of the Caucasus, which Russian bolshevism has invaded and mastered. And along the borders of India rises again Adam-Zad, the Bear. Let the new states along the Baltic take heed of this. Their turn will surely come.

Watch Russian foreign policy if you wish to know what Russia means and do not be deceived by the phrases of statesmen. Whether they are the forms of the old diplomacy which dressed itself in the lace and small sword of western tradition or the jargon of the communist internationale, they are the voice of immemorial Russia. Trotzky talks of a power which will punish the hateful bourgeoisie of America when the proletarian revolution directed from Moscow has swept Europe. The phrases are Marxian, the threat is Russia, is Asia, the growl of Adam-Zad. The cant of the doctrinaire should not deceive Europe or America. Through the woods and plains of the north, along the shores and over the mountains to the southern seas, across the passes which centuries ago echoed with the hoof beat of Genghis' wild riders, into the terraced lands of pacifist China, the real Russia marches in spirit and will march if it can in body.

A committee, dominated by one man or at most a handful of men, rules the Russian millions. It is a despotism like its predecessors in Russia. Asia does not give birth to free governments. It is the home of autocracies and the Russian people are Asiatics in this. The czarist tyranny grew senile and power was seized by a new master and his court. The change was in pretense and name. The immemorial habit of submission remained, only the master was new. Russia can be used as a weapon by her master of today or tomorrow, provided he obeys the voice of Russia's profound instinct. Russia is a menace to western civilization because her people are Asiatic in soul, because they accept any master, and because in spite of their acceptance the impulse of expansion, whether by glacial advance or ponderous assault, will penetrate and dominate his policy.

The time may come when American doughboys go over the top with the Tommies and Frogs and Boches of yesteryear to throw back another flood of Asia as Europeans did at Marathon and Tours and Vienna.

Rivalries and rancors have brought occidental civilization low. If the spirit of peace and common restoration cannot appear soon in Europe the dream of Asiatic domination will, perhaps, come true. The proletarian revolution which Trotzky prophesies for us all came to Russia, but Russia remains Russia, remains Asia. The phrases of her new despot are foreign; the voice, the soul, the dream is immemorial Asia. Let Europe and America realize that.

JUKES AND EDWARDS.

Arguing in favor of a law to provide for the sterilization of recognized imbeciles, degenerates, epileptics and similar incurables to prevent the propagation of their kind, Health Commissioner Bundesen cites the notorious Juke family. The recital is worthy of repetition. The original report on this family, made in 1877, says:

"From one lazy vagabond named 'Juke,' born in rural New York in 1720, whose sons married five degenerate sisters, six generations numbering about 1,200 persons of every grade of idleness, viciousness, lewdness, pauperism, disease, idiocy, insanity, and criminality were traced. Of the total seven generations, 300 died in infancy; 310 were professional paupers, kept in almshouses a total of 2,300 years; 440 were physically wrecked by their own 'diseased wickedness'; more than half the women fell into prostitution; 130 were convicted criminals; 60 were thieves; 7 were murderers; only 20 learned a trade, 10 of these in state prison, and all at a state cost of over $1,250,000."

By 1915, when a second investigation was made, the record showed 2,820 descendants, half of whom were alive. The same proportion of feeble-mindedness, indolence, immorality and crime had been scattered in various parts of the country, far enough from the original source to refute any argument that environment was responsible. By that date the cost to the state had risen to $2,500,000.

In contrast we have the famous family of Jonathan Edwards. He was a normal man of the best Puritan strain. In 1900 his descendants numbered 1,394, of whom 1,295 were college graduates, 13 college presidents, 65 college professors, 60 physicians, 100 and more clergymen or theological professors, 75 army and navy officers, 60 prominent writers by whom 135 important books were published and 18 important periodicals edited, and 100 lawyers. Eighty held public office, of whom one was vice president of the United States; three were United States senators, several were governors, and more members of congress. One was president of the Pacific Mail Steamship company. Fifteen railroads, many banks, insurance companies, and large industrial enterprises have profited from their management. There is no record that any one of the family was ever convicted of crime.

Compare the Jukes and the Edwardses. When that is done the burden of proof must be upon those who oppose Dr. Bundesen's proposal for a sterilization law, not upon those who favor it.

AMERICAN PATIENCE WITH EUROPE.

Secretary Hughes in his speech at New Haven before the American Historical society referred to the fact that the United States had not been paid for the expenses of the army on the Rhine. The army was kept there, and part of it unfortunately still is there, because the allies and the Germans wanted it there.

The payment of the forces of occupation was made a first charge upon money paid over by Germany. The maintenance of the other armies on the Rhine has been met by money paid over by Germany, but the United States has not been paid.

Europe asks the United States for coöperation, but Americans feel that they are not treated fairly when they do coöperate. They cannot help feeling that wherever America enters European affairs it will be imposed upon and will be unable to protect itself. That is the basis for a great deal of the American desire for complete isolation.

From the entrance of America into the war to the present the United States has been the giver without asking for a material return and the concord which ought to exist is hurt by the conclusions the American is forced to draw from what he knows of acts in Europe.

America resents being called the Shylock of nations because it does not cancel obligations, some of which were contracted after the armistice. It resents being treated now with disparagement and then with duplicity.

Americans do not like to be chided and berated for alleged breaking of nonexistent moral obligations by nations which do not deal faithfully with plain contractual obligations.

American disillusionment undoubtedly has been damaging to the well being of the world, but the responsibility is upon the people who changed an enthusiastically credulous country into a skeptical one. The Versailles treaty destroyed American hope in an altered Europe and subsequent events dispelled the idea that the United States would be given any fair or generous consideration in Europe.

In so small a particular as the American request that in one small island of the Pacific, where Japan gathered in so many, the United States be given a preference there was rebuff and disappointment.

America found that when wars of aggression followed the peace the United States was expected to organize relief, to harbor refugees, to give its money, and even to break down its safe immigration laws to remedy the damages done by intrigue. With all its patience, it finds its only compensation is in being called a slacker.

The effect of this management of affairs upon the American temperament has been to create opinion and sentiment hostile to coöperation with powers which the American thinks he cannot trust for fair dealing.

Something would be done to improve that situation if the nations which say they need American coöperation would give evidence of asking for it in a fair spirit. They cannot continue to establish distrust in the American mind and hope for much from American leadership.

SALUBRIOUS LOS ANGELES.

Two or three Chicagoans who do not fully appreciate the advantages offered them by life in sunny California, particularly in Los Angeles, a suburb of Hollywood, have favored us with clippings from Los Angeles newspapers dealing with the horrors of Chicago, or any eastern climate, at this time of year.

We hadn't noticed it so painfully ourselves, but we are not so sensitive to climate as those who have become accustomed to the atmospheric and verbal inspiration of southern California's warm airs. Here we work for a living. It is old fashioned, and perhaps even crude. There is nothing esthetic about an ear muff, or even a steam radiator or a revolving door. But they have their uses, and we struggle along. If we are good citizens we may go to Los Angeles when we die, or perhaps even a little before we die.

Some of our good people have gone there already and roughly imposed steam heating systems and revolving doors in Los Angeles hotels. But that is because they have been depraved by eastern rigors and are unable to appreciate a perfectly salubrious climate. It is not for the native sons and daughters of the golden west. No native would tolerate it. They merely tolerate the money of those who require such devices.

In their pristine glory they prefer even to bathe in the running brooks or the sparkling sea rather than in a porcelain tub. We remember one sunny day standing guard while a native son laved himself in a limpid pool of Pasadena's water supply in the Arroyo Seco. He came out glowing with health and stone bruises.

And still we struggle along in Chicago. It can be proof of nothing so much as sheer tenacity of life. Of course, we may be older than Los Angeles—the encyclopedias indicate four years—but we must admit Los Angeles is doing wonderfully well. They've put up $120,000,000 worth of new buildings there this year, against only $221,000,000 in Chicago.

If we keep on perhaps, in time, we will overcome our climate. We'll still be at a disadvantage. We can never live on it.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Man carries his horizons within sight. The axis of the world is where he stands. Life is a walled garden. Cabbage worms may be more serious than a war of nations if the one are on your cabbages and the other far outside the wall. Man must be a colossus on a mustard seed if spiritually he is to put Sirius in its place on a January night and the pyramids in their place and if he is to remain humanly solvent in his.

The red winter sun is at the edge of the Wrigley building and the horizon is a terraced wall. It is at the edge of the Skokie, and the horizon is a gray mist. You see an object of definite shape over 90,000,000 miles away—the greatest vision of definite shape given human eyes—but the sun, for a moment, is a red electric globe fastened to the Wrigley structure and dead Cæsars are less than fallen poppy petals.

Man measures his time in terms less than his own, in terms of recurrence and not of progress. The meadow lark coming back in March is you new in every March. This January ticket from which the days already are being clipped is the ticket of last January, and the destiny of the year is found in the record of the year just gone.

By traveling a known path with familiar objects within close horizons, walls which exclude the past and deny the future, man preserves his permanence and is greater than what he sees.

A SOCIALIST RECANTS.

The former editor of the Appeal to Reason, a leading Socialist organ for many years which has just passed away, makes the following significant confession of faith:

"I do not believe humanity can be helped by institutional reforms. I am an individualist, not a communist or a collectivist. I believe the improvement of man lies in the man, in the individual and not in the mass."

Thus Mr. Haldeman-Julius, the editor in question, becomes a real radical. For he has reached at last the root of the matter. We do not agree with him quite, for we think humanity, or perhaps we ought to say human beings, may be helped by institutional reforms. Not to the degree that self-styled radicals think they can be helped but in some degree. Reforms at best are never clear gains but are purchased at sacrifice of merits or advantages in the institutions or methods they replace or alter. They are often a step back instead of a step forward and always raise evils in offset to whatever betterment they achieve.

But all this is inherent in human progress. Reform is an optimistic term for that process of perpetual readjustment which life imposes. We may doubt the reality of progress through institutional reforms but not the persistence of change and the necessity of constant readjustment. To this process those who look below the surface of appearances may be disposed to apply the familiar comment of the French peasant who was shown a chameleon, "The more it changes, the more it is the same thing." For the bulk of alleged reforms and their effect upon essential things this is true. But if we take a perspective long enough—in fact, a view of the whole known course of conscious life on the globe—it is possible to discern a movement we can confidently call progress, and if institutional changes are not causes they are at any rate effects of this movement and sometimes have significance as evidence of it.

But an observer of life who takes a comprehensive view learns as he goes along that large schemes of reform, calling themselves radical but directed at rearrangements in the mechanism of society, are certain to disappoint, and he will turn more and more to study the individual and away from projects for improvement in the mass. He will see through schemes of reorganization of society such as doctrinaires offer, and realize that human society and its institutions are an evolution of experience, not an invention of theorists. The reformer who draws his blue print of social organization has his uses, for he stimulates thought, and that is essential to the progress of the individual. But his blue print will not work as he thinks it will.

STRAIGHT THINKING NEEDED.

[Orange Judd Farmer.]

Orange Judd Farmer ventures to offer a word to some of those enthusiastic souls, including some members of the farm bloc at Washington, who expect to ride into office, salary, and political power by hitching the farmer and union labor into the same team. It just can't be done until the farmer has lost every particle of his brains, and with all of his losses he has not yet lost his common sense. If we are going to have a government devoted to the interest of special classes the farmer and union labor will not pull together, because what one wants is exactly the opposite of what the other seeks through political power.

Union labor wants high wages and low priced food, and any legislation or political administration intended to gratify those wants necessarily means low prices for farm products and high prices for what the farmer has to buy. The very basis of the farmer's trouble today is that industrial labor is getting high wages and cheap food at the expense of the farmer. Begin to put up the price of farm products, bread and meat, and see how soon Mr. Gompers and his followers will rise in protest.

It is only two short years since Mr. Gompers and labor unions intimidated weakkneed national, state, and municipal governments into official campaigns to reduce the cost of living, and after they were successful in deflating the farmers' income they bullied the same timorous officialdom into fighting against any effort to correspondingly deflate labor. The direct interests of the farmer and union labor are not only clearly antagonistic, but the whole theory of the labor movement as it is being worked out by the present labor leaders is hostile to agriculture.

SO HE WON'T.

"Did you ever stop to think, Henry," asked his wife, "how much money you could save if you stopped smoking?"

"Yes, my dear," replied Henry, "and I've often shuddered to think what you would do to that money if I should save it."—New York Sun.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

FIGHTING VENEREAL DISEASE.

THE material for this story I picked up from a representative of the Chicago health department the other morning. Health Commissioner Bundesen has been investigating the Chicago venereal disease situation for several weeks and these are some of the facts as determined by his investigators.

This department has been interested in venereal disease control for a good many years. They began helping with the morals campaign, educational and moral prophylaxis more than a decade ago. They helped with the vice commissioner and morals commissioner, they placarded venereal disease and they operated a dispensary in those early days long before the war. They have been carrying on. Dr. Bundesen wants to go further. Like any good business man, he begins by taking stock.

This representative finds that syphilis and gonorrhea are decreasing markedly.

Druggists interviewed tell him they do not sell more than one-fifth as much gonorrhea and syphilis medicine as they formerly did. They say counter prescribing for these diseases is much less than it was.

Contacts and conversations with and the reports from the advertising doctors indicate that their business is but a fraction of what it was in the old days.

An interesting situation is revealed by the reports of venereal disease at the health department.

The law requires that every case of venereal disease shall be reported at the health department. As is frequently the case, this law is being gradually enforced. Very few private physicians are reported. The department has been disposed to be lenient with them. They say if they reported, their patients would quit them, and those whose business is principally with syphilis and gonorrhea would be put out of business.

On the other hand, the clinics are reporting all of their cases.

It is generally understood that the proportion of venereal disease cases going to private practitioners is falling off materially.

This would indicate that all the groups which fail to report are losing, while clinics, the group which reports all cases, are gaining. There is more than one reason for this, but allowing for all of these, it seems clear that reporting as it is done, is not objected to by any considerable part of the patients.

The one group who are proceeded against legally in any number, are infected prostitutes. They are sent to the Lawndale hospital and held there. Nevertheless, the evidence shows that infected prostitutes are going to the clinics in larger proportions than ever before.

ARGUES FOR CONSANGUINITY.

M. B. H. writes: "The recent statements of E. D. L. are startling, and, while I would not advise cousins to marry, I would like to cite some examples on the other side. I had three aunts who married three brothers, their first cousins. Each couple had several children who were normal, both physically and mentally; some of them especially bright.

"I also know a family whose parents were uncle and niece, and the four children are normal in every way.

"On the other hand, I knew a family of six children whose parents were not related at all. Three of them were normal, but one of the others was deaf and dumb, another deaf, and a third had a clubfoot. So, defective children are by no means confined to families whose parents are cousins."

KNEE JOINTS CRACK.

S. S. writes: "Will you please tell me the cause and remedy for a 'cracking noise' produced by raising or lowering either leg, when in a lying position only? The noise is in the knee joints. This condition has existed for about two years, with no apparent ill effects, but is a source of annoyance upon retiring."

REPLY.

In all probability you will feel the same grating if you will hold the knee in your hands whatever position you are in. But that is a detail. Somewhere in your body there is a focus of infection. This has caused, and is causing, a mild, chronic inflammation of the lining of your knee joints.

This inflammation will never amount to a lot. As you get older you will slowly get stiffer. In your old age you may be considerably stiffened and somewhat crippled. In the immediate future, creaky joints is about the limit of the harm it will do you. Perhaps you can find the source of infection and have it removed. You may find it desirable to spend some time daily in exercises which keep the joints supple—bending exercises. Baking and massage help somewhat.

BOOSTER FOR DIET.

L. I. D. writes: "I am a woman over 50. Several years ago I was troubled with rheumatism in my right arm. Having my teeth and tonsils inspected and finding them all right, I tried ignoring the pain for nearly a year. Then I went to one doctor, who gave me some tablets and said 'Exercise.' Next I went to another doctor and he said 'Absolute rest.' Being a business woman, as well as a mother and housekeeper, I couldn't do that. The third doctor said he could give me aspirin, but couldn't cure me.

"Finally, I went to a young doctor and asked for a complete physical examination and blood test. Everything was perfect till he got down to diet. Then he found I was eating white bread and potatoes twice a day. Under his orders I cut out both, ate bran bread and no potatoes, and in less than four months my rheumatism was entirely gone. I can run upstairs or for several blocks and feel no shortage of breath.

"I'd be glad if this could help others. I tried buttermilk, which I dearly love, but gained three pounds in ten days, so had to quit. It takes moral courage and will power to diet, but what is so valuable as perfect health?"

NIGHTCAP OR COTTON.

J. D. B. writes: "Do you know of any invention which, put in or over the ears, will be a nonconductor or deadener of sound? Such a device would be a blessing to the sleepless, sick and nervous in the multiplicity of noises in the modern world."

REPLY.

Some persons put plugs of cotton in the ears.

The old fashioned nightcap helped to keep out the noises.

I expect you can improvise something that will help you.

WHEN FLAT AGENT DOES NOT SUBSTANTIATE A GUARANTEE.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—To the Friend of the People.—I rented a flat, the agent guaranteeing there were no bugs, vermin, nor roaches in the flat—I have two witnesses to this guarantee. But after I took possession of the flat I found there were plenty of roaches, etc., so I vacated the flat and broke the lease. However, the flat was rented within three days after I moved out. The landlord is now trying to collect rent. What should I do about it? G. W.

You are entitled to rent payments made by the new tenant. Hence it seems probable that you are not liable for any substantial amount. If he sues we would suggest that you employ an attorney.

SON OWES MONEY TO PARENT.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My son owes me a bill of $200. He refuses to pay me. He owns a car, and I want to know if I can hold the car until he pays me the money he owes me. J. S. R.

You would have no legal right to hold his automobile merely because he owes you money, but your right of set-off would give you a qualified immunity from damages. The technical legal remedy would be for you to sue him, get judgment, and levy upon the automobile.

WIDOW'S PENSION.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—To the Friend of the People.—I am a widow with a small child to support. I earn scarcely enough to support myself. I have heard that there is a widow's pension. Where do I apply for information? S. A.

Apply at the office of the Juvenile court in the County building.

OUSTING THE AGENT.

Chicago, Jan. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I had a two flat building for sale, which three real estate men had listed in their offices, but none of them had the exclusive agency for the building. An agent brought a man to see the place one day, but the man did not say whether or not he would take it. A month later the man came to me to buy the place and I sold it to him. Now the real estate man is suing me. Will I have to pay him his fee? I thought the man who bought answered my "for sale" sign which was on the house. T. S.

It seems somewhat probable that your claim that you did not remember the purchaser's connection with the real estate agent would not be believed in court and that you will lose. At any rate the case is close enough so that if you resist it will be advisable to employ an attorney.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PARENT'S SUPPORT.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My husband and I are living with his "widowed mother." He is helping to support her. There are two other children working who are living home, one boy and one girl. 1: If we live by ourselves, some place else, can his mother demand him to support her? He is now making $50 per week. 2. If he has to support her, how much should he give? P. W.

1. Illinois law requires that children who are able shall contribute to the support of destitute parents.
2. Depends upon how much she needs: upon your own family expenses, etc.

MEMORY TESTS

1. When and by whom was copper plate engraving invented? My Maso Finiguerra in 1450.

2. What was the Chimæra? In mythology, a fire breathing monster. The fore part of its body was a compound of the lion and the goat, the hind part a dragon. It persecuted Lycia, until Bellerophon, a gallant young warrior, slew it.

3. When did the state of Mississippi secede from the union? Jan. 9, 1861.

4. What is the relation between the family names of Fish and Fisk? They are two forms of the same name; Fish is the normal English development, while Fisk was brought into England later by the viking raiders; "sk" in all cases changed to "sh" in Old English, but not in Scandinavian.

5. What four states have the rose as their state flower? New York schoolchildren chose the rose for their state flower; Georgia the Cherokee rose; Iowa the wild rose, and North Dakota the wild prairie rose, the last three states by legislative action.

A LETTER FROM ENGLAND ON THE FRENCH DEBTS.

Manchester, England, Dec. 7.—France owes the United States $3,309,840,000 and is defaulting in the payment of interest like any small South American republic. There are, however, ample funds in France for the payment of interest, but they are being squandered in the maintenance of a huge and unnecessary army. If President Harding were to insist in unmistakably strong terms that the French army must be reduced 50 per cent (and even then it would be more than large enough) the funds saved would be more than enough to pay the United States interest, arrears, and sinking fund. At present American taxpayers are burdened with the payment of interest on French loans. If the good will were there French statesmen would relieve them of the burden by a drastic army reduction. There would no doubt be strong resentment and excitement in Paris if the United States were to insist on a 50 per cent army reduction, but France would obviously have to yield, as friction with America could not be faced.

It has been stated that the American garrison on the Rhine has been reduced to about 1,000 men and that the remainder are to be withdrawn during the winter. When that occurs the whole area originally allotted to American troops ought to be handed back to Germany; there is no valid reason why it should not be. Should France object she should be told that American action is no business of hers. When some time ago a portion of the American troops was withdrawn 4,000 French troops were sent to the town of Mainz. They have no business there. America should insist on their withdrawal when the United States troops finally leave.

Unemployment in America and England is largely due to the presence of French troops on the Rhine; French interference in Poland, causing unrest throughout eastern Europe, and French influence in the proceedings of the league of nations, which is now little more than a thinly disguised French committee, promoting French policy and interests, as shown by the Silesian award in the face of an army of experts, the scandal of Vilna, and other Polish-French adventures. The purchasing power of half Europe is crippled by want of confidence due to French policy. If the French and Belgian troops could be withdrawn from the Rhine, either voluntarily or by pressure from America, unemployment would disappear by the revival of trade. If the President were to call on the British government to withdraw the British garrison pari passu with the American and restore the occupied territory to Germany there could be no doubt of the reply.

"AMUSING AND AT TIMES INTERESTING."

Chicago, Dec. 27.—It is amusing and at times interesting to note the manifest anxiety and uneasiness of mind of THE TRIBUNE concerning the methods best to employ to make certain the defeat of Mayor Thompson. In harmony with past precedent, THE TRIBUNE is again attempting to steer the Republican ship into the harbor of Democracy. To say the least, it must be admitted that THE TRIBUNE has on numerous occasions helped to make it possible for a large number of self-opinionated ignoramuses to hold public office, much to the discredit of the intelligence of the electorate when a comparison is drawn between some now holding judicial offices and their predecessors.

When one considers the immensity of its organization and resources, both in brains and capital, it is difficult to believe that THE TRIBUNE does not know that Mayor Thompson is the only Republican candidate that has a chance to win the mayoralty election. The well informed in such matters, including THE TRIBUNE, know that the number of Republicans in this city who will not support any Republican candidate nominated by the persons and interests that are opposed to the principles for which Mayor Thompson has consistently fought is sufficient to insure the election of a Democrat, and that in consequence thereof it inevitably follows that either Mayor Thompson will be reëlected or a Democrat will succeed him.
HERVEY C. FOSTER.

SALUBRIOUS BUT EXPENSIVE.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 1.—I have read with interest Mr. J. A. Stewart's communication concerning California's climate and acquisitiveness. I, too, have spent a winter in that state, but, unlike Mr. Stewart, I found the climate very agreeable—ideal, I might say. I therefore cannot understand Mr. Stewart's complaint against the climate. Perhaps he was unfortunate in choosing a particularly unfavorable year.

However, I certainly can understand his protest against the way tourists are victimized in the matter of charges. Tourists undoubtedly are overcharged in Los Angeles county, but if Mr. Stewart will travel around a bit he will learn that the real banditti dwell farther south—in San Diego county, to be specific.

Here is a community of some 100,000 souls, existing largely on eastern gold, some of which is transported overland in tourists' automobiles and some of which comes by sea to be distributed through the United States navy. Under these circumstances it behooves the natives to make the best of the opportunity afforded, and, please believe me, this they do.

REBUKING CIVIC OPERA DISSENTERS.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—I am very sorry to see that no one considered it necessary to answer these civic-opera dissenters. Is there not one who loves opera enough to give these people a piece of his mind or is it that the cultured do not read the Vox Pop? Either case would be a calamity. True, indeed, is it that the Vox Pop has of late featured a number of grouches. To Messrs. Pecona and Burton, who are terribly worried for fear they didn't get their money's worth: On Saturday, Dec. 3, you got your seats at popular prices and had the privilege of seeing two operas. I would be inclined to suspect that you are the kind of people from whom true opera lovers complain to Edward Moore—the kind who go for an evening out; just to have a good time. There are plenty of vaudeville shows for such.

To the other dissenter whom the great Edward Moore answered so fully, though it was beneath his dignity to do it: Opera may be neither fish nor flesh nor good red herring; but it is considered by many the highest form of artistic expression. Certainly it combines more art forms than anything else.

RELIEVE THE SMOKE NUISANCE.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—There is something amusing to one who has just spent two weeks in your loop in the keen attention your committeeman must be giving to those 500 smokestacks to see that they don't misbehave. Whole flocks of smoke pour all day and most of the night into your otherwise immaculate hotels, and just naturally gum up the whole place with great gobs of soot and grime.

Five hundred chimneys! If you must burn soft coal—and of course you must!—the only way to cut down the smoke nuisance is the complete central station heating plant for the entire loop. It is entirely feasible, and the only real solution. Meantime the taller buildings could easily be equipped to supply heat to adjacent lower structures, so that all smoke would be exhausted as high in the air as possible—instead of having all buildings, high and low, contribute their mussiness.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

NOCTURNE.

By Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

Up to her chamber window,
A slight wire trellis goes,
And up this Romeo ladder
Clambers a bold white rose.
I lounge in the ilex shadows,
I see the lady lean,
Unclasping her silken girdle,
The curtain's folds between.

She smiles on her white-rose lover,
She reaches out her hand
And helps him in at the window—
I see it where I stand!
To her scarlet lip she holds him,
And kisses him many a time—
Ah, me! It was he that won her
Because he dared to climb.

10,000,000 FIGHT CHILD LABOR TO BACK McCORMICK

Amendment to Basic Law Urged by Gompers.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—One impressive phase of child labor reform today is the sheer size of the movement. A membership of more than 10,000,000 men and women is represented by the hundred and more organizations launching a concerted campaign for the McCormick amendment to prevent child labor.

This estimate is regarded as more than conservative. More than 5,000,000 women are on the roster of women's organizations actively working to abolish juvenile exploitation. Organized labor, with more than 4,000,000 members, is another great sponsoring group, while civic societies and other units enrolled in the campaign have more than 1,000,000 members.

Rarely has a measure had such a prodigious backing as that which is to appear at the initial hearings next week, before a senate committee. The attitude of organized labor was set forth today by Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor.

Up to Congress: Gompers.

"Labor," he said, "stands for and demands a constitutional amendment as the only remaining legislative remedy. If congress is determined it can present to the country in short order an effective constitutional amendment to eliminate child labor.

"The American labor movement has from the first sought to have child labor prohibited by law. In many industries today there is no child labor, because the trade unions have taken the children out of these industries. In the mines there are no boys, though there was a time when children by the thousands worked in the mines. Union miners refuse to work where children under 16 years are employed.

"There are no children in American print shops because the union will not permit child labor in print shops. No children are at work in machine shops because the union will not permit child labor in machine shops. There are no children in union cigar factories nor in any other trade where the union exists.

Where Children Work.

"The only reason children are at work in the textile industries and that is where there is the greatest abuse of childhood, is because the union is not yet strong enough to accomplish their liberation.

"By the Supreme court's two child labor decisions, the American congress is denied the power of refusing to admit child labor products into interstate commerce and is denied the right to tax child labor out of existence. The Supreme court deals with childhood exactly as it would deal with pig iron or a dispute about a protested boundary line.

"Dairy interests found oleomargarine a dangerous competitor. Oleomargarine was held to be a wholesome product and it could be sold for less than butter. When colored, just as most butter is colored, it looked like butter. The court upheld a tax on colored oleomargarine making it impossible for colored oleomargarine to compete with butter because of the tax.

"Today, consumers buy their oleomargarine uncolored, but with each pound a capsule of color is given, so that the consumer may do for himself what the manufacturer can not afford to do because of the tax.

His Bitter Comparison.

"Perhaps there is some legal technicality which makes proper and constitutional a tax on colored oleomargarine to keep it off the market, but improper and unconstitutional a tax on child labor to keep child labor products off the market. Perhaps that is so, but the lay mind finds it all confusing and unreasonable."

A study of rural child labor in the truck farming area along the Atlantic seaboard in New Jersey, Maryland and Virginia has just been finished by the children's bureau of the department of labor. Numbers of child migratory laborers under 10 years of age were found.

In one area in Maryland, the survey says three-fifths of the white children and three-fourths of the colored children reported they had started to work before 10 years of age. One fourth of the white children and one third of the colored children were under 10 years when interviewed.

BIDS SOUGHT ON NEW BOUL MICH 'STOP-GO' SYSTEM

Installation of a traffic signal system which is designed to clear up the congestion on Michigan boulevard will be begun within sixty days. Bids for the work have been asked for by the south park commissioners.

The system finally decided on is similar to the 5th avenue system in New York, but with a number of improvements, notably light signals for east and west traffic that can be seen for more than a block.

The idea of a synchronized traffic regulation for Michigan boulevard, according to the commissioners, first was advanced by John Hertz. The commissioners had no available funds and the Yellow Cab company offered to put in a system on approval. Traffic experts from all over the United States have contributed to the plan of control.

SON OF NOTED DOCTOR HELD; ESCAPED PRISON

Arthur E. Dake, son of the late Dr. Martin Dake, well known physician of San Francisco, was arrested while attending a banquet at 110 West Oak street last night. Police say he is wanted as an escaped convict at Little Rock, Ark.

Dake made a statement following his arrest in which he said he was a medical student in San Francisco in 1906. Since that time he has served sentences in a number of penal institutions. Drink is to blame, he told police.

Dake is also accused of posing as a doctor. Miss Alfrieda Hewlett, Hazel and Montrose avenue, claims he represented himself to her as Dr. C. E. Williams and that she sent him a check for $100 for medical services.

HOOVER DECLINES HARDING OFFER OF INTERIOR POST

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Secretary of Commerce Hoover today declined an offer from President Harding to become secretary of the interior to succeed Secretary Fall, whose resignation becomes effective March 4.

Official announcement of this was made at the White House following a conference between the President and Mr. Hoover.

It was explained that Mr. Hoover has declined the new post for the reason that he wished to remain at the head of department of commerce in order to complete his program. It was pointed that Mr. Hoover, when he accepted the commerce portfolio, had told the President that he did so with the assurance that he could make of it "a real commerce department."

With Secretary Hoover eliminated as a possible successor to Secretary Fall, others who are said to be under consideration for the post are John Hays Hammond, now chairman of the coal commission; Senator Harry S. New [Rep., Ind.], who retires from the senate March 4, and Representative Frank W. Mondell [Rep., Wyo.], majority leader of the house, who also retired by the reason of the fact tha he ran for the senate and was defeated last November.

MONTH'S SALARY GIRL'S AWARD IN HEART BALM SUIT

One month's salary, $126.50, comprised damages awarded yesterday to Miss Mary L. Hansen, 733 North Parkside avenue, by the jury in Judge Edward Mangan's court which heard the girl's suit for $10,000 heart balm from Fred L. Jahnke, automobile dealer, who, she alleged, had jilted her to marry another.

The verdict, according to one juror, was based on Miss Hansen's admission, that after Jahnke's alleged proposal, she resigned her position, but returned immediately to work when she learned that the automobile man had married Miss Minnie Walner on the day that had been set for her own wedding.

INDIAN LANDS BILL FRIENDS, FOES TO MEET

Old Spanish Grants Are Involved.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The controversy raging over the Bursum bill, designed to straighten legal snarls which have developed over the Pueblo Indian lands in New Mexico, will be given a thorough airing by the senate public lands committee.

Hearings will begin within the next few days. All interested persons will be given full opportunity to state their side of the case before further action is taken.

The bill in question was introduced by Senator Bursum [Rep., N. M.], and passed by the senate without much discussion or a record vote several months ago. Upon motion by Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho], however, the action was rescinded and the bill was sent back to the public lands committee for more careful scrutiny and investigation.

Substitute Bill Offered.

Meantime Senator Jones [Dem., N. M.], at the request of organizations opposing the bill, has introduced a substitute measure. The Bursum bill is entitled "A bill to ascertain and settle land claims of persons not Indian within Pueblo Indian land, land grants, and reservations in the state of New Mexico."

The bill designates the federal district court of the state of New Mexico as the tribunal before which these claims should be tried. The Jones bill would set up an entirely separate court to deal with the litigation.

Approximately 3,000 claimants, with property involving about $10,000,000, are affected by the Bursum bill. Nearly all these claimants are of Spanish descent. Their ancestors, according to Senator Bursum, settled on Pueblo Indian lands before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth.

Women Attack Bursum Bill.

The New Mexico association on Indian affairs and the Indian welfare committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs has just published a pamphlet setting forth their objections to the bill. Their arguments against the measure, as summed up, are:

"In general the bill is so full of inconsistencies, contradictions, and language requiring construction as to render it impossible of amendment in such a way as to serve any useful purpose, either for the Indians or for the claimants adverse to the Indians. It should be utterly and wholly defeated because:

1. It stultifies the government and adds another failure to its record of dealing with dependent peoples.
2. It will ruin the Pueblo Indians by the loss of their lands and in a short time utterly destroy them.
3. It will not benefit the settlers who will be trapped in endless litigation and unlimited expense thereto.

The pamphlet recommend that in lieu of the Bursum bill the President appoint an unbiased, nonpartisan commission to deal with the situation.

Bill Indorsed by Fall.

The Bursum bill has the indorsement of Secretary of the Interior Fall. In fact, it was drafted under the supervision of the Indian affairs bureau of the federal government.

"My bill is the result of at least a year's careful study by competent experts representing all sides of the controversy," Senator Bursum said.

"I have no pride of authorship and I am willing to accept any modifications which will improve the bill. However, I do not see what would be gained by the substitution of the bill offered by my colleague, Senator Jones. The very introduction of the Jones bill is a confession that some sort of legislation is necessary to meet the situation. His bill would set up a new court at an expense of $400,000, while my bill would make use of the existing federal court in New Mexico."

DISAPPEARS ON WAY TO WORK, KIN FEARS MAN WAS ATTACKED

ISAAC LEWIS.

Mrs. Sarah Lewis of 4703 Indiana avenue has reported to the police that her brother, Isaac, known as "Ike," disappeared a week ago. She offered a reward for information concerning him. Lewis was a doorman at a State street cloak and suit house. Mrs. Lewis states that he left home on the morning of Dec. 29 as usual to go to work, and that he never returned. She fears, she told the police, that he met with an accident or with foul play.

BOASTS OF LOVE PROWESS CITED IN $25,000 SUIT

Boasts attributed to Charles McLeod, a Des Plaines electrician, that among his conquests he had numbered Mrs. Rose K. Jirsa, are said to form the basis of a $25,000 damage suit filed against him in the Circuit court yesterday by the woman's husband, Charles Jirsa, secretary of the Public Coal company, 2200 West 18th street.

According to Attorney H. A. Linaweaver, counsel for Jirsa, who filed the praecipe, the suit is the result of McLeod's alleged slanderous statements and was filed after the electrician had been given an opportunity to appear before Mrs. Jirsa and repeat the remarks.

DANGER OF COAL STRIKE IS OVER, CAPITAL THINKS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Assurance that a coal strike will be averted was expressed today by John Hays Hammond and former Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, members of the federal coal commission. Private advices to them, supplementing telegrams from Phil H. Penna, chairman, and William Green, secretary, of the joint conference of operators and miners at Chicago made them confident, they said, that a wage agreement will be reached.

They expressed the belief that the outcome will be the acceptance of the commission's recommendation for a continuance for another year of the wage contracts which expire on March 31.

A telegram from a coal operator at Chicago, whose name was not disclosed, stated that "the commission's advice to the joint meeting had a definite sobering effect and will culminate in the acceptance of your recommendations."

A telegram from Mr. Penna, representing the operators, was made public by the commission. This telegram, like that from William Green, secretary of the United Mine Workers, received yesterday, indicated hopefulness that some sort of an agreement will be reached.

NO STRIKE—FARRINGTON.

Assurance that there would be no coal miners' strike April 1, despite failure of operators and mine union chiefs to agree at the Chicago conference this week, was contained in telegrams dispatched from Springfield yesterday to district union leaders by Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois mine workers. Mr. Farrington says that it is "practically certain" existing contracts will be extended for one year when operators of the central competitive field—Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and western Pennsylvania—meet with union leaders in New York Jan. 18.

$10,000 FIRE AT CLINTON, IA.

Clinton, Ia., Jan. 6.—Damage estimated at $10,000 to $12,000 resulted from a fire which partially wrecked two store buildings today. Adjoining buildings and their stocks also suffered water and smoke damage.

VERDI'S 'MYSTERY OPERA' IS SUNG WITH ROSA RAISA

'La Forza del Destino' a Baffler.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Quite a number of years had elapsed since the last performance here of "La Forza del Destino" until yesterday afternoon's hearing at the Auditorium came to break the silence. It is possible that it will be quite a number of years more before it is presented again. Such infrequent renditions give little opportunity to learn what it is all about.

For "La Forza del Destino" has a plot so complex that the one of "Il Trovatore" begins to seem simple by comparison. One may follow the thread for a while, but in time he is reasonably sure of losing it.

One Hand Gun Again.

As nearly as could be grasped yesterday, the story depended upon a pistol being flung down in the center of the stage and, with singular versatility, exploding behind the scenes and killing the man for whom it was not intended. This threw the accusation upon the nearest tenor, and made it necessary for three people to change their names. From that point on the proceedings began to be enshrouded in mystery.

This plot was surrounded by a full set of Verdi's melody done in his earlier manner, not his most potent or sparkling output, but pleasing enough.

Raisa Heads Cast.

It was given by about as talented a cast as can be found in the forces of the Chicago Civic Opera company. Rosa Raisa, Giulio Crimi, Giacomo Rimini, and Virgilio Lazzari had the four chief rôles. To these was added a splendid performance of a gypsy girl by Irene Pavloska and, by way of comic relief, an eccentric monk by Desiré Defrere.

But the audience did not appear to grow greatly interested. Not even Miss Raisa's beautiful singing received more than its customary recognition. There were some slips in the performance; perhaps the slippery weather outside made it difficult to keep from skidding off the pitch.

"Sniegurotchka" was repeated last night with unchanged cast.

MANNERS

An abomination called "bad manners" is prevalent in public places. It is merely selfishness and thoughtlessness. The comforts and feelings of others are entirely disregarded in favor of one's own pleasure.

In business, the young man or woman of good manners and gentle, smiling personality, has a great advantage. Rudeness never gained success. We all know some successful men and firms that are rude and bad mannered, but their success is in spite of these qualities and not because of them.

"THE SUN HAS RISEN ON A NEW DAY IN BREAD MAKING"

Here it is—"the Key to Health"
WARD'S VITOVIM BREAD

The Ward Baking Company presents to Mankind an unsurpassed food

The WHITE SUPER-BREAD of Science

The world's greatest bakers co-operating with science have produced a creamy white bread containing the combined nourishment of whole wheat and whole milk

Some Scientific Facts about VITOVIM BREAD

VITOVIM BREAD contains proteins of superior food value for growth and strength.

—liberal amounts of vitamins A and B.

—a well-balanced variety of body-building salts for bones and teeth.

It is rich in the food elements needed by the mother and growing child.

It supplies abundant energy at low cost.

Measured by the elements necessary in the food for young and old, VITOVIM is the most nutritious bread ever baked and one of the most perfect single foods ever produced.

The purity and quality of all ingredients and VITOVIM BREAD itself are constantly controlled by laboratory and feeding tests. Also backed by the widely known Ward warranty and guarantee of many years' standing covering all Ward products.

FOR twenty years the Ward Baking Company has been working to create a bread which would represent a complete all-around food. Everyone eats bread. Most people eat a great deal of bread. If the bread you eat is deficient in important food elements, your diet is likely to be lacking in some of the factors that are essential to health and vigor.

Ward's work in the production of this super-bread has been more successful than the most optimistic could have hoped for. It has resulted in one of the greatest achievements in the whole record of scientific research as applied to the service of humanity. It enables the Ward Baking Company to present today a remarkable new food—the most nourishing loaf of white wheat bread, or bread of any other kind, ever baked!

A nutritious, delicious, creamy white bread, rich in important vitamins, mineral elements and proteins of wheat and milk.

Ward's VITOVIM BREAD contains more of the food elements needed by the human body for growth, for building muscle, bone, teeth, nerves and blood, for repairing the natural wear and tear of the body and for the preservation of health and vigor—than has ever before been secured in bread.

The finest flour is but the first of the valuable foods which go to make up this wonderful new loaf. There are added all the health-giving elements of the "germ" or heart of the wheat berry, where Nature stores the life essentials of the grain. These treasures of the wheat heart, until recently unappreciated, are discarded in the milling of white flour.

It has long been known that the most essential food elements of wheat have been lost from food for men and women, nursing mothers and children, and turned into feed for hogs and cattle. Ward's VITOVIM BREAD gives back these essential elements of nutrition to the human family.

Instead of water the richest whole milk is the liquid ingredient of the dough and additional amounts of the nutritious solids found in milk are introduced. No bread has ever been so rich in milk. No bread has ever been so good.

Years of research and almost two million dollars expended to develop and prove the VITOVIM loaf.

Not only is the VITOVIM loaf a creamy white delight to the eye, but a tasty, satisfying addition to the most appetizing meal.

Here is not only satisfaction for the senses, but the food wealth of wheat, the life-sustaining elements of milk, the important vitamins without which science knows life cannot continue. Generation after generation of small animals have been reared to maturity and perfect health and at normal rate of growth on VITOVIM and water alone, proving beyond doubt its nutritional value. The like cannot be said of any other bread.

Remember that the VITOVIM loaf is the result of a deliberate effort to produce not simply an IMPROVED bread, but a food which could be truly termed "the staff of life."

For a score of years leading food scientists and dietitians and the technical staff of the Ward Baking Company have been applying their united forces toward this present achievement. Almost two million dollars have been expended in preliminary work and in the construction of the plant at Warren, Ohio, where some of the newly developed elements in VITOVIM BREAD are produced.

Even when VITOVIM BREAD was perfected and had aroused the enthusiasm of all who were in the secret, the Ward Baking Company and its scientific advisors were not yet willing to offer it to the public. They felt that this new product was of such momentous importance that it could be given the announcement which its value justified, only after the most thorough and searching practical tests.

VITOVIM BREAD has been baked daily for more than eighteen months and during this time hundreds of feeding tests have been carried out. The most critical standards of judgment have been applied. Today there can be no possible doubt. The statements made in this advertisement are not opinions, not the reflections of hopes, but facts founded upon actual scientific tests and approved by the ablest scientific men and nutritional experts.

Besides being the best bread ever produced, VITOVIM is an economical food. And flavor! You have never tasted any white bread so delicious.

Vitamins belong in food—depend upon VITOVIM BREAD for Vitamins—for maximum nutrition at minimum cost.

This super-bread costs only a trifle more than ordinary bread, but it is worth much more. If its cost were twice as much, it would still be a revolutionary value in foods.

VITOVIM is founded on the rock of economy. It supplies all that any other bread has ever supplied, together with vitamins from milk and wheat—also proteins and mineral nutrients which are lacking in many of the foods you now eat.

Get your vitamins from this daily dependable and economical source. Make VITOVIM your bread and stick to it for life.

VITOVIM is a real protective food—it is an aid to health, strength, vigor and resistance to disease. In addition to all this, it is the most delicious bread you have ever tasted.

VITOVIM expresses the world's latest and deepest knowledge of human nutrition.

Every statement made in this advertisement was first submitted to the critical review of several of the world's experts in nutrition

VITOVIM BREAD will be on sale in both large and small size loaves at your neighborhood dealer's tomorrow. Place your order at once.

SUBSIDY IS URGED TO SAVE BILLIONS SPENT ON SHIPS

Heyworth Says Midwest Is Asleep at Switch.

"On the ship subsidy bill and its meaning to the middle west, the people have been, and are, 'asleep at the switch'," declared James O. Heyworth, Chicago contractor and member of the United States shipping board, in an address to the Hamilton club yesterday noon. "It is a question of investment already made by the middle west and also a question of added wealth to the middle west for centuries to come."

"We of this country," he said, "have some $3,000,000,000 invested in our merchant marine, the value of which today stands at approximately $1,000,000,000. We of the middle west and Mississippi valley have contributed largely and invested our money in these ships. The city of Chicago alone contributed at least $150,000,000 in Liberty bonds.

Saving Through Subsidy.

"The ships are being operated by the government at an expense of some $50,000,000 a year, in addition to their depreciation and interest on the money invested. The bill provides for a subsidy that will average for ten years $22,000,000 per year, thus saving $28,000,000 a year. If we do not pass the ship subsidy bill we will not only lose $50,000,000 in its operation, but the fleet will gradually go to junk, thus losing the money invested as well.

"The great war demonstrated beyond question the uselessness of a navy unless it owned a merchant marine," continued Mr. Heyworth. "Is it not inconsistent to enter the four power treaty and agree on the size of our navy and at the same time neglect the merchant marine which is necessary for the efficiency of this navy? Are we keeping faith with our own people in spending their money for a navy which cannot be efficient without a merchant marine?

Expand U. S. Trade.

"If the bill is passed this wonderful fleet of merchant ships will be put into the proper service of expanding our trade and provide proper transportation for the surplus production of the United States to the ports of the world. And when we in the middle west know that 70 per cent of the total exports of the United States are produced in the middle west we are immediately interested, not only financially, in these ships, but also interested in devising and helping any means that will make these ships effective and keep our merchant marine on the map of the world.

"These facts seem to me to be a reasonable, businesslike proposition, the best business deal that can be made under all the circumstances."

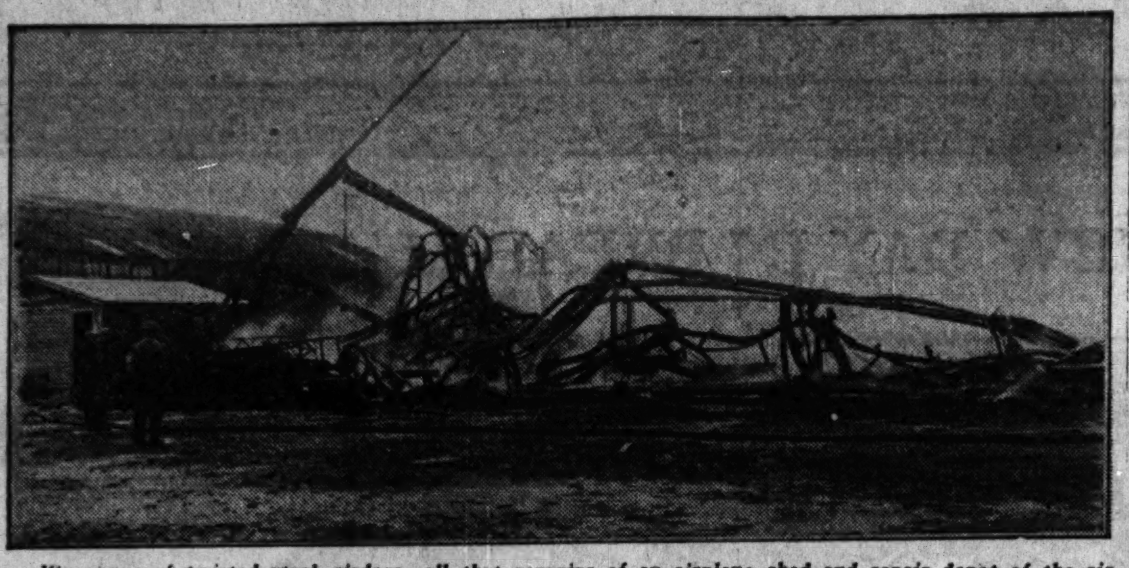
RABBI CONDUCTS HIS SERVICES IN GENTILE CHURCH

The Kehillath Anshe Mayriv congregation, of which Dr. Tobias Schanfarber is rabbi, held its services for the first time yesterday in the Hyde Park Presbyterian church, Blackstone avenue and 53d street.

The Rev. Ralph M. Davis, pastor of the Hyde Park church, took part in the service. Rabbi Schanfarber made an address, pointing out the possibilities of coöperation between synagogue and church in the war on vice, irreligion, racial hatred and class consciousness.

The congregation, which has been without a synagogue since it sold the building on 23d street, has purchased lots at Drexel boulevard and 50th street, and expects to begin the erection of a new temple before long.

U. S. MAIL HANGAR RAZED BY FIRE



Wreckage of twisted steel girders—all that remains of an airplane shed and repair depot of the air mail service at Maywood field, destroyed by fire yesterday. Six planes also were burned, and it was only by great effort that the flames were kept from the high test gasoline reservoirs. The loss is put at $250,000.

BRING TROOPS HOME, SENATE VOTES, 57 TO 6

Reed Sees Signs of War in Europe.

had completed their treaties of peace, and those treaties had been solemnly signed and were effective, it was the business of the United States to get our armed forces out of Europe," he said. "We had no indemnities to collect, we had no responsibilities. Certain it is, in my humble opinion, that after we had solemnly signed a treaty of peace with Germany we had no business with an armed force on German soil.

"We have no controversies with Germany except in regard to some property located in this country, and some claims against the German government which we do not propose to collect by force, and Germany has consented to submit these matters to a tribunal, on which we will have two of the three members. There can therefore be no good reason for retaining American troops in Germany.

Danger in Invasion.

"I am not here to prophesy a great European war, but it is apparent today that there is grave danger of France invading Germany and seizing possession of a large part of that country.

"If trouble should break what would be the condition of our American troops, less than 1,000 in number and, I understand, under command of French generals? If trouble should ensue it is highly probable that our troops might suffer an attack. If the attack should be made, even though there was absent any purpose to attack American troops, the moment a drop of American blood is shed the cry will go up that that blood must be avenged."

Senator Hitchcock, the next speaker, declared that the "psychological moment had arrived for considering the question of removing the troops from the Rhine." He declared that there had been justification for keeping American troops in Germany for some time after the signing of the armistice.

Deplores Action by France.

"It seems to me that the time has come when American sentiment will naturally crystallize in favor of removing our troops," he continued. "Great Britain and France have apparently come to a parting of the ways, and we are in danger of beholding an aggressive military treatment of Germany by one of the parties to the war—namely: France. To my mind, it is most deplorable that France should take the position which she is now taking, and certainly there is no reason why the United States should longer be a party to proceedings over there by allowing her troops to remain."

Senator Wadsworth [Rep., N. Y.], chairman of the military affairs committee, led the opposition to the resolution. He said he did not share the fears of senators that the American troops were in danger of attack in Germany. "I believe they will be as safe there as they would be in the District of Columbia," he said. He also expressed the opinion that they would be helpful in enabling the nations of Europe in composing their differences.

Sees Recall Misconstrued.

Senator Reed [Rep., Pa.] told the senate he wanted to see the American troops brought home, but he feared that action by the senate at this time might be misconstrued abroad.

Senator Lodge said he favored withdrawal of the troops, but he questioned the timeliness of the Reed resolution.

"Just at this moment," said Senator Lodge, "a situation has arisen in which I should be very sorry to see the United States take sides—I do not mean as between France and Germany, but as between France and Great Britain."

Senator Nelson [Rep., Minn.] opposed withdrawal of the troops and regretted America's failure to enter the league of nations. He thought the American soldiers on the Rhine were an important stabilizing influence in Europe and expressed the view that the league of nations would have done still more to stabilize conditions.

McCormick Favored Delay.

Senator McCormick spoke in favor of the resolution, although he first favored reference to the foreign relations committee.

"It would have been more expedient, in my judgment," Senator McCormick said, "to have postponed action upon this resolution for a few days during the pending crisis in Europe, but since the senate has decided otherwise it would be a grave mistake by our action to lead governments across the sea to believe that we approve the course which events have taken."

INDIANA STARTS A CAMPAIGN FOR TREES ON ROADS

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 6.—A drive for 70,000 miles of tree lined highways in Indiana was started today by Charles C. Deam, state forester. Deam urged persons living along public highways to plant trees along all roadsides, both as a means of reforestation and beautifying the roads.

Gov. McCray and state highway officials favor trees along state roads, and frequently the commission has directed its engineers to curve roads slightly where it would not cause interference with traffic.

Eleven million trees could be planted along Indiana roads, Deam said. This is equivalent to 100,000 acres of forest timber. These trees in fifty years would produce about 2,500,000 feet of lumber, which at present figures would be worth $2,000,000 on the stump.

Deam said he favors walnut or hickory trees because of the quality of the wood and because they would yield a profit in nuts.

REEVES TANGLE TIED UP BY ERROR OF ACCUSED MAN

Further action in the domestic tangle involving serious charges made by Mrs. Grace Reeves against Theron Reeves, $5,000 a year mechanical expert for the board of local improvements with an additional incident in the arrest of Attorney Chester A. Macomic, accused of intimacy with Mrs. Reeves, was halted when Macomic's hearing yesterday in the Morals court was continued by Judge Daniel Trude to Jan. 17.

Macomic failed to appear when the case was called and Judge Trude ordered his immediate arrest on a capias, but just before adjournment the attorney and his counsel, Leo Mathias, appeared and explained that they had gone to another court by mistake.

Reeves caused Macomic's arrest Thursday night, when he asserted that he had seen Mrs. Reeves and the attorney embracing in Macomic's Kell shore hotel apartment. Mrs. Reeves in a divorce bill filed Friday, declared that Reeves had admitted misconduct with other women.

FORMER WOMAN PATIENT MISSING.

Police were asked yesterday to search for Miss Esther Shapiro, who may use the name of Esther Hansen, 1523 Flournoy street, who has been missing since her discharge from the Lawndale hospital in June, 1922.

6 MAIL PLANES BURN IN U. S. HANGAR BLAZE

By the explosion of a barrel of chemical preparation used for coating the wings of airplanes, a government airplane hangar near Checkerboard field, Maywood, was destroyed by fire yesterday, causing damage estimated at $250,000.

Bursts Into Flame.

The explosion took place just after 2 o'clock in the afternoon and within a few minutes the whole of the hangar, a two story structure of wood and steel girders, was blazing furiously.

The fire departments of Maywood, Melrose, Forest Park, and Oak Park came to the rescue, but they were unable to save the hangar or any of its contents. By their prompt work, however, they prevented the fire from spreading to neighboring hangars.

Six Planes Burn.

In the hangar was a large amount of machinery used for airplane manufacture and valued at $100,000; six government airplanes awaiting removal, valued at $50,000, and a quantity of stores to the value of $50,000, all of which was destroyed. The building itself was estimated at a value of $40,000.

Wife Elopes, Takes Family; Husband Wants 4 Children

Tom Gerber, Decatur, Ill., wrote for help here yesterday in his search for his four children, whose custody was awarded to him by court order when he divorced his wife on a charge that she eloped with Russell Fulfer, once a lodger in their home. Fulfer also was married and had one child, Gerber said. Mrs. Gerber took two of the Gerber children with her and later the other two disappeared from Decatur.

Bacon and Eggs, 2 fresh eggs, fried in butter, and 4 strips of bacon	30c

Two weeks ago we advertised our latest specialty—a fine, thick Sirloin steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans—for only 85 cents. Steak lovers came in wondering. They couldn't believe it was possible to get a really fine steak for such a low price—they were amazed when they found that they could. In two short weeks the popularity of our steak combination has increased by leaps and bounds, proving beyond any doubt that it is Chicago's greatest food value.

There are many dining places where by paying top prices you can get the finest food. And there are many dining places where by contenting yourself with small dabs of food, often indifferently cooked, you can dine for a small amount of money. But the North American Restaurant is the one happy solution. Here the food is always the best quality obtainable—the portions are extra big (often ample for two)—and because you serve yourself we charge you nothing at all for "service" and our prices are correspondingly low.

Other dining places have attempted to "copy" the North American Restaurant—but the fact still remains that there is no other dining place just like this. And our volume which has now reached the unheard of number of nearly 2 million diners a year, is the best of proof that this is exactly the kind of a dining place most people want.

HAMON'S WIDOW WINS DIVORCE FROM CLUBMAN

Says Rohrer Made Her Live Life of Fear.

Mrs. Georgia Rohrer, widow of Jake L. Hamon, slain Oklahoma politician and oil millionaire, received assurance of a decree of divorce yesterday at the hearing of her suit against William L. Rohrer, capitalist and art connoisseur. Mrs. Hamon said she lived a life of fear caused by physical torture "playfully" inflicted by Rohrer. They were married a year.

Judge Steffen indicated he would grant Mrs. Rohrer a decree and the right to resume Hamon's name after she had formally waived dower interest in Rohrer's estate, valued at nearly $500,000, and had accepted the broker's waiver of interest in her share of Hamon's estate, said to approximate $2,000,000.

Too Much "Good Spirits."

Numerous instances of Rohrer's exhibition of jiu-jitsu, at which he is adept and which, she charged, was practiced upon her in his angry moods, were detailed by Mrs. Rohrer. After each display, although each caused her more pain than the last, Rohrer, she said, would characterize it as "a simple demonstration of prowess and the result of overabundant good spirits."

"On the day of our separation, Dec. 3, 1922," said Mrs. Rohrer, in answer to questions by her attorney, James C. O'Brien, "I asked Mr. Rohrer for some spending money—only a little sum, too. He refused, saying that he had none to give me. On another occasion I had met with refusal, and at an opportune moment had searched his trouser pockets and found $18. So this time I reached for the trousers, and he jumped at me.

"In the struggle which followed he grasped my wrists, as he always did at such times, in that awful Japanese way, and I thought my arms would be broken. He was merciless at such times, and although I pleaded, 'Stop it; O, please don't hurt me,' he continued and suddenly struck me several times on the shoulders."

Cruelty Charge by Previous Wife.

In September, 1915, Rohrer, who is known as an art connoisseur, and has paintings valued at more than $100,000 in his home at 1351 North State parkway, was divorced by Mrs. Fay Hancock Rohrer, who cited his "ungovernable temper" as the basis for her suit.

Jake L. Hamon Jr., now a resident of Ardmore, Okla., where he has succeeded to the management of his father's vast oil interests, and Olive Bell Hamon, a daughter, supported their mother's testimony, the girl describing an attack she said was made on her mother at the Rohrer dinner table.

"I don't want mother to take a dime from that man," asserted young Hamon. "I will, according to the latest inventory of father's estate, inherit about $1,400,000 soon and she shall never want as long as she lives."

Center of Noted Hamon Slaying.

The Rohrers were married in Chicago on Dec. 21, 1921, about a year after the death of Hamon in Ardmore, Okla. Hamon, a Republican national committeeman, was shot by Clara Smith Hamon, who later was acquitted of the murder charge and fought unsuccessfully for a share of the oil magnate's estate.

After the wedding, Rohrer and his bride were guests of President and Mrs. Harding in Washington for several days and then toured the world on a honeymoon. Mrs. Rohrer, it is said, is a cousin of President Harding.

CAUSES ARREST OF BROTHER FOR THEFT OF WIFE

Gustave Geurukos, a haberdasher, from Charlotte, N. C., caused the arrest last night of his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Geurukos, and his brother, James, when he complained to the police that they eloped and were living at 748 Cornelia street.

At the station Mrs. Geurukos drew out a paper from her purse and showed it to Acting Lieut. Harry Powers.

"Here is an agreement which separates us as man and wife," she told the police. "By this agreement I am free to do what I please."

"This is no case for me to decide," said the lieutenant, "I am going to charge the three of you with disorderly conduct and let the court decide your difficulties."

Mrs. Knox, Charged with Slaying Mate, Free on Bond

San Augustine, Tex., Jan. 6.—Permanent bond of $5,000, pending the meeting of the grand jury in March, was agreed upon this morning for Mrs. Lillian Knox, widow of Hiram Knox, millionaire lumberman, whom she is charged with slaying. Mrs. Knox was released on temporary bond of $2,500 on condition she furnish the other immediately.

Radium Is Restoring Health to Thousands

The wonderful curative power of Radium has been known for years. However, the benefits of this precious health-giving substance have in the past been only within the means of persons of wealth.

Since the invention of Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad, any man or woman, poor or rich, can afford this treatment which offers so much relief from suffering and disease.

Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad is worn next to the body day and night. It pours a constant stream of radio-active energy into the system while you work, play or sleep, helping to build up weakened nerves and tissues to a strong, healthy condition. It creates a vigorous circulation of blood, thus removing congestion, which is the real cause of most diseases.

To prove just what this remarkable treatment can do for you, we will send our appliance on trial with the understanding that we will not charge you a cent if it fails to give satisfactory results. This offer is open to any person who has pain of any kind, nerve weakness, high blood pressure, stomach, kidney or liver complaint, bladder trouble, or disease of the lungs or heart.

No matter what your ailment or how long you have had it, we will gladly let you try the appliance at our risk. Write today for free literature giving complete information. Radium Appliance Co., 1411 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

JIU JITSU SPLITS THEIR HOME

[Daguerre Studio.]

Mrs. Georgia Hamon-Rohrer, heiress to millions, wins divorce from wealthy art connoisseur on charges that she led a life of fear and was refused spending money. Their parting came after a quarrel when she tried to search his pockets, she says. Their year of married life included a honeymoon at the White House with the Hardings and a trip around the world.

William L. Rohrer's proficiency at jiu jitsu made life a terror for his wife, she charged. He said the application of jiu jitsu upon her resulted from an excess of "good spirits."

WOMAN OF COLD FLAT FAME KEEPS CELL AIR A-SIZZLT

Mrs. Burke Settles to 400 Day "Stretch."

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

Mrs. Margaret Burke, cold and icy, sits in her well heated cell at the Bridewell, and with torrid word, but frigid tone, makes it hot for the warm hearted matron. Mrs. Burke's tropical words sizzle up around 103 degrees Fahrenheit; Mrs. Burke's arctic tones shiver at twenty-five and one-half degrees below zero, cenigtade. And the human thermostat creates a storm area for matrons and reporters.

For the feminine temperature curve refuses to explain why she chose to go to the Bridewell yesterday instead of paying the $200 fine imposed by Judge Asa G. Adams when, for the second time, she was haled into court on charge of freezing out the tenants in her apartment, 1416 East 69th street.

Flees Interview Thrice.

Mrs. Burke is large, energetic and warm blooded. She seems almost suffocated in her warm cell. She is finally persuaded to walk down the corridor to the recption room where the interviewer is waiting. At the gateway she stops. A puff of smoke simmers up through the register from the furnace below. The Bridewell's "landlady" is firing up. Mrs. Burke coughs and retreats, mopping beads of perspiration from her forehead.

A few moments later the woman who refused, legally, to keep the home fires burning, starts forward again. But the front door swings open. A wicked draft is wafted in from the chilly world. The beads of moisture change to frosty icicles, and, a shivering victim of the cold, she hastens back to the even temperature of her cell.

A third trip, thanks to the persuasiveness of the matron, is attempted. The corridor is not too hot; the reception room is not too cold. But, just as the interview is about to start, Mrs. Burke sniffs suspiciously. A visitor has dumped his snow encrusted rubbers against the radiator. Burning rubber is not conducive to eloquence. And Mrs. Burke's farewell appearance is final.

Due to Be Out in 1924.

Back in her cell she is fingering a calendar, as she murmurs: "Two hundred dollars; that means 400 days. Today is January 5. That means February 10 next year," and Mrs. Burke digs into the corner of her bed and produces an almanac predicting the weather for Feb. 10, 1924.

HALED TO COURT

Health Commissioner Bundesen's crusade to keep Chicago apartments warm caused the issuance yesterday of a court summons by Municipal Judge Asa G. Adams for Walter B. Anderson and William H. Terrell, agents for a twenty flat building at 3437-41 Rhodes avenue.

According to P. S. Combs Jr., ventilating inspector in charge, the agents permitted the temperature in the flats to fall as low as 42 degrees between 10 and 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The violations alleged extend over the period from Dec. 8 to Jan. 6.

On one occasion, Sanitary Inspector J. P. Faulkner reported, he remained at the building until the temperature of the apartments had been brought within the requirements of the ordinance, but that a few hours later it had been permitted to drop again to below 50 degrees. Several cases of sore throat and colds exist among the tenants, according to the inspector.

SOCIAL DISEASES AND HOOTCH FILL PSYCHOPATHIC

Many Cases So Bad Court Must Go to Them.

BY CARL GLASSCOCK.

Reiteration in the news of the growing number of cases of insanity due to venereal diseases and moonshine alcoholism, of stories certaining to eugenics, and of agitation on the subject of sterilization of the unfit, has led an inquisitive mind to the chief point of observation of individuals most directly involved in this community—the Cook County Psychopathic hospital. Incidentally, its reputation is that of one of the best points of such observation in the world.

Its iron doors open to the seeker after knowledge a long trail, and a winding, to the land of nightmare rather than of dreams. There is misery, unalloyed, on the part of the hundreds of patients, and almost as much on the part of witnesses who wait at the courtroom door. Science, medical skill, and an occasional little touch of humanity on the part of judge or attendant, afford the only flashes of relief.

Court Held in Hospital.

A group of capable, keen looking doctors, and County Judge Jarecki, whose duty it is to pass upon these cases, are waiting at the door to make the weekly tour of inspection of those who cannot come into court. A doctor explains that it would require the entire force of physicians, internes, nurses, and other attendants to bring all these sufferers to the courtroom. It is inadvisable to bring the mountain to Mahomet, so Mahomet goes to the mountain. We unlock a door and enter a great, airy room, and mental darkness surrounds us like a shroud. Some forty or fifty men and boys, shabby, unkempt, and generally repulsive, are sitting silently around the walls. They appear of all ages, from 20 to 80, but of a fixed condition of misery.

One alone is playing solitare upon a table. We do not know whether that is what brought him there or whether that is what the place has brough him to. A battered old piano occupies another corner. The men are not talking. They are staring into chaos—mostly unmindful of the visitors. An interne raises one at the end of a bench. The others ignore the disturbance.

Yesterday an Een Away.

"This is S——," says the interne. "How much money have you got today, S——?" The curtain seems about to lift from S——'s dull eyes for a moment, but fails. "I don't remember," he says. "You had $8,000,000,000 yesterday," the interne reminds him. S—— makes an effort; then, slowly, "I don't remember." "How many chidhen have you?" That is easier. "I don't remember."

We are out of luck with S——. Yesterday he was giving away castles on the Rhine and estates on Long Island. We could have had one for the asking yesterday. And he had a whole asylum full of children yesterday. They have disappeared over night in the darkness of his mind. We try H—— at the other end of the bench. He was a good-looking man once. He also is a victim of syphilis, which has reduced his brain to pulp. He has difficulty with his speech. He is in the last stages. But he has $450,000, $450, or $45,000. He gives each figure with equal pleasure.

We speak to a few others whose cases are to come up soon in the courtroom below. One demonstrates his walk, with a hint of locomotor ataxia, and a habit of wiping his face constantly with a soiled handkercihef. A few others speak briefly in reply to questions. There is no excitement, no noise. It is the calm and atmosphere of a morgue, in which minds, not bodies, are dead.

Some Strapped to Cots.

Through another door, unlocked for the purpose, and locked immediately after us, we move down a corridor, scrupulously clean, stopping in small wards to examine the bedridden. There are straps across the chests of some of them, under the closely tucked white bedding. All are quiet. Most of them ignore us, do not even see us. A few answer questions. One old man, once a lawyer, speaks apparently with intelligence and excellent choice of words and enunciation. At the end of the corridor we come through another iron door to the private rooms. These men are inclined to be violent, but now they are calm. One becomes abusive and profane, especially to one of the doctors, when we leave him. The doctor smiles. "This is where you hear an unvarnished opinion of yourself," he says.

In an adjoining room are long bathtubs with hammocks stretched in them. One is occupied by a man strapped down to the hammock, and covered, all except the head, with a sheet. A stream of water is running over him from head to foot of the tub. That is very good treatment for alcoholics. Sometimes they are kept in these baths for five to seven hours. It is soothing. Afterward they sleep quietly. This man does not appear to be soothed. His head and eyes roll. He doesn't speak.

Alcoholic Reaction Violent.

Back through the iron door into the big room. As we pass through, a man is tinkling discords on the upper register of the old piano. He is standing. There is no attempt at tune or harmony. He isn't rough with it, though it looks as if some one had been. Beside him a man falls in convulsion. Internes pick him up and carry him out. "Epileptic," says a doctor. The man at the piano keeps on with his tinny discords. "Alcoholic convulsion," explains one of the internes, coming back.

Then through a long corridor and iron doors, unlocked at our approach, to the women's ward. It is the same in arrangement and about the same in numbers as the men's. Women of all age and appearance sit silently around the walls. One, of 80 years or thereabouts, answers the judge's question and a doctor laughs softly. Even softly, a laugh seems out of place in a morgue. But mentally we marvel and congratulate the doctor on his ability to laugh. A capable nurse who is conducting us now points out a young woman. Her husband is willing to take her home, she says. "Minnie is a victim of too much leisure," the nurse explains. "Her husband made a lot of money and wouldn't allow her to work about the house."

Women Hysterical Together.

The next patient gets excited a bit. We move away. "Doesn't do to get the women excited," a doctor explains. "They get hysterical. All go together. Give me a block start then. It's different with the men. If one of them gets rough the others all help the fellow he's picking on. They know he's crazy. Not that way with the women." There's the foundation for much thought in that.

Another iron door is unlocked and we move down the polished corridor to the women's private rooms. The first audible hint that we are in a madhouse comes to us here. It is a woman's voice, singing in a monotone. We stop at her door. She is a dark and not unprepossessing woman of thirty, very slender under the tightly stretched bedclothes. She smiles at us. "I'm a music roll," she says. We turn to leave but she calls us back peremptorily. "I know you," and she proceeds to name us, one by one, stopping when she has identified the reporter as "Mayor Thompson." Then she lets us go. As we move away we hear the music roll again. It is no worse than some others we have heard.

Then through more iron doors, unlocked for our passage, to the occupational wards. A few women are making hospital supplies. They are all quiet. We hear never a word. Baskets, hooked rugs, and other work fill another room, but no one is working there. These "cases" are being prepared for court appearance.

Disease Wrecks Mind.

Through a great room crowded with some hundred or more witnesses and a smaller room filled with witnesses for the first ten cases on the calendar, we enter the courtroom. There are only ninety-seven cases today, the smallest number for many weeks. A young man enters from the patients' room. He is a decent appearing young man. But he forgets things. He forgot where and who he was the other night and a policeman brought him in. He speaks with apparent intelligence, and is led away. His wife is called. She has come all the way from California for the hearing. She left him a year ago when she found he had come back from overseas service with syphilis. She is a good looking, modest girl, and is greatly embarrassed. The judge is kindly. There is no doubt that the poison of his diseased blood is in the young man's brain. He is committed to Elgin.

Merry old Tom C—— is led in. Alcoholic. He'd been drunk on moonshine since Thanksgiving. He smiles apologetically, but ingratiatingly. Where did he get it? Let us in on it. He grins. "Ask me where you can't get it," he says. He's a bachelor and a laborer. He wants to go home and get to work. He'll lay off the stuff. Yes, he will—at sixty. But a decent neighbor woman says she'll keep an eye on him so he won't be found frozen to death in an alley some morning. Dismissed.

A drug addict is next, a tall, broad shouldered man. He's been there twenty days. He's cured. Wants to go home to his wife. How long had he been taking morphine? Seven years. And he's cured in twenty days. Yes. A doctor speaks up. "This man wanted to come here for treatment, and agreed if we'd take him in he'd go to a state hospital for three months to finish the cure. Now he wants to get out." The judge questions him closely. He hedges and qualifies. Can't pin him down. He's led out. An opulent beauty in a fur coat, with Fitch collar and gold turban, takes the stand as his wife. Let him come home. He's cured. Besides, we're going to move away, where he can't get it.

Crazy for "Shot," Verdict.

The doctor whispers in the reporter's ear. "He hasn't had a shot for twenty days. He's wild to get it. He's calm on the surface now and slippery and crafty. Acute nervousness gone, but he wants his shot. He'll get it in half an hour if he's turned loose. Two or three shots and he'll be crazy." But the judge is wise. Cured of a seven years' drug habit in twenty days? No. Dunning. "A month or two there and he'll have a chance," whispers the doctor.

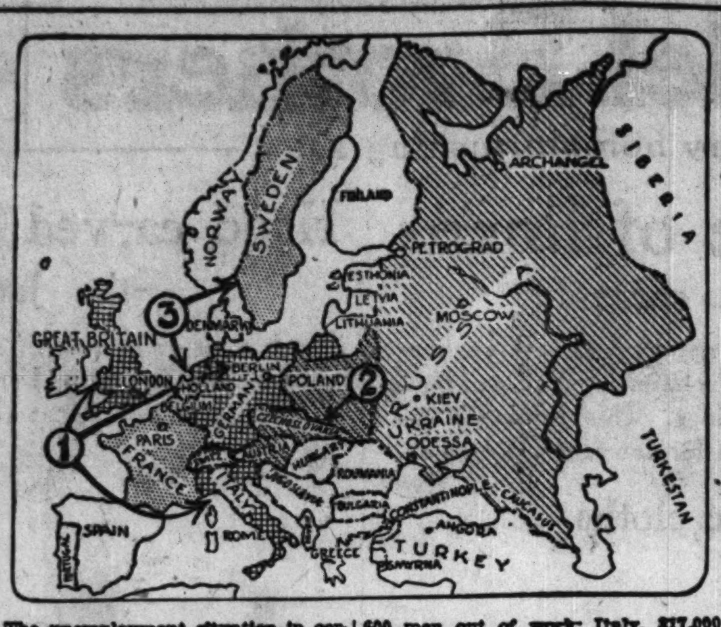
Then another overseas veteran. He talks volubly. Everybody's talking about him, everywhere he goes. "Our second most dangerous type," whispers the doctor. "Some day he'll kill somebody for talking about him." A kindly middle aged woman and her business-like looking husband appear as witnesses. The boy has lived with them. He's a good boy. Nothing at all the matter with him. They'll take care of him. He has a little automobile they gave him. He likes to putter with it. But the boy's loquacity and the hospital record before the judge are too strong. Elgin. And the government representative present to take care of ex-soldiers' interests says he'll send the automobile there, too. They're both crazy.

"Black Sheep" Among Nine.

A dull eyed boy of 17 comes in. He mumbles something about working on the railroad and being "picked up." He escaped from the Lincoln home three months ago. His mother and an older brother testify. The lad is one of nine children, the only one who ever gave any trouble. Don't send him back to Lincoln. He's better off at home. We'll take care of him. Lincoln never even notified us that he was gone, and that was last October. He'll get a chance at home. But no one will know what damage he may have done in those three months of liberty without restraint.

There are ninety cases yet to come, and a hundred or so next week, and every week thereafter. It is a place for observation by those who think of the dangers of venereal diseases, sterilization, and such things.

WHERE JOBS ARE SCARCE



The unemployment situation in certain parts of Europe is reported to be bad. England is hardest hit. Germany and Italy come next, the central European nations are not so well off, while France, Belgium, Holland, and Sweden are touched.

The map shows the situation as reported by the league of nations.

1—Bad conditions. England, 1,443,600 men out of work; Italy, 317,000; Germany, 113,231.

2—Poor employment. Czecho-Slovakia, 106,175; Poland, 87,000; Switzerland, 48,218; Austria, 38,483.

3—Fair conditions. Sweden, 37,300; Belgium, 27,110; Holland, 26,395; France, 13,497.

The condition of Russia is unknown, but it is believed to be bad.

Hold State Senator for Complicity in Bomb Plot

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 6.—State Senator Robert C. Lacey was arrested today for alleged complicity in the dynamiting and derailing of two International Railway company high speed trolley cars last August.

DEATHS OF TWO MORE LAID TO "POISON RUM"

Police opened investigation into two more deaths yesterday, which may bring the total of "moonshine" tragedies for the new year up to twenty-two.

Mrs. Emily Brown Hall, 23 years old, was found unconscious in a room at 1813 South Wabash avenue and taken to a flat at 4235 Lake Park avenue, where she died early yesterday. John Krajecki, 47 years old, died suddenly at his home at 1112 North Paulina street.

Seeks Source of Liquor.

In line with a recently established policy of Coroner Oscar Wolff to attempt the tracing of poisonous liquor to its origin in all supposed "moonshine" cases, Deputy Coroner Joseph Gubbins postponed the Krajecki inquest to Jan. 13.

Likewise the inquest in the case of Elias Linderbaum, 63 years old, 5427 South Maplewood avenue, was continued to Jan. 13 by Deputy Coroner S. F. Fitzner to permit of an analysis of vital organs.

Of Good Family.

Mrs. Hall is said to belong to a well to do family of Champaign, Ill. Hyde Park police are holding for questioning Philip Rosenwald, 40 years old, a salesman living at 315 West 98th street, who admitted he removed the woman from the Wabash avenue address to a friend's flat after finding her in an intoxicated condition.

"She telephoned me to come for her, but refused to go home," said Rosenwald.

Miss Helen Brown, a sister of South Prairie street, Champaign, hurried to Chicago when informed of the girl's death. Police so far have been unable to locate the husband.

New Invention for Feet

Banish These Troubles

Away with calluses, corns, pains at ball of foot, cramped toes, Morton's toe, sore heels and tired, aching, swollen feet caused by weak or broken arches, weak ankles or wrong weight distribution. NATURE-TREADS will work wonders for your feet in a new and simple way.

Approved Army Method

NATURE-TREADS came into existence nearly five years ago, following the tremendous amount of research work done by the world's greatest Orthopedic Surgeons who devoted their services to Uncle Sam. In countless thousands of cases it was proven beyond argument that the common types of foot troubles can be traced to the fact that too much of the bottom surface of the foot is used to stand upon. All manners of arch supports were therefore forbidden. The above illustrations clearly show what parts of the foot are made to carry weight and what parts are not. In fact, whenever the inner part, that should be arched, is used to withstand pressure—trouble follows.

Money-Back Guarantee

To try NATURE-TREADS to your own satisfaction, you have everything to gain and nothing to lose. The Money-Back Guarantee makes it possible for you to get a pair, fitted perfectly to your foot measurements, for TEN DAYS' TRIAL, during which time you are under no obligations to keep them. Wear them, test them, judge them at our risk. If at the end of ten days you are not entirely satisfied with their great blessings, bring them back and we will refund your $3.50 promptly and cheerfully.

Not Arch-Supports or Braces

NATURE-TREADS are not arch-supports, braces or elastic bands that have proven so harmful and habit-forming, but follow the absolutely new principles discovered by Military Surgeons. They are so scientifically designed as to rapidly and permanently correct foot troubles and strengthen the muscles by gently re-establishing a natural tread.

Why Foot Comfort Is Sure

NATURE-TREADS restore weight-bearing to those parts of the foot built for the purpose of withstanding great pressure, thus restoring the arch to normal without pressing against the arch surface. The friction and rubbing that cause corns, calluses, bunions and other local annoyances are also removed and blissful ease is experienced from the first moment. NATURE-TREADS are so very light (no metal, no bulk, no hardness), and oh, so comforting to the most tender foot. They are worn unnoticeably inside any style shoe, even the most delicate and dainty slippers or pumps, and are changeable from one pair of shoes to another. Considering that the exclusive use of the NATURE-TREAD method corrected the foot troubles of many thousands of soldiers, and that more than 10,000 Chicagoans alone are deriving real enjoyment through wearing NATURE-TREADS, you can feel positively certain of having sound, healthy, normal feet.

NATURE-TREADS Assist Champion

Nature-Treads have entirely removed the calluses from forward part of my feet and have stopped cramping and aching at the balls of both feet. They were worn by me to great advantage in my last boxing exhibition when I retained the welterweight boxing championship of the world.

You may use my name if you care to.

DON'T SPOIL YOUR CHILD'S HAIR BY WASHING IT

When you wash your child's hair be careful what you use. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

The Paige — The Jewett and Bird-Sykes

THIS IS OUR TWENTIETH YEAR IN BUSINESS ON Michigan Avenue. Since 1903 we have enjoyed a steadily growing volume as motor car distributors. For seventeen years this business has been owned and managed by the same men who are now here to serve you.

For eleven years we have distributed the Paige in this territory, and since last year, the Jewett—named after the president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company which manufactures it. It is of interest to you that in these eleven years the directors and managing personnel at the Paige factory have, like our own, remained unchanged. Such stability in both manufacturer and distributor speaks well for the quality of Paige and Jewett cars and for the character of the service we put behind them.

Who stands behind your car to serve you is just as important as who made your car, because no car will render enduring service without skilled attention. When you buy a Paige or a Jewett you get not only the service value the makers build into them. You get also the insurance of enduring serviceability which our organization offers you. And we pledge you our continued interest in your satisfaction.

FRENCH FEAR OF U. S. MAY HURRY GERMAN GRAB

Essen Will Be Seized in First Advance.

extent, permitting them to purchase their foodstuffs from coöperatives. The food costs would be deducted from their wages, and if they strike they will not be paid.

The semi-official Temps today announces that the exact date of the application of military measures and gages will be kept secret to facilitate pacific operations and avoid incidents.

Belgium to Send Troops.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—The council of ministers today unanimously approved the Belgian delegation's attitude at the Paris conference after statements had been made by Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Jaspar. The council was in session for four hours and discussed also measures for the execution of the French plan agreed upon at Paris.

Two Belgian divisions will assist seven French divisions in the occupation of Essen and the Ruhr district, says Le Soir this evening. It adds it has reliable information that an arrangement to this effect has already been made between the French and Belgian delegates.

Gloom in Rhineland.

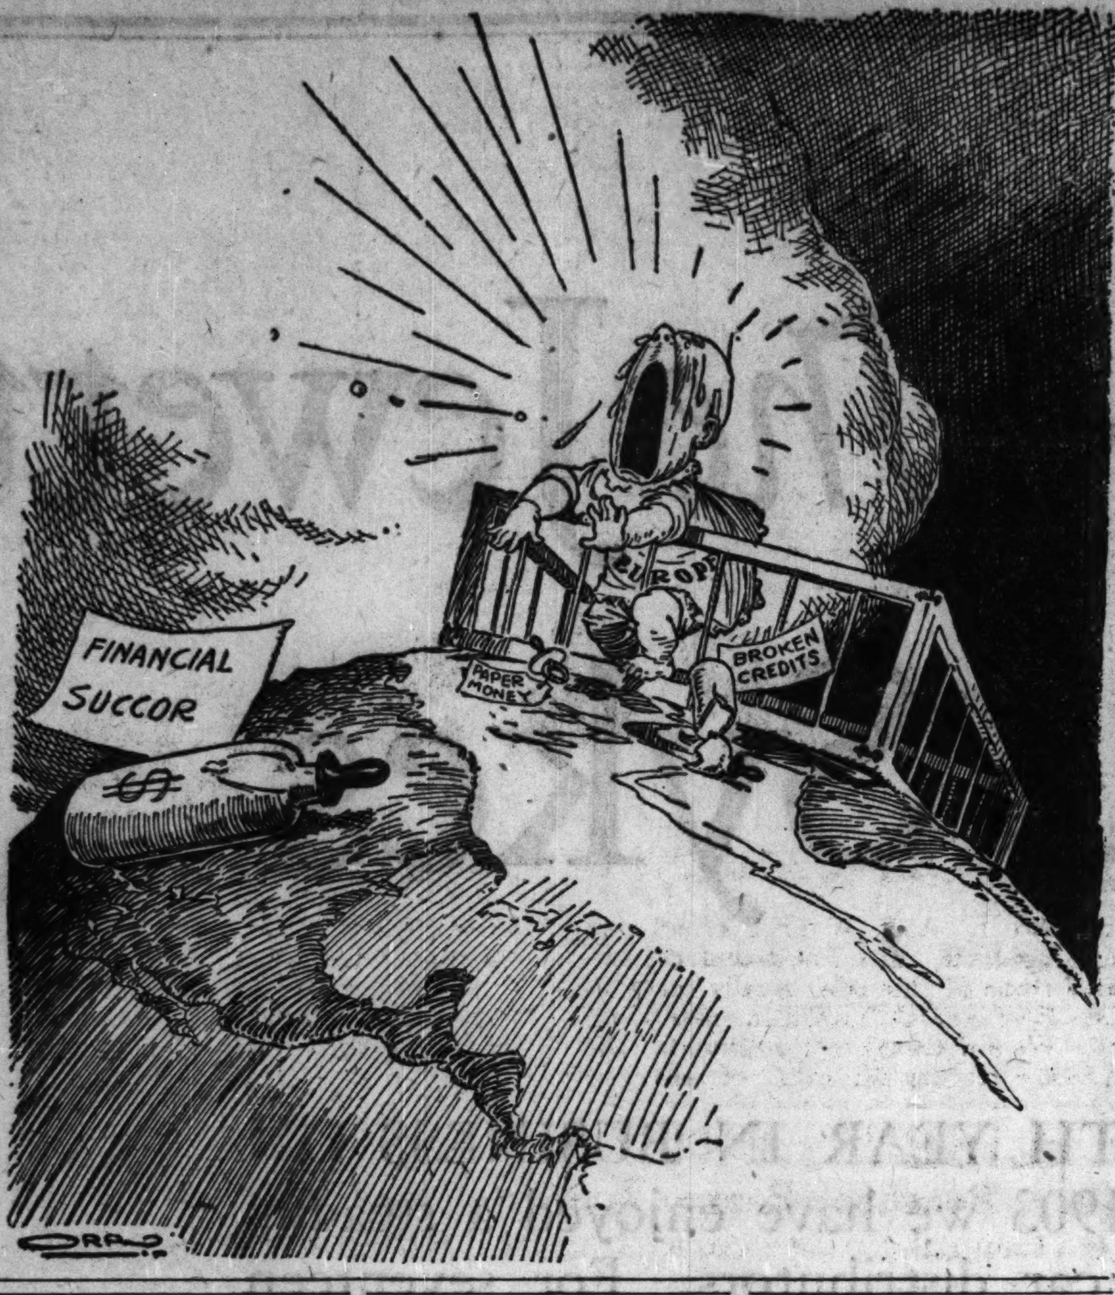
COLOGNE, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gloom prevails among the inhabitants of the occupied territory over the likelihood of more extended occupation and seizures by the French.

Economic and industrial circles express hopelessness over the prospects. It is feared the French may take over the Rhineland forests, which cover at least 20 per cent of the area of the district and most of which are owned by the various communities. These forests, local residents point out, constitute a source of livelihood for the majority of the Ruhr population, while the others depend upon them for fuel. It is further declared that the Rhenish forests fill the major demands of the German paper industry.

French Labor Leader Calls Invasion of Ruhr 'Wicked'

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Invasion of the Ruhr by France would be "wicked," Jean Longuet, French labor leader, said last night before the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. The failure of the premiers' conference on reparations, M. Longuet said, would be "extremely disastrous to Europe." M. Longuet urged that the United States take steps to prevent "further conflict."

WHAT THE NOISE IS ALL ABOUT



U. S. WATCHFULLY WAITING ON THE EUROPEAN CRISIS

Won't Try Now to Aid on Reparations.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The government is marking time with respect to the European situation. Nothing has occurred since yesterday to change the attitude of the President and Secretary Hughes that there is nothing now America can do of its own volition to be of assistance in settling the reparations problem.

Since the collapse of the premiers' conference at Paris and the disclosure that it broke up, not over the issue of the amount of German reparations, but over the method of forcing payment, the conviction has grown here that the United States can do nothing unless invited by the European governments.

No Need to Join Body.

Administration officials also are growing more firmly convinced that it is now practically unnecessary for the United States to be represented on the reparations commission, the European problem now having gone far beyond the province of that commission and demanding settlement from other forces.

Being of this opinion, the administration sentiment in the senate against the resolution introduced by Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.] is gaining and it does not appear now that this resolution will be passed.

Senator Lodge [Rep., Mass.], the majority leader, today conferred at the state department with Secretary Hughes. On his return to the senate the Republican leaders began a survey of their strength against the resolution. Senator Lodge announced that he did not consider the present an opportune time for its passage.

Harvey Golfs in Knickers.

Col. George Harvey, American ambassador to the court of St. James, also called at the state department today and conferred for a half hour with Mr. Hughes. This afternoon he was the golfing partner of President Harding, looking very quaint in his knickerbockers.

American business interests, it is reported here, are trying to be of assistance in the economic entanglement abroad. Led by the United States Chamber of Commerce, these interests are still actively engaged in an unofficial effort to find some solution of the difficulty.

SENATOR ELECT FESS BALKS AT AIDING EUROPE

Objects to U. S. Calling Economic Conference.

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Senator-elect Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, now a representative in congress, tonight asserted that this country would not stand for further loans to Europe under present conditions, opposed cancellation of the allied debts, opposed the calling of an economic conference by the United States, and declared that Europe could expect no more assistance from the United States until it put its house in order.

Mr. Fess was addressing the first of this season's luncheon gatherings of the Republican club.

Mr. Fess said that the only remedy for Europe lay in a mutual agreement between the European nations. He justified his opposition to the United States calling an economic conference by the fact that the European nations had failed to agree at three preceding conferences. Should the United States take the lead in calling such a conference, he said, it could not refuse to discuss the cancellation of the debts of $12,000,000,000 owed to the United States by the allied governments, and he added that this country was not ready for such a discussion and is in no mood to cancel these debts.

France and Britain at Odds.

"The trend in Europe is not toward unity of decision," he said. "France and Britain are tending in opposite directions. The real difference is economic, while the failure to reach agreement is political. Britain contends that the policy of France leads to industrial collapse and universal dislocation, while France contends that the British policy leads to French bankruptcy and inevitable revolution. The United States cannot safely or effectually umpire the dispute."

A plan for the stabilization of European currency, and a solution of the German reparations problem, were suggested by Alvin W. Krech, president of the Equitable Trust company. He suggested that the present debased currencies in European countries should be replaced by new currencies on a gold basis, and on the basis of the present home purchasing power of each unit.

His plan for the solution of the reparations problem called for the issue by Germany of bonds to the value of $24,000,000,000 gold marks, guaranteed by the general, state, and municipal governments, to be paid to France.

Ready for Debt Funding Meet.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—Members of the American debt funding commission prepared at a three hour conference this afternoon for the opening Monday of formal discussions on an arrangement for funding Great Britain's war time debt to the United States. Their views, members said upon leaving, were in accord on "general policy."

While the commission was in session, Gov. Norman of the Bank of England, a member of the British delegation, was a caller at the treasury. In the course of a talk with newspaper men, he expressed hope of an early agreement on British funding questions, adding that if it so happened it would be a great step toward solution of existing world problems.

Woman Dies as Surgeons Wait to Operate on Her

Mrs. Ray Wickham, 34 years old, 6515 Kenwood avenue, died at the Illinois Central hospital yesterday while under an anæsthetic. The coroner's office was notified, and an inquest will be held tomorrow. Hospital authorities said last night that their records were locked in a vault, and no one in the place at the time knew the nature of the operation about to be made on Mrs. Wickham when she died.

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION

An Attractive New Period Model at a Surprisingly Low Price

$175

WHEN The Aeolian Company, a Company of musical instrument experts, began the manufacture of phonographs, the musical world expected a better phonograph. A better phonograph the Aeolian-Vocalion has proved itself by every test. Its construction is scientifically more correct, with the result that its reproductions are clearer, more realistic and more musical.

It is also the only phonograph capable of being played by hand. Through its exclusive and wonderful Graduola, one may play the records himself, diminishing the music to a delicate softness, or swelling the Vocalion's sonorous tone to its full volume.

The Vocalion was the first phonograph to be installed in Period Cabinets. An example of the Console Period cabinet now so popular is shown herewith at a price which will have a strong appeal. This is but one of a great variety of Period Vocalions, both upright and console models.

Introductory terms in effect all this week

We will deliver to your home the beautiful new Vocalion illustrated above, complete with twenty record selections, for a very moderate cash payment—the balance

$8 Monthly

Other phonographs taken in exchange and a generous allowance made.

OLIVE BRANCH OF PEACE TO WAVE IN DUBLIN TODAY

Republicans, Free Staters to Talk It Over.

DUBLIN, Jan. 6.—[By Associated Press.]—A definite move toward peace between the Irish republicans and the Free Staters is under way, it was learned today, with the announcement that a peace convention will meet here tomorrow with 150 delegates, two from each branch of the Sinn Fein organization in the city and county of Dublin, in attendance.

The convention was arranged by committees composed equally of republican and Free State representatives. Its purpose is to summon the Ard Fheis, or general convention of the whole Sinn Fein body, which still includes representatives of both sides. The plan for a truce and subsequent peace would be submitted to the Ard Fheis.

Another Peace Meeting.

The Gaelic Athletic association, another large body embracing both Free Staters and republicans, is also meeting in Dublin tomorrow to consider peace.

Previous peace movements looking to a compromise have not been favorably received by the Free State government, it was pointed out. President Cosgrave of the Dail Eireann has characterized the many peace resolutions sent to the authorities as "moonshine." He declared he would not "risk another Four Courts." (The Four Courts building in Dublin was the headquarters of the irregulars. They seized it last April and held it until July.)

Many Hurt in Wreck.

Many persons wer injured in a collision on the Great Northern line near Dublin today when an engine, removed from a freight train by armed men and sent steaming at full speed toward Dublin, crashed into a passenger train from Howth.

The passenger train was derailed by the shock. Two of the injured were taken to a Dublin hospital.

37th Ward "Regulars" Back Brekke for Council

The regular Republican organization of the Thirty-seventh ward, meeting at 4829 West Chicago avenue, last night indorsed the candidacy of Eben T. Brekke for alderman. Brekke is a coal dealer and was born in the ward, as were also his wife and their four children.

AFTER THE WEDDING

MR. AND MRS. GORDON STERLING CLARK.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Miss Florence Montgomery Burkhardt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Burkhardt of the Edgewater Beach hotel, and Gordon Sterling Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis A. Clark of Wilmette, were married last night.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Timothy Stone at the Fourth Presbyterian church. Afterwards a reception was held for the bridal couple at the Ambassador hotel.

The bride's gown was of white velvet trimmed with point lace and pearls with a court train ornamented with lace and silver embroidery. Her tulle veil was fastened with a Russian headdress of lace and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies and white orchids.

Miss Hallie Jacques, the maid of honor, wore a gown of orchid blue chiffon and silver, and carried sweetheart roses, orchids, and sweet peas. The bridesmaids, Miss Florence Notz, Miss Katherine Prest, Miss Virginia Collins, Miss Allison Thresher, Miss Oris Gottlieb and Miss Elizabeth Elser of Milwaukee, wore frocks of orchid chiffon and silver and carried orchids and sweet peas. All of the girls wore twisted bands of silver and orchid chiffon around their heads.

Medora Pelouze, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze and a cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore pink chiffon and cream lace. Samuel Clark acted as best man for his brother.

The bride is a niece of Mayor and Mrs. William Hale Thompson. She was graduated from Mount Vernon seminary in Washington, D. C., year before last and last winter attended Miss Spence's school in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Clark will spend their honeymoon in Miami, and will be at home at the Ambassador after Feb. 15.

GERMAN SCHOOL CHILDREN DEAD OF STARVATION

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Jan. 6.—Twenty-three persons died of starvation in the Erfurt district in 1922, 50 per cent of the school children throughout Prussia are classed as "very undernourished," and 20 per cent of the children 6 years old, the usual age, as in the United States, for commencing school, are unable to attend owing to weakness from lack of food.

These are some of the statistics compiled by Dr. Krohne, a Prussian government doctor, he told the press and government officials at a reception given by the welfare ministry.

"In Prussia alone last year there were 386 cases of scurvy, which practically has been wiped out of civilized countries, while ten deaths resulted from this disease, which is the result of malnutrition. Only those understanding the nature of the disease appreciate the dreadful conditions manifested where scurvy exists."

While Berlin school children seemed to be suffering worse than in Cologne, he said, school teachers in Cologne reported that 17 per cent of the children 6 years of age were too undernourished to attend school.

Red Cross Gift of $25,000.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—In response to urgent representations by the German Red Cross, corroborated by the American ambassador at Berlin, the American Red Cross, through the state department has sent to the German Red Cross $25,000, to be applied to the alleviation of distress among German children. Ambassador Houghton reported:

"I believe the situation, as stated by the German Red Cross, is nowise exaggerated. I am advised, for instance, that the milk supply of Berlin is only one-half the former quantity; that bread consumption per capita is 104 units today, as against 240 units before the war; that in many wards of the city more than half of the children are tuberculous, and that a considerable portion of the population here is without fuel."

FORMER ENEMY SCHOLARS TO GET HELP FROM HERE

A benefit performance for the families of German and Austrian scientists and teachers will be given at the Chicago Lincoln club, Clark street and Germania place, next Friday evening. A musical program by Mark Oster of the Chicago Civic Opera company and George Mullinger and the presentation of two one-act plays will form the evening's entertainment. Tickets may be obtained from Mrs. Emil Eitel, Franklin 0339, and Mrs. Martin Schuetze, Hyde Park 2068.

The two plays will be put on by the College Players, a dramatic company founded recently by three Northwestern men, Stuart Crippen of Evanston, Everett Fox of Winnetka, and Fritz Blocki. The casts will be selected from undergraduates at Northwestern.

Sponsors of the benefit say the German and Austrian scientists are suffering more this winter than ever.

GET $500 FOR LONG SERVICE.

SHEPPARD PLANS HEAVY PENALTIES FOR BOOTLEGGER

Upshaw Law Would Make Liquor Buyer Guilty.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Liquor popped up in congress again today, two being in the way of proposed legislation. There were three different proposals dealing with booze. They were:

Proposal of Senator Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], to increase penalties for violation of the Volstead law.

Resolution by Representative Upshaw [Dem., Ga.], making purchaser of illicit liquor equally guilty with seller.

Proposal of Senator Spencer [Rep., Mo.], for a scientific commission to determine what constitutes an intoxicant.

League Fights Proposal.

The Spencer proposal faces the united opposition of the Anti-Saloon league, the W. C. T. U. and practically every temperance commission of the church denominations and other national temperance organizations, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, said today.

"The findings of such a commission would serve no helpful purpose," Mr. Wheeler said "The plan was originated by the brewers and is in their interests.

"This plan will not tend to work out a solution of the law enforcement problem, but on the other hand to confuse the issue, break down law enforcement, and ultimately to secure the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

Would Increase Penalties.

The proposal of Senator Sheppard suggests possession and transportation of liquor, now punishable by imprisonment not exceeding six months, that the prison term be lengthened to a maximum of two years.

For manufacture and selling of liquor, now punishable by punishment not exceeding six months, Senator Sheppard suggested that the prison term be lengthened to a maximum of two years.

Another plan which he is considering would hit the rich liquor holder by imposing a heavy internal revenue tax on his cellar stock.

CHILDREN HEAR FORT DEARBORN STORIES RETOLD

The Chicago public library yesterday closed the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary with a program especially for children, which was attended by nearly 700 boys and girls.

Miss Georgene Faulkner, the "story lady," dressed in a gown of the Civil war period, told the youngsters stories of Fort Dearborn, and experiences of the fire, exhibiting many relics and historical souvenirs. A bunch of keys—the only thing saved from her father's wholesale grocery—held much interest for the children.

A talk on "Old Times in Chicago," illustrated with lantern slides, was given by Mrs. Mary Ridpath Mann.

The celebration, which began last Monday, has served to acquaint many persons with the development of the institution and its value to the social and business life of Chicago, according to Carl B. Roden, librarian.

DOC REID GOT $100,000 FROM FLYNN, CHARGE

Indictment of Mayor's Friend Forecast.

was able to promote, was referred to Special Assistant Edwin Raber, indictment expert, who is engaged in drawing up the blanket indictment. His opinion was:

"A public official who shows partiality or favoritism does so in violation of the law. The statutes provide the method under which city and school board contracts may be let. If it is shown that money was paid to obtain, or in return for, contracts, there must have been partiality or favoritism shown the payer. Then all parties to the transaction would certainly be engaged in a criminal conspiracy."

Flynn Calls Mayor "Friend."

In addition to Dr. Reid, Flynn is known to number several high city officials among his friends, including Charles R. Francis, commissioner of public works, who has the awarding of coal contracts, and William H. Burkhart, brother-in-law of the mayor. Mayor Thompson himself is called "friend" by Flynn.

So influential did Flynn consider himself that when he met an anti-Thompson alderman at the door of Dr. Reid's office, he said:

"If there is anything you want from this office, alderman, I shall be glad to see that you get it."

"Door Open" to Spain.

It was understood yesterday that the "door is open" for James J. Spain, one of the indicted school engineers and a union official, to obtain immunity for himself if he follows Flynn's example and "talks freely" to the attorney general. Spain is charged with having bribed state officials and with having "donated" to Trustee Albert H. Severinghaus. It is believed he can tell of many irregularities in school coal, supplies, repairs, and construction. It was reported that the prosecutors had decided to give him "a clean bill of health" if he accepts their offer.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble, you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable Rash and blotches are healed right up. Rowles Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.

SEEK BOY BELIEVED MAKING WAY BACK TO MICHIGAN HOME

PAUL PATTON.

The help of THE TRIBUNE has been asked in the search for Paul Patton, 16 years old, son of E. J. Patton, 2700 East Mapleton avenue, Boulder, Colo., who left home on Dec. 29 and has not been seen since. The family came to Boulder from Buchanan, Mich., about a month ago and it is thought probable that the boy is attempting to make his way back there. He is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, and has light brown hair. He was wearing a brown suit and dark cap when he disappeared, but no overcoat, and as far as is known had no funds. He is described as a fluent talker.

SILHOUETTE IS CLEW TO ARREST OF ARTIST, GIRL

Ward Herbert Snyder, 54 years old, a canvas painter, magazine picture artist and photographer, was arrested last night with Miss Florence Stone, 19 years old, 5874 Prairie avenue, a stenographer, in Snyder's studio, in the Transportation building. They were charged with disorderly conduct and will be arraigned in the South Clark street court tomorrow.

Members of the bureau of identification of the South Clark street police station saw the silhouette of a man embracing a girl on the curtain of Snyder's office. Investigating, they found a dozen alleged obscene photographs in the studio. Snyder said he used them in place of models for his illustrations. He will be charged with having these photos in his possession, as well as with disorderly conduct, police say. Lawrence E. Dowd, attorney, furnished bond for both Snyder and Miss Stone.

First Spring Flower Show to Be Held Here Next April

Chicago's first annual spring flower show will be held in the Broadway Armory during the week beginning April 16, it was announced yesterday by Peter Pearson, president of the Chicago Flower Show association, which has just been organized by the Flower Growers association, the Allied Florists and the Florists club. Only finished displays will be shown and the entire center of the armory will be made into a sunken garden, the other displays being grouped around the four sides.

36 yrs. to pay for your Farm in California

Seize This Opportunity Now —Only Eighty Left!

AN official representative of the Division of Land Settlement, State of California, who is also superintendent of the Durham Settlement in that state, is in Chicago.

He has come to tell you how you can buy a profit bearing farm in California under a plan that allows you 36 years to pay for it.

According to the unusual land settlement projects of the State of California—at Durham and Delhi—the settler enjoys the following remarkable privileges and advantages:

1. A long period of payments and low interest rates.
2. In setting the acreage price no profit is added to the land, as the motive is public welfare, and there are practically no selling expenses.
3. Ability to buy materials at lower prices through the state purchasing agent.

At the present time there are eighty farms in the two state settlements located at Delhi and Durham awaiting owners. Millions of dollars have been spent to make them ready for colonization. And money will continue to be spent for no other reason than to help the new settler work out his problem. In other words, when you begin to farm at Delhi or Durham, you are backed by the personal assistance of farm experts who have no other purpose in mind than to help you succeed.

Helping settlers to plan their development and to organize for working together in business has enabled Durham farmers to get extra prices for their products. It is saving Delhi farmers 10% on the cost of all their farm buildings. It enables them to get better stock for less money, and to sell their hay, poultry and eggs for better prices. Their dollars go farther because of this teamwork and expert direction. At the present time the Durham Settlement has a surplus of $142,000; Delhi, $250,000.

Here, then, is your opportunity. Your desire to work and live in California under the most favorable conditions can be realized by taking up one of these farms. But in order that you may know more about Delhi and Durham—how you can buy a farm there and take 36 years to pay for it—see the representative of the Division of Land Settlement, Department of Public Works, State of California, while he is in Chicago.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In 1920 and 1921—hard years for agriculture—the California farmer enjoyed prosperity, and increased in numbers and wealth.

Between 1910 and 1920, according to the 1920 census, there was an increase of 88,496 new farms in the whole United States. Of these, 29,493, or almost one-third, were in California. Of the eight leading counties in national agricultural production, five were in California: the first, the second, the fourth, the seventh and eighth.

In 1920 and 1921 California stood second in the value of crops produced. In the average crop value per farm, California leads the first five crop producing states from 100% to 200%.

Why California's farmers are more prosperous

These facts are important to every man and woman interested in farm life:

In California the unending variety of climate and soil enables the farmer to produce anything that will grow anywhere in the United States. In California double cropping—planting and harvesting—goes on every day in the year.

In California specialized production of a few crops in each rural community or district permits of a more economical solution of growing problems.

In California co-operative marketing removes the burden of individual selling. It helps to improve and standardize qualities, commanding better prices. It establishes and widens permanent markets through national advertising.

In California moisture is controlled through advanced irrigation methods. Three-fourths of the state's agricultural wealth is found in irrigation districts. There are one million acres in California now ready for settlement. Private enterprises modeled in many respects after the state land settlement projects offer genuine opportunities and long-time payments for the prospective settler.

The agricultural world realizes today that California with its great valley, and its many smaller fertile valleys, is a land of sure promise for the farmer. There are but three and one-half million persons living in California, a state capable of supporting 30,000,000 in prosperity.

Californians Inc., a non-profit organization composed of California citizens and institutions interested in the sound development of the state, will provide authoritative information that will enable you to decide whether California's opportunities measure up to your ability and the stake you want to invest in California.

SHEPPARD PLANS HEAVY PENALTIES FOR BOOTLEGGER

Upshaw Law Would Make Liquor Buyer Guilty.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Liquor popped up in congress again today, two being in the way of proposed legislation. There were three different proposals dealing with booze. They were:

Proposal of Senator Sheppard [Dem., Tex.], to increase penalties for violation of the Volstead law.

Resolution by Representative Upshaw [Dem., Ga.], making purchaser of illicit liquor equally guilty with seller.

Proposal of Senator Spencer [Rep., Mo.], for a scientific commission to determine what constitutes an intoxicant.

League Fights Proposal.

The Spencer proposal faces the united opposition of the Anti-Saloon league, the W. C. T. U. and practically every temperance commission of the church denominations and other national temperance organizations, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, said today.

"The findings of such a commission would serve no helpful purpose," Mr. Wheeler said "The plan was originated by the brewers and is in their interests.

"This plan will not tend to work out a solution of the law enforcement problem, but on the other hand to confuse the issue, break down law enforcement, and ultimately to secure the repeal of the eighteenth amendment."

Would Increase Penalties.

The proposal of Senator Sheppard suggests possession and transportation of liquor, now punishable by imprisonment not exceeding six months, that the prison term be lengthened to a maximum of two years.

For manufacture and selling of liquor, now punishable by punishment not exceeding six months, Senator Sheppard suggested that the prison term be lengthened to a maximum of two years.

Another plan which he is considering would hit the rich liquor holder by imposing a heavy internal revenue tax on his cellar stock.

CHILDREN HEAR FORT DEARBORN STORIES RETOLD

The Chicago public library yesterday closed the celebration of its fiftieth anniversary with a program especially for children, which was attended by nearly 700 boys and girls.

Miss Georgene Faulkner, the "story lady," dressed in a gown of the Civil war period, told the youngsters stories of Fort Dearborn, and experiences of the fire, exhibiting many relics and historical souvenirs. A bunch of keys—the only thing saved from her father's wholesale grocery—held much interest for the children.

A talk on "Old Times in Chicago," illustrated with lantern slides, was given by Mrs. Mary Ridpath Mann.

The celebration, which began last Monday, has served to acquaint many persons with the development of the institution and its value to the social and business life of Chicago, according to Carl B. Roden, librarian.

DOC REID GOT $100,000 FROM FLYNN, CHARGE

Indictment of Mayor's Friend Forecast.

was able to promote, was referred to Special Assistant Edwin Raber, indictment expert, who is engaged in drawing up the blanket indictment. His opinion was:

"A public official who shows partiality or favoritism does so in violation of the law. The statutes provide the method under which city and school board contracts may be let. If it is shown that money was paid to obtain, or in return for, contracts, there must have been partiality or favoritism shown the payer. Then all parties to the transaction would certainly be engaged in a criminal conspiracy."

Flynn Calls Mayor "Friend."

In addition to Dr. Reid, Flynn is known to number several high city officials among his friends, including Charles R. Francis, commissioner of public works, who has the awarding of coal contracts, and William H. Burkhart, brother-in-law of the mayor. Mayor Thompson himself is called "friend" by Flynn.

So influential did Flynn consider himself that when he met an anti-Thompson alderman at the door of Dr. Reid's office, he said:

"If there is anything you want from this office, alderman, I shall be glad to see that you get it."

"Door Open" to Spain.

It was understood yesterday that the "door is open" for James J. Spain, one of the indicted school engineers and a union official, to obtain immunity for himself if he follows Flynn's example and "talks freely" to the attorney general. Spain is charged with having bribed state officials and with having "donated" to Trustee Albert H. Severinghaus. It is believed he can tell of many irregularities in school coal, supplies, repairs, and construction. It was reported that the prosecutors had decided to give him "a clean bill of health" if he accepts their offer.

SEEK BOY BELIEVED MAKING WAY BACK TO MICHIGAN HOME

PAUL PATTON.

The help of THE TRIBUNE has been asked in the search for Paul Patton, 16 years old, son of E. J. Patton, 2700 East Mapleton avenue, Boulder, Colo., who left home on Dec. 29 and has not been seen since. The family came to Boulder from Buchanan, Mich., about a month ago and it is thought probable that the boy is attempting to make his way back there. He is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds, and has light brown hair. He was wearing a brown suit and dark cap when he disappeared, but no overcoat, and as far as is known had no funds. He is described as a fluent talker.

SILHOUETTE IS CLEW TO ARREST OF ARTIST, GIRL

Ward Herbert Snyder, 54 years old, a canvas painter, magazine picture artist and photographer, was arrested last night with Miss Florence Stone, 19 years old, 5874 Prairie avenue, a stenographer, in Snyder's studio, in the Transportation building. They were charged with disorderly conduct and will be arraigned in the South Clark street court tomorrow.

Members of the bureau of identification of the South Clark street police station saw the silhouette of a man embracing a girl on the curtain of Snyder's office. Investigating, they found a dozen alleged obscene photographs in the studio. Snyder said he used them in place of models for his illustrations. He will be charged with having these photos in his possession, as well as with disorderly conduct, police say. Lawrence E. Dowd, attorney, furnished bond for both Snyder and Miss Stone.

First Spring Flower Show to Be Held Here Next April

Chicago's first annual spring flower show will be held in the Broadway Armory during the week beginning April 16, it was announced yesterday by Peter Pearson, president of the Chicago Flower Show association, which has just been organized by the Flower Growers association, the Allied Florists and the Florists club. Only finished displays will be shown and the entire center of the armory will be made into a sunken garden, the other displays being grouped around the four sides.

SULPHUR SOOTHES UGLY, ITCHING SKIN

The First Application Makes Skin Cool and Comfortable

If you are suffering from eczema or some other torturing, embarrassing skin trouble, you may quickly be rid of it by using Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist.

This sulphur preparation, because of its germ destroying properties, seldom fails to quickly subdue itching, even of fiery eczema. The first application makes the skin cool and comfortable Rash and blotches are healed right up. Rowles Mentho-Sulphur is applied like any pleasant cold cream and is perfectly harmless. You can obtain a small jar from any good druggist.

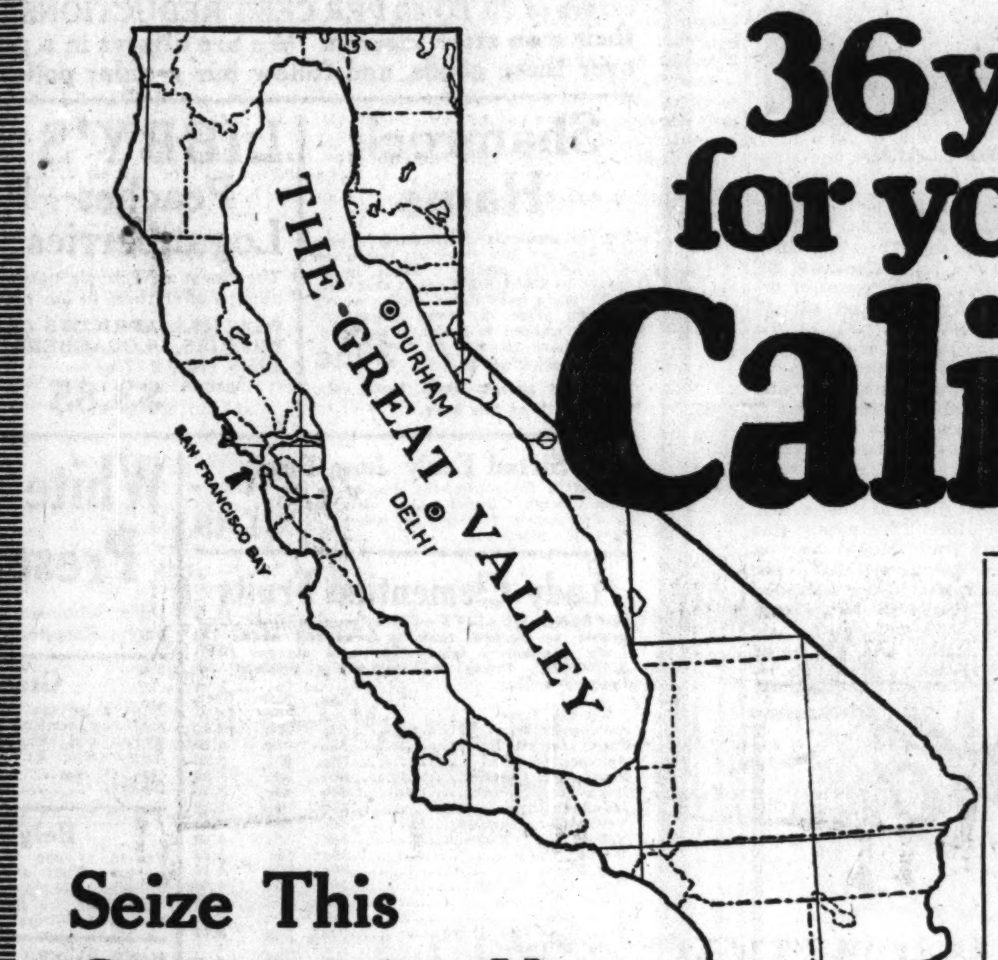
36 yrs. to pay for your Farm in California



Seize This Opportunity Now —Only Eighty Left!

AN official representative of the Division of Land Settlement, State of California, who is also superintendent of the Durham Settlement in that state, is in Chicago.

He has come to tell you how you can buy a profit bearing farm in California under a plan that allows you 36 years to pay for it.

According to the unusual land settlement projects of the State of California—at Durham and Delhi—the settler enjoys the following remarkable privileges and advantages:

1. A long period of payments and low interest rates.
2. In setting the acreage price no profit is added to the land, as the motive is public welfare, and there are practically no selling expenses.
3. Ability to buy materials at lower prices through the state purchasing agent.

At the present time there are eighty farms in the two state settlements located at Delhi and Durham awaiting owners. Millions of dollars have been spent to make them ready for colonization. And money will continue to be spent for no other reason than to help the new settler work out his problem. In other words, when you begin to farm at Delhi or Durham, you are backed by the personal assistance of farm experts who have no other purpose in mind than to help you succeed.

Helping settlers to plan their development and to organize for working together in business has enabled Durham farmers to get extra prices for their products. It is saving Delhi farmers 10% on the cost of all their farm buildings. It enables them to get better stock for less money, and to sell their hay, poultry and eggs for better prices. Their dollars go farther because of this teamwork and expert direction. At the present time the Durham Settlement has a surplus of $142,000; Delhi, $250,000.

Here, then, is your opportunity. Your desire to work and live in California under the most favorable conditions can be realized by taking up one of these farms. But in order that you may know more about Delhi and Durham—how you can buy a farm there and take 36 years to pay for it—see the representative of the Division of Land Settlement, Department of Public Works, State of California, while he is in Chicago.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA

In 1920 and 1921—hard years for agriculture—the California farmer enjoyed prosperity, and increased in numbers and wealth.

Between 1910 and 1920, according to the 1920 census, there was an increase of 88,496 new farms in the whole United States. Of these, 29,493, or almost one-third, were in California. Of the eight leading counties in national agricultural production, five were in California: the first, the second, the fourth, the seventh and eighth.

In 1920 and 1921 California stood second in the value of crops produced. In the average crop value per farm, California leads the first five crop producing states from 100% to 200%.

Why California's farmers are more prosperous

These facts are important to every man and woman interested in farm life:

In California the unending variety of climate and soil enables the farmer to produce anything that will grow anywhere in the United States. In California double cropping—planting and harvesting—goes on every day in the year.

In California specialized production of a few crops in each rural community or district permits of a more economical solution of growing problems.

In California co-operative marketing removes the burden of individual selling. It helps to improve and standardize qualities, commanding better prices. It establishes and widens permanent markets through national advertising.

In California moisture is controlled through advanced irrigation methods. Three-fourths of the state's agricultural wealth is found in irrigation districts. There are one million acres in California now ready for settlement. Private enterprises modeled in many respects after the state land settlement projects offer genuine opportunities and long-time payments for the prospective settler.

The agricultural world realizes today that California with its great valley, and its many smaller fertile valleys, is a land of sure promise for the farmer. There are but three and one-half million persons living in California, a state capable of supporting 30,000,000 in prosperity.

Californians Inc., a non-profit organization composed of California citizens and institutions interested in the sound development of the state, will provide authoritative information that will enable you to decide whether California's opportunities measure up to your ability and the stake you want to invest in California.

GREEK FINANCE MINISTER SEEKS NORMALCY, TOO

Intends to Lay Heavy Taxes on People.

BY FRANK WILLS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ATHENS, Jan. 6.—"Compared with the other Balkan states our finances give no cause for despondency," said George Kophinas, the new minister of finance, when I interviewed him today on the economic position of the country. "Our currency is better than Bulgaria's or Serbia's, although Greece has tripled her population as a result of the war, and has received a loan of $100,000,000 from America. Our currency also is better than the Roumanian lei, which is only worth fifty per cent of the value of the drachma, although Roumania is a country with 17,000,000 people."

"How long has it been since the Greek revenues equaled the expenditures?"

"Not since pre-war days," he replied. "The war upset everything. But if we obtain peace and increase taxation, which we already have commenced, and leave out the refugee question, the budget will be balanced."

No Need of Loan.

"Then you will not need a foreign loan?"

"A loan is unnecessary if America restores the credit of $33,000,000 originally promised, and England and France do the same. Those credits were revoked on account of the restoration of King Constantine, and now that he is no longer here we expect the credits to be reopened."

"Is it true that the government intends to grant large concessions to foreigners in order to employ refugees and bolster up the drachma?"

"A proposition has been advanced and is being considered by the cabinet. It is mainly a reclamation project for Macedonia swamps."

"In view of the recent issue of 600,000,000 paper drachmas, the question is arising in the minds of outsiders, if Greece intends to follow the example of Germany, Austria, and Russia and print indefinite quantities of paper money. I realize you are unable to answer in the affirmative, but you are in a position to give an assurance that that will not be done."

Policy to Increase Taxes.

"My policy is to increase taxation, which the country can stand, gradually withdrawing paper money. I wish to create confidence abroad that Greece has a firm, sound economic plan, which only can be done by throwing a larger share of the burden of debts which the government inherited upon the people."

International Crooks Get $250,000 Worth of Bonds

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Bonds valued at nearly $250,000 were stolen while en route to Buenos Aires from London by way of Paris recently, according to the Evening News today. No details were given of the robbery, which is the latest of a series of successful exploits by mail bag thieves.

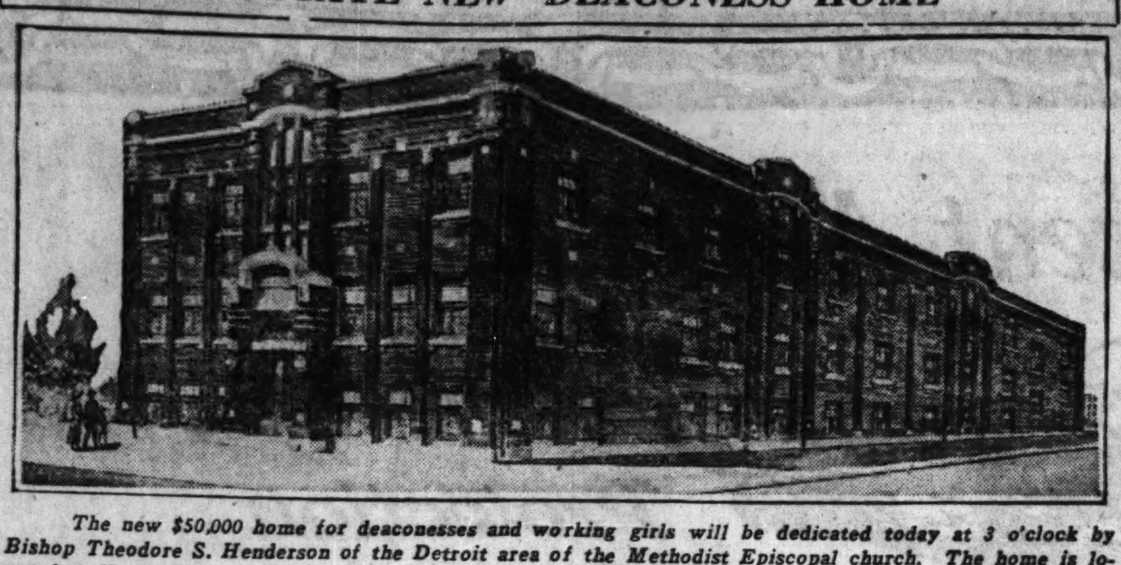
DEDICATE NEW DEACONESS HOME



The new $50,000 home for deaconesses and working girls will be dedicated today at 3 o'clock by Bishop Theodore S. Henderson of the Detroit area of the Methodist Episcopal church. The home is located at North Sawyer avenue and Cortland street. Assisting Bishop Henderson will be the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the Chicago Temple.

LACK OF LABOR MAY LIFT BARS AT ELLIS ISLAND

Congress Is Puzzled by New Tests.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Radical changes in the immigration system will be strongly urged upon the next congress before the expiration of the 3 per cent restriction law June 30, 1924.

That rigid restriction of immigration will be continued is not doubted. The administration, however, will direct its efforts toward the establishment of a system of careful selection of the permitted quotas from the hordes of foreigners seeking to migrate to our shores.

As a result of the hearings this week held by the house immigration committee on bills proposing the admission of aliens in excess of established quotas to relieve the shortage of common labor and the admission of war refugees, it is apparent that if the expiring session of this congress takes any action at all it will be of an emergency and transitory, not a fundamental character.

Fails to Make Selection.

The general criticism from administration sources is that while the 3 per cent law is holding down the volume of immigration, it falls far short of effectiveness in aiding desirable and preventing undesirable classes of foreigners to migrate to the United States.

At the very beginning of the process of immigration, the law is defective, according to Secretary of Labor Davis, in requiring the prospective immigrant to obtain a passport from his government. That enables foreign governments to determine in the first instance which citizens or subjects shall and which shall not be permitted to migrate to America.

Some European nations have taken advantage of this provision to facilitate the departure of undesirable classes of their populations for America by granting such persons passports, while keeping the desirable classes at home by refusing passports.

This complaint is made against Poland and Roumania particularly. According to the department of labor both the Polish and Roumanian governments restricted the issuance of passports conspicuously to persons deemed undesirable.

Grants One Way Passports.

Roumania even went so far as to issue a passport to undesirables which could be used going to but not returning from America. Once out of Roumania they could not get back, even when rejected at American ports of entry. The United States put a stop to that procedure by refusing to recognize such passports.

Instead of requiring the immigrant to present a passport viséd by an American consul, the law, Mr. Davis suggests, should require only a consular certificate. Then the foreign government would not be required by our law to pass on the immigrant first.

President Harding has recommended to congress the establishment of a system of examining prospective immigrants abroad as a means of furthering the selection of more desirable classes of aliens to add to our population.

Offers Change in Policy.

A tentative bill being drafted by Secretary Davis to carry out the President's recommendations proposes that instead of 3 per cent of the alien population of 1910, as the present law provides, the limitation be fixed at one-half of 1 per cent for all countries, provided that immigrants up to 3 per cent will be admitted from such nations as permit American examination of the immigrants on their native soil.

Foreign countries steadfastly have refused to allow the United States to examine immigrants at ports of departure on the ground that the exercise of that function by another nation would be an invasion of sovereignty.

The theory of the tentative Davis bill is that in order to obtain the 3 per cent quota, a foreign nation would request American examination of immigrants within its jurisdiction. This view of the matter and of the feasibility of overseas examination is not shared by the chairmen of the immigration committees of congress.

At present the only overseas check on immigration by this country is the exercise of the authority vested in consuls to refuse to visa the passports of politically undesirable aliens seeking to enter the United States.

This practice was resorted to as a war necessity of mutual benefit to existing governments, but does not extend to the withholding of visas for other causes. A consul may and does warn an intending immigrant if his chance of admission under the terms of the immigration law obviously is slim or nonexistent, but he may not withhold the visa if the alien insists on trying his luck with the immigration inspectors on this side, provided his civic fitness is not in question.

Attempts to extend these powers to include direct action in examination and selection of immigrants have been consistently objected to by France, Italy and other foreign governments.

BOYHOOD CHUMS BEG LENIN FOR HORSES TO PLOW

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MOSCOW, Jan. 6.—[Tribune Radio.]—The boys who played hide and seek with Premier Lenin, who ran after the plows when their fathers plowed and who stayed out all night in the woods guarding their horses today are writing the premier a heart touching appeal.

Here Is Protocol.

A remarkable protocol signed by all the boys, now grown to manhood, and addressed to "our comrade, Vladimir," says:

"We watched the horses in the woods together. It was forty-five years ago. Since then we have rid our village of the landlords who sat on our necks for fifteen years. Then came the catastrophe of the famine, our cattle died, our property is gone, our houses are falling to pieces—the famine has wiped out everything.

"We cannot send you a Christmas present. We have nothing. We have paid the grain taxes in full. We have two great sorrows. We have no horses and no school. We know the soviets will give us horses on credit, so we ask you as a playmate to ask the soviets to supply us with horses. Without horses we are workers without hands, we have land but nothing to work it with.

Honor for His Mother.

"We also ask a school for professions and for literacy. We will name the school after your dear mother, Mary Alexandrovno. In conclusion we ask you to conserve your health because you are the only one for us in all Russia. When the school is built you must be our guest, and we will reminisce over old times when we played games together and watched the horses. Henceforth the village of Kukushkino will be named after our comrade, Lenin."

An appeal for the soviets to pay school teachers higher wages than those paid any profession, and proportionately more than in any country of Europe or America, because school teachers belong to the most important profession, is made by M. Lenin in the preface of a book on literacy which was released today.

OFFICE OF THE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

ILLINOIS
TRUST & SAVINGS BANK CHICAGO

December 9th,1922

After a thorough investigation of the Grizzard System and its service in other cities in placing life insurance in Old Line. Legal Reserve Companies on a monthly deposit basis, we have consented to act as its exclusive depository in the city of Chicago, in the belief that it is founded on sound business principles, and will be of benefit to this community.

Chairman of the Board.

ONE of the established principles of modern life is that thrift is the basis of success and that systematic saving is the bedrock of thrift. Another principle of modern life is that every man should not only provide daily bread and shelter for his dependents during life, but also make adequate provision for their needs after his death. The most feasible arrangement for making this provision is through the medium of old line legal reserve life insurance.

The principle of life insurance is so well established and so universally acknowledged and popular that practically all men have old line insurance for some amount. The majority, however, are not adequately insured. The death of a friend or acquaintance emphasizes this truism, and besides, who ever heard of anyone dying over-insured? Everyone would maintain a greater volume of old line insurance if they felt able to do so; or, being able, could have the advantage of a convenient, yet dignified arrangement for the payment of premiums that would be more in accord with the present day custom of financing practically everything else with current earnings—that is to say, on a monthly budget basis, according as the monthly income is received.

How It Works

The origination and organization of the Grizzard System six years ago was prompted by the thought of combining the great, vital need and increasing demand for adequate life insurance protection and a method of maintaining it on a basis more convenient than heretofore possible.

It provides that you may secure immediately and maintain regularly, from year to year, until the maturity of your policy, an additional amount of old line life insurance in any form of policy, in any one of several established, well-known, old line, legal reserve life insurance companies represented by us, and do this through monthly deposits in our exclusive depository, the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, the first deposit placing the policy in full force.

A Cash Estate

For yourself if you live—For your family if you die

If you live, and maintain your policy to maturity, you actually will have saved the amount deposited in the bank, because you may then cash in the policy yourself if desired. If you die at any time after making the first deposit in the bank, you will have instantly provided for your loved ones a greater sum of money than you intended to have had you lived, because the family will immediately receive the full face amount of the life insurance policy in spot cash, or in monthly installments, as you wish, thus best illustrating and demonstrating the investment, as well as the protective value of old line life insurance when taken under this system.

Business Men—Salaried Persons

Salaried persons, as well as men in business and the professions who, invariably, finance monthly, will be interested in the Grizzard System, which provides for premium payment with current income. Do you know a better way or an easier way to immediately establish an estate for yourself merely by making your first month's deposit and at the same time absolutely guarantee the future welfare of your loved ones? Although you already have old line life insurance you should have more—you should double it, and the Grizzard System makes it possible for you to do it.

Invitation

To Business Men, Professional Men, Salaried Men—Women—to everyone who is honestly thinking about the future, the Grizzard System calls:—the New Year is here—turn over the right leaf before it is too late, get detailed information—right now while you are in good health,—concerning an old line life insurance policy under the dignified monthly deposit method of the

RICHARDS BEATS CHAMP TILDEN IN THREE SET MATCH

Upset of Big Bill Ends Indoor Contests Here.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

AFTERNOON MATCHES.

William Tilden beat Francis Hunter, 3—6, 8—6, 8—6.

Howard Voshell and Vincent Richards split, Voshell winning first set, 6—3, dropping second, 8—6.

EVENING MATCHES.

Vincent Richards beat William Tilden, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3.

Voshell and Hardy beat Hunter and Richards, 6—2, 6—3.

VINCENT RICHARDS

Young Vinny Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., slight in stature but a dynamo on the tennis court, buzzed along merrily last night, and the effect sent World's Champion William T. Tilden II. tumbling into defeat, 4—6, 6—0, and 6—3, in the feature indoor match of the evening at the Drake hotel. It was the first setback Tilden has received in his steps to retain his preëminence following amputation of a part of his middle finger on his right hand two months ago.

Richards, starring in the role of pupil besting his teacher, played a sensational game and accomplished the exceedingly rare feat of taking a love set from the national champion. In justice to Big Bill it must be admitted that the injury seemed to bother him. Apparently heedless of the hand in the earlier frays, in this match his steel grip was shaken and almost completely loosened several times.

First Set to Tilden.

After the national title holder took the first set by clever placement shots along the baseline, Richards started a run and handled everything in sight. He repeatedly feinted Bill to one side and then left him flat footed with a beautiful backhand shot to the other corner. Forcing Tilden to the baseline, he would rush the net and with astonishing agility and darting thrusts of his racquet return Tilden's offerings for points.

He also secured the breaks. At least eight of his returns struck the top of the net and dropped over dead for points. Tilden fought back savagely in the third set, but Vinny, with victory almost in his grasp, continued his wildfire tactics and swept on to triumph. The defeat was lightly taken and Tilden was the first to congratulate his former protégé.

Voshell and Hardy Win.

In the initial evening skirmish Howard Voshell and Sam Hardy, veteran and Davis cup captain of 1920, defeated Richards and Francis Hunter, 6—2, 6—3. Voshell's play was the determining factor. His sizzling serve and smashes bored through for consistent points. Hardy aided with well directed shots. Hunter was far from the form displayed in his afternoon singles match with Tilden, and seemed tired. The afternoon fray found Big Bill triumphant over Hunter, 3—6, 8—6, 8—6.

In the other matinee match Voshell and Richards hooked up in what seemed destined for an endurance test, but with the score standing one set apiece were forced to call a halt due to the lateness of the hour. Voshell drew first blood, 6—3, the second set going to the Yonkers lad, 8—6.

The two days of matches attracted a gathering of about 1,500 and the play was enthusiastically received. The exhibitions were under sanction of the Western L. T. A. and the Chicago T. A.

GREENLEAF RUNS 172 IN POCKET BILLIARDS FOR A CHICAGO RECORD

RALPH GREENLEAF, world's pocket billiard champion, ran 172 in his exhibition match at the Madison Square room yesterday afternoon. Playing in a 125 ball match against Jack Spehn, Greenleaf ran 23 in the first inning, 82 in the second, and in the third ran out and continued his run to 172 balls. Spehn gathered 49 balls in three innings.

Greenleaf's run broke all local records for a pocket match. In the evening match, Greenleaf defeated his manager, Edgar Spears, 125 to 41. The champion will give an exhibition at Kenosha, Wis. tomorrow.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

ENGLISH DERBY.

AMERICAN owners who have made nominations for the English Derby at Epsom Downs June 4, a race first run in 1780 and renewed there every year since except during the war period, when the course was used for military purposes and the event conducted at Newmarket under the name "New Derby," are Marshall Field, Foxhall Keene, Willis Sharpe Kilmer, A. K. Macomber, John E. Madden, J. E. Widener, and J. W. Corrigan.

The Wake envies our British cousins the opportunity to see the highly bred colts and fillies of these owners perform. Under other conditions The Wake and thousands of other Chicagoans might see these blooded equine aristocrats show their wares.

Thousands of Chicagoans on a certain Saturday in May make of Louisville a Mecca that they may view the Kentucky Derby, which dates back to 1875. The blue grass event has become a fixed date in the holiday calendar of many sport lovers.

We once had an American Derby in Chicago. We could have it again, greater than ever, if a law were enacted guaranteeing permanency to the efforts of those willing to spend their money to bring back racing in Illinois.

"Wee Willie" Strikes Out.

They tell me Willie Keeler's gone,
The star of long ago;
No greater has the sun shone on,
No fan will say me no.

When asked as to his great success,
With sportsmanlike restraint,
He smiled and answered, "Well, I guess
I hit 'em where they ain't."

The record of his wondrous skill
Adorns the Hall of Fame,
While baseball lives the world will thrill
At mention of his name.

"Wee Willie" needs no eulogy,
Mere words his fame attaint,
He'd have us say, it seems to me—
"He hit 'em where they ain't."

Dear Harvey: Reading of the passing of the last survivor of the crew of the Monitor which defeated the Confederate ship Merrimac March 6, 1862, caused me to wonder if any of your "Grand Army of Helpers" remember the song which became popular at that time and can supply the missing verses. It began:

There was a little Monitor,
She sailed across and back,
She fought seven hours
Beside the Merrimac.
And when she opened fire
She made the Merrimac sound,
She struck her with a ball
That weighed 180 pounds.

Wisconsin toppled its first foe of the conference basketball season last night by crushing Northwestern, 21 to 10, in a game featured by the guarding and basket shooting performances of Capt. Gus Tebell and Rollie Williams. Taking an early lead on free throws the Badgers kept well in the fore during the entire contest, which stood 8 to 5 at half time.

Northwestern was held to five points in the final period, and seldom could work the oval into a possible shooting position. The Purple forwards resorted to long shots from anywhere, most of which went wild. It was a game of guarding and fast floor work, rather than one of scoring. Wisconsin's running attack which outclassed the Purple, but its guarding was the principal route to victory.

For Northwestern Capt. McKenzie and Paterson did a good share of the work. Holmes made the only basket in the first half and McKenzie and Stegman netted the ringers in the closing session.

Iowa and Chicago began the Big Ten season last night, the former defeating the latter, 35 to 23, at the Midway in a game in which the husky Hawkeyes showed speed and teamwork which will permit them high aspirations in the conferenece title race. Iowa led at half time, 19-14.

The visiting quintet staged a fast smashing attack which netted a half dozen points at the start and which forced the Maroons to assume a tight defensive. Only on a few occasions were the local cagers able to break through the Hawkeye defense and retain the ball.

Near the middle of the first half Chicago forged to the front by one point when, the score 10 to 12, Yardley hooped a long shot, and a little later Barnes, the outstanding performer on the Maroon five, dropped one through the basket on a free throw.

Janse and Laude were stars on Coach Sam Barry's crew, the former being a sure-fire shooter, playing his game within shooting distance of the basket and getting numerous opportunities to score. Burgitt played a good, rangy game, working effectively at both ends of the court. Lineup:

MICHIGAN, 30; ILLINOIS, 13

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Because Michigan presented a powerful five man defense which the Illinois passers were unable to penetrate, the Wolverines were able to open their conference basketball season this evening with an easy win, 30 to 13. Few times were the Illinois forwards permitted past the center of the court, and they were compelled to resort almost exclusively to long shots

Haggerty, Coach Mather's latest find, played a stellar game at forward and chalked up six field goals before the visitors' guards were able to stop him. Michigan led at the end of the first half, 11 to 3. Lineup:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter Chicago Tribune." For today's question Miss Genevieve Shearer, 1124 Clarence avenue, Oak Park, Ill., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Should women of today be as much interested in athletics as men?

Where Asked.

Madison and Dearborn streets.

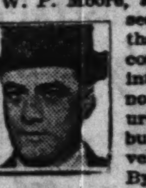
The Answers.

Dwight C. Moore, 853 Peoples Gas building, advertising—Certainly. She should not only be interested in athletics but she should participate in them so far as possible. Many sports are as well suited for women as for men, if not more so. Girls no longer walk miles to school like they used to, and such exercise as they get they take vicariously.

Miss Frances Gibbs, 921 Buena avenue, home girl—I think they should be interested in golf, tennis, skating, and that sort of thing, but I don't think they should get really excited over baseball, football, or anything like that. And as for boxing, or wrestling—well, defend me and us from that sort of thing, please!

Ad H. Ellensohn, 1426 South 57th court, Cicero, assistant sales manager—Absolutely. I have been an athlete myself, having at various times taken part in boxing, baseball, football, and swimming. The stronger the body the stronger the mind, and this makes for the betterment of mankind; yes, and it makes for better children. Ice skating, swimming, and dancing—these are ideal for women.

Mrs. N. A. Andreos, 7344 Morgan street, housewife—I should think it would be as important for women as for men. Of course, I mean the kind of athletics that is suitable for women. The ancient Greeks believed in athletics. They believed that, in order to have a strong mind, you must have a strong body. That refers to the women as well as the men.



W. P. Moore, 932 Tribune building, secretary—I believe that women are becoming more and more interested in sports; not only for the pleasure they get out of it, but for the physical development it leads to. By being in the proper physical condition, one is enabled to maintain the necessary mental poise to meet and overcome obstacles that come up daily in our lives—domestic, social, business.

Zippy Weather Peps Up 300 to Enter for Silver Skates

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Receipt of more than 300 entries for the seventh annual Silver Skates Derby of THE TRIBUNE, to be held at Garfield park on Jan. 21, insures that the list of nominations will be greatly increased by the end of the week, when the entry lists will close.

Although every race will be a feature, keen interest is being taken in the blue ribbon diamond medal race, open only to winners of former Silver Skates Derbies for men. This event will bring together William Steinmetz of the Norwegian-American A. A. and Roy McWhirter of the Northwest Skating club. The former won the diamond medal last year and is present international skating champion, while McWhirter is the national amateur champion.

Each has hosts of skating friends, who will be on hand to see the pair settle the question of supremacy. Brick Larsen of the Norwegian-American A. A. also will be a starter, as will Jack Stowell of Aurora, winner of last year's race.

Products of Chicago.

Steinmetz and McWhirter, the country's leading skaters, are products of Chicago's parks and playgrounds. They learned to skate over the same courses which will be used by the boys and girls Jan. 21. They attained the height of skating popularity through sheer determination. They were beaten several times, but never discouraged.

There will be many boys and girls in the Jan. 21 races who have possibilities of developing into champions. There will be thousands gathered around the banks to pass judgment on the racers, and those who show the pluck and courage will be rewarded with liberal applause. Every one interested in sports appreciates an honest effort.

The life of a skating champion is measured by the care he takes of himself and the interest he takes in his racing. There is hardly any other sport which will give the youngster the constitution to carry him through life that skating will. To be a champion, many things must be learned and these only can be acquired through experience.

Divided Contestants in Groups.

In order to match the contestants more equally, THE TRIBUNE has divided the boys' races into three groups. The junior race will be open only to boys under 16 years of age. The intermediate will bring together boys 16 and 17 years of age, while those 18 years of age and over will be placed in the senior division. There will be two races for girls, a junior and senior. The junior is open only to those under 16 years.

Many skaters who won prizes in THE TRIBUNE derbies in former years were not fortunate enough to win a pair of skates in their first attempts. However, it was their determination that enabled them to win in more recent years. This should be the ambition of every contestant who races Jan. 21. The experience will help immensely in coming years, and new champions will be made every year.

No fee is necessary to enter the derbies. Clip the coupon appearing on the sports pages and mail it as directed. Full details of the races will be announced from day to day in the columns of THE TRIBUNE.

NOTRE DAME AND TROJANS IN 1923

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—Negotiations are in progress between officials of the University of Southern California and Notre Dame for a football game here Dec. 8, 1923, according to a Los Angeles paper. Should Notre Dame accept the invitation, the contest would be held in the new Exposition Park Coliseum, under the management of U. S. C., as a part of its regular 1923 schedule. The Coliseum will seat 80,000 persons when completed next summer.

TAKES 51 ROUNDS TO DECIDE MEXICAN TITLE IN LIGHTWEIGHT BOXING

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 6.—The lightweight championship of Mexico changed hands here this afternoon, when Merci Montes of San Antonio, Tex., knocked out Jimmy Dundee in the fifty-first round of their finish contest. The bout, which is believed to be the longest contest since 1910, took place in the bull ring near here, and was witnessed by more than seven thousand. The men tore in incessantly, but both seemed comparatively fresh when they answered the bell for the final round. A blow to the jaw finished Dundee.

The longest glove fight ever held under the Marquis of Queensbury rules was the draw of Andy Bowen and Jack Burke, on April 6, 1893, at New Orleans. The bout went 110 rounds and lasted seven hours and nineteen minutes.

The longest bout within the last fifteen years, preceding the Mexico City encounter, is believed to be the Sam McVey-Joe Jeannette contest in Paris, on April 17, 1909. This bout went forty-nine rounds. On Feb. 22, 1910, Frankie Conley knocked out Monte Attel in a forty-two round battle at Vernon, Cal., and on the same day Ad Wolgast won the world's lightweight championship from Battling Nelson in forty rounds at Point Richmond, Cal. Other long fights under Marquis of Queensbury rules were:

Joe Gans won on a foul from Battling Nelson, forty-two rounds, at Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 3, 1906; James J. Corbett fought a sixty-one round draw with Peter Jackson in San Francisco, May 21, 1891; Danny Needham and Patsy Kerrigan fought a 100 round draw in San Francisco, Feb. 27, 1890, in six hours and thirty-nine minutes; Harry Sharpe knocked out Frank Crosby in the seventy-seventh round at Nameski, Ill., Feb. 2, 1892; W. Sheriff ["Prussian"] and J. Welch fought a seventy-six round bout at Philadelphia, April 20, 1884; Tommy Ryan knocked out M. Shaughnessy in forty-six rounds in 1889.

The largest number of rounds ever fought under the old London prize ring rules, under which system a fall ended the round, was in the Jack Jones and Patsy Tunney 276 round bout at Cheshire, England, Jones won. Other long fights under the London prize ring rules were:

James Kelly and Jonathan Smith, 6 hours, 15 minutes, near Melbourne, Australia, November, 1885; Mike Madden and Bill Hayes, 185 rounds, in 6 hours, 3 minutes, at Edenbridge, Eng., July 17, 1849; Mike Madden and Jack Grant, 140 rounds in 5 hours, 45 minutes at Woking, Eng., Dec. 12, 1848; Dominick Bradley beat S. S. Rankin, Port Abino, Can., Aug. 1, 1857, 152 rounds, 2 hours, 58 minutes.

The longest bare knuckle fight in the United States was fought between J. Fitzpatrick and James O'Neill at Berwick, Me., Dec. 4, 1860, the bout lasting 4 hours and 20 minutes. John L. Sullivan and Jake Kilrain fought a memorable 75 round bare knuckle bout at Richburg, Miss., July 8, 1898, with Sullivan winning. Sullivan's next longest fight was with Charley Mitchell at Chantilly, France, called a draw after 39 rounds.

Navy and Colgate Near Break on Football Date

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 6.—A situation has arisen in the football schedule making between the naval academy and Colgate that may result in abandoning practically decided negotiations for a game tentatively arranged for Nov. 3 at Annapolis. According to information that has reached Annapolis Colgate was bound to meet Lehigh Nov. 3 at South Bethlehem, Pa., under a two year agreement.

2 JOCKEY CLUBS SEEK HONOR OF REVIVING RACE

Two Dates Are Set for Chicago Classic.

BY FRENCH LANE.

WILLIAM E. GOLDEN.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

The Illinois racing situation may need the services of a physician soon. An ailment which threatens to become serious has developed within the last few weeks.

It all has to do with the renewal of the American Derby, most famous in its time of all turf classics.

Two Washington park associations are now actively in the field and each asserts it will stage the renewal of this great race. One is the new Washington Park Breeders' association, which plans to build a million and a half dollar track at Riverdale, work on which, the promoters say, will start within the next thirty days.

Already Advertising Event.

The other is the Washington Park Jockey club, which has as its secretary William E. Golden. The latter organization has already printed advertisements in turf publications for entries on June 28, 1924. Secretary Golden says he holds an option on two sites, both ideal locations for racing plants.

The two organizations have been incorporated under the laws of Illinois. The Washington Park Breeders' association has probably made more progress than the Jockey club bearing the same name. Its backers say they have close to $1,000,000 already subscribed and will have their racing plant constructed and ready for operation as early as June 1. They plan to run the American derby on the third Saturday in June.

Judge Joseph A. Murphy, presiding steward of the winter meeting now in progress in New Orleans, is one of the moving spirits in the organization.

Bradley Wilson Wants In.

In the meantime Bradley Wilson, general manager of the Devonshire and Dade park tracks in Canada and Kentucky is viewing the situation in Chicago from the side lines. He admits he is here to interest himself in the local racing situation. He would like to become affiliated with at least one of the Chicago tracks. There have been rumors that he planned to head an organization which will build still another new racing plant on Chicago's north side.

But Mr. Wilson is likely to remain on the side lines until the local situation takes on a different color. He sees the need of a parent organization to control all efforts Chicago citizens are making to bring back the thoroughbred sport. Until such an organization exists he can see but little hope for racing to come back here and in downstate cities on a big scale.

Firm Control Needed.

"The organization to control racing should be strictly a social body," Mr. Wilson says. "It cannot interest itself in any one or two tracks except to insist that the sport is conducted along the high class lines to which Chicago is entitled. It must rule and dictate with a firm hand or the sport cannot come back and long exist."

The Washington park squabble is the one attracting the attention of local thoroughbred race boosters now, however, and until it clears little progress is likely to be made. Both organizations say they are ready to go ahead with their plans, that there is little chance of their fight becoming serious, and some indications point to a possible mutual understanding soon.

If it should come at an early date little harm may result, according to persons interested in the local revival of racing.

Betty Grimes, Swim Star, Is Wed to New Jersey Man

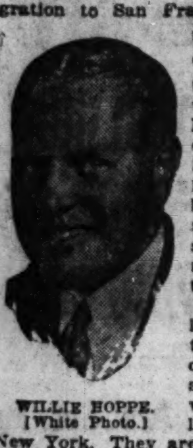
SCHAEFER DOPES TO BEAT CONTI IN CUE MATCH

BY JOE DAVIS.



WILLIE HOPPE.
[White Photo.]

Jake Schaefer, who despite his migration to San Francisco, is looked upon as a son of Chicago, will be the popular choice when he meets Roger Conti, champion of France, in their 1,500 point 18-2 balk line billiard match which starts tomorrow night at Orchestra hall.

These two brilliant cueists are toiling up the championship hill, at the top of which sits William F. Hoppe of New York. They are playing for the right to meet Hoppe, who last fall in the world's balkline championship at New York, made a clean sweep of all his matches and regained the throne from which he was forced in 1921 by the phenomenal play of Schaefer.

Beat Schaefer in 1921.

Conti, it will be recalled, made his first American tournament appearance in 1921 in the championship event held at Orchestra hall. While he did not finish in the first three places he created a lot of excitement when he defeated Schaefer, 400 to 203, a reverse which eventually threw Jake into a tie with Hoppe and necessitated a playoff.

This feat, coupled with Conti's showing in his other games, established the young Frenchman as a championship possibility, and the leading critics predict it will not be many years before he wins the greatest honors in the balkline world. Conti has profited greatly by his two trips to this country and his game is sounder. There is no question as to his gameness.

Schaefer Disappoints.

Harking back to the last tournament held at New York it cannot be denied that Schafer's showing was a disappointment. He did not play the billiards he showed when he defeated Hoppe two nights in succession in the Chicago tournament and later defeated him in the challenge match.

The general average of play in the New York event was not as high as that at Chicago. Schaefer and Conti performed about on a par. Each won three games and lost two. Jake had a high run of 192, high single average of 55 5-9, and grand average of 30 6-68. Conti had a high run of 204, high single average of 41 8-12, and a grand average of 30 4-64.

Granting that averages are secondary to the winning and losing of games, yet the figures dope out that the two experts who will cross cues tomorrow are equally matched. Their practice work has been excellent, but affords no criterion as to the performance under the strain of the real contest.

Jake Should Win.

Schaefer by reason of his greater experience should win, but undoubtedly he will have to display his best wares, and if the young Frenchman can upset the rangy Chicagoan, it will be a big feather in his cap.

It will be their third meeting in a world's championship series. At Chicago Conti won, 400 to 203, averaging 40, while at New York last November, Schaefer won, 500 to 251, averaging 55 5-9.

"THREE K.'S" TAKE BILLIARD LEAD ON WEEK'S PLAY

Last week's play in the Chicago Billiard league saw another change in the leadership, the K. K. K.'s now dominating the field. This does not mean the Ku Klux Klan, but that Augie Kieckhefer, Ray Kendall and Leonard Kenney are occupying the top positions. Kendall, who was fifth the preceding week, won two games and advanced to a tie for first place with Kieckhefer, while Kenney dropped one game and slumped to third place.

Charley Le Gros, after a disastrous start, is again in winning form and only two full games behind the leaders. He had a high run of 8 against Grauman, which was the best count of the week.

Standing of the players:

Tomorrow night's games are Le Gros and Kenney at the Leland and Kieckhefer and Steffanson at Readings'.

On account of the balk line match between Jake Schaefer and Roger Conti this week, the Interstate league three cushion games between Pierre Maupome and Bob Cannefax, scheduled for Tuesday at Mussey's Madison street room, have been postponed until Jan. 15 and 16, on which dates one night game only will be played.

H. A. O'Brien leads in the pocket billiard tournament at Foley's, having won five games and lost two. Buck stands second with four won and two lost. The standing: H. A. O'Brien, 5 won, 2 lost; Buck, 4 and 2; Nessersmith, 3 and 3; Jarvis, 3 and 4; E. J. O'Brien, 3 and 4; Boice, 3 and 4; Hoppe, 3 and 4; Hamen, 3 and 4. One game is carded for tomorrow night, Buck [100] playing Nessersmith [75].

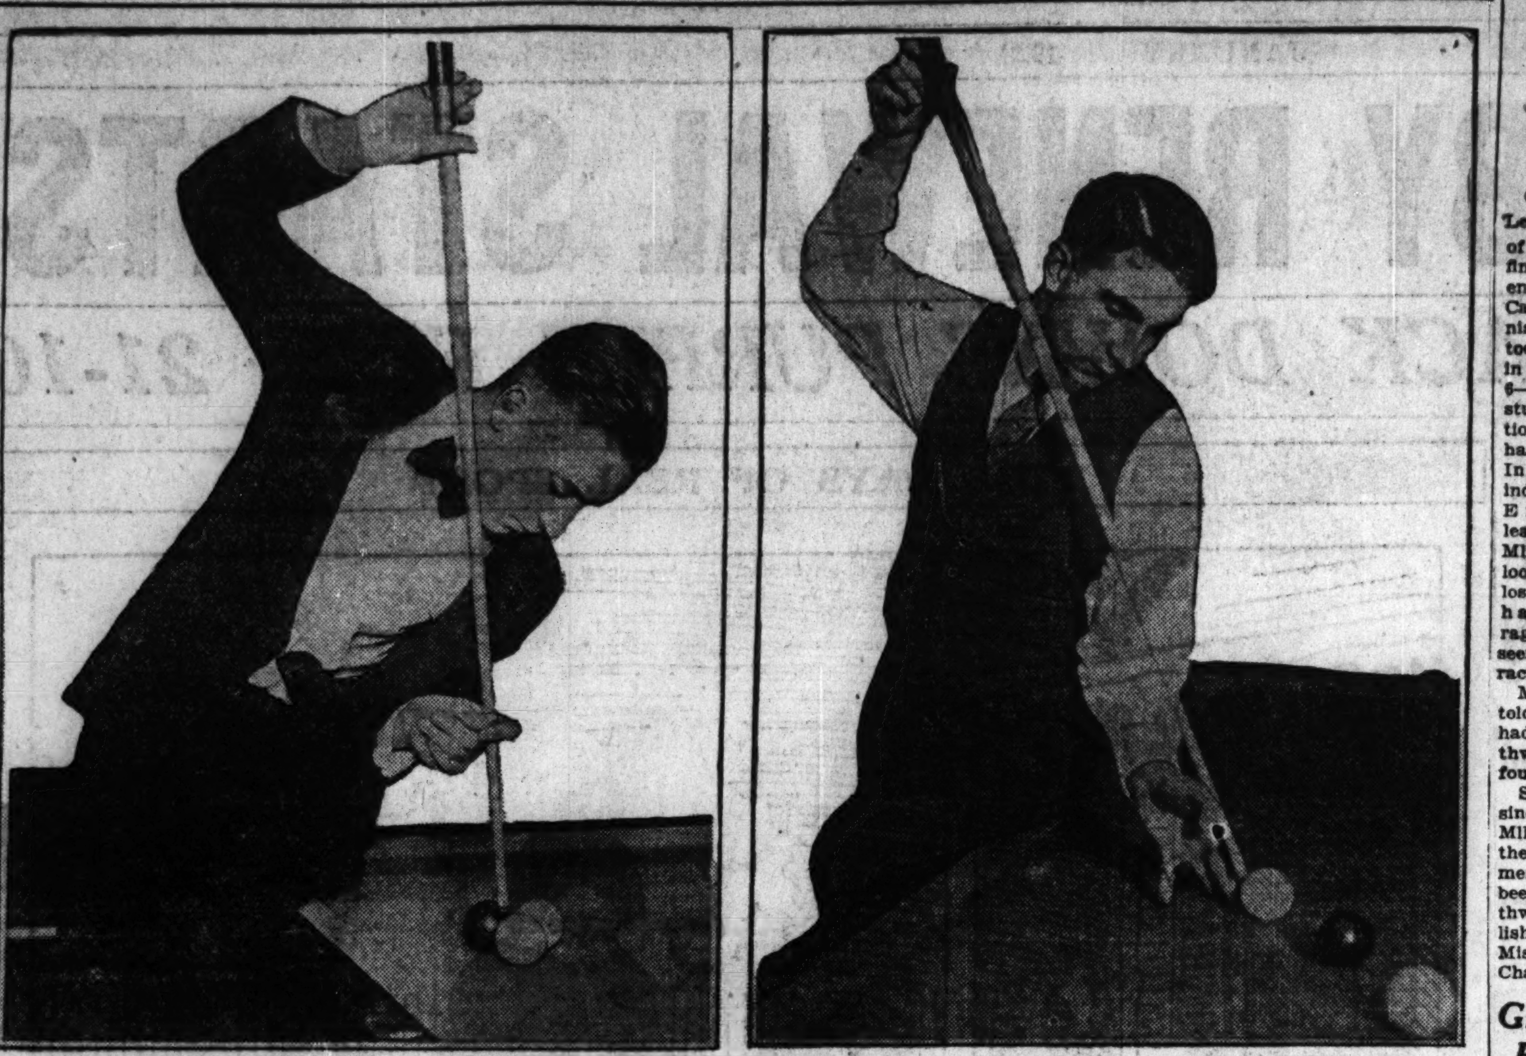
Football Is Reinstated by Laporte High School

Laporte, Ind., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Football's place in Laporte High school was made sure yesterday when the board of education approved of the game becoming a major sport. The eleven next fall will be the first football team that has represented the school in twelve years, the game being dropped at that time on account of objection by the players' parents.

Nine Missouri Schools Quit Old Loop for New

Moberly, Mo., Jan. 6.—Nine colleges, members of the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic association, decided to withdraw from the association and to form the Missouri College Athletic union at a meeting here today. The Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic association was composed of fifteen members.

MEET FOR CHANCE AT CHAMPIONSHIP



Jake Schaefer (left), former world's champion at the 18-2 balk line billiard game, and Roger Conti (right), French champion, will meet tomorrow night at Orchestra hall in the first block of a 1,500 point match which will determine which deserves the right next to challenge William F. Hoppe for the title. Schaefer is favored to win.

CHICAGOANS LEAD 3 INTERSTATE EVENTS

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Chicago bowlers made their first appearance in the ninth annual bowling tournament here tonight and took leading place in all three events. The Practical Printing Company five went into the lead in the main event with 2,789.

Pagets and F. Martins of the printers' five to the top in the doubles with 1,165, and A. Hanson took first place in the singles with 600.

The printers had a grand chance for a big score. They got 1,923 pins in their first two games and then ran into fifteen railroads in the last game. Leading scores:

BLOUIN DEFENDS TITLE AGAINST EASTERN CRACK

Jimmy Blouin, Blue Island's bowling hero and holder of the world's championship, is ready to defend his laurels for the fourth time this year when he meets Joe Falcaro, the New York crack, in a forty game match beginning tomorrow afternoon at the Randolph alleys. The match will be continued Tuesday and Wednesday, concluding Thursday, with ten games each afternoon.

Blouin since winning his title has defeated Phil Wolfe, Mort Lindsey, and Jimmy Smith in championship matches, thereby obtaining permanent possession of the diamond medal emblematic of the championship. In Falcaro, however, he is meeting the best the east has to offer at this sport.

The New Yorker has defeated Lindsey and Glenn Riddell and in the Greater New York championship tournament averaged 210 for full season's bowling. In a special match with the Curanna brothers of Buffalo last year he averaged 242 for twelve games. He also defeated Charley Trucks in a home and home match of twenty games.

CRAFTSMEN OPEN SIXTH ANNUAL PIN TOURNEY FEB. 10

Arrangements are being made for the sixth annual tournament of the Craftsmen Bowling association, which will be held at the Chateau alleys Feb. 10 to 25. The meet is open to all master Masons in good standing from any lodge in the United States. The entry list closes Jan. 26 with Secretary LeRoy Davis, who can be reached at Albany 1300 or the Chateau alleys.

GEORGETOWN TO MEET PRINCETON

Washington, Jan. 6.—The football schedule of Georgetown university for next fall, announced tonight, includes Princeton for the first time since 1915. The game will be played at Princeton on Oct. 13. Other games include: George Washington at Washington, Sept. 29; Lebanon Valley at Washington, Oct. 6; Georgia Tech at Atlanta, Oct. 20; Boston college at Boston, Nov. 3; Bucknell at Washington, Nov. 17, and Fordham at New York, Dec. 1.

HOPPE TO DEFEND TITLE IN MARCH

New York, Jan. 6.—The challenge match in which Willie Hoppe of New York will defend his title of 18-2 balk line billiard champion will take place in the Hotel Pennsylvania March 12, 13, and 14, C. P. Miller, in charge of arrangements, announced today. Hoppe's opponent will be the winner of the match between Jake Schaefer and Roger Conti, which begins Monday night in Chicago.

MILAN TO MILLERS.

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 6.—Clyde Milan, former manager of the Washington American league club, will play with the Minneapolis American association team next season, the president of the local club announced here today.

Woods and Waters by BOB. BECKER

IDENTIFYING THE MEMBERS OF THE PIKE FAMILY.

Although there are seven members in the pike family it is not difficult to tell them apart if you just keep a simple little identification key in the back of your mind. First, let's look over the whole bunch once more and then we'll get hold of the key and be ready for any member of the pike family.

You remember the three pickerels—fishes that deserve the name of pickerel and which you and I should call by this name to avoid confusion. If you do not want to remember much about these fellows, just keep this one fact in mind: The Mississippi valley pickerel (Esox vermiculatus) which is known as the "little pickerel" and never grows much over a foot in length, is not found east of the Alleghanies. And the two eastern pickerels (banded and common eastern pickerel) are not found in the west.

He's a Great Pike.

Boiling it down even further, if you catch a member of the pike family in some Wisconsin lake and he runs seven or eight pounds and he's not a muskie, then you have caught a great pike, as the only true pickerel in Wisconsin (vermiculatus) doesn't attain a size more than a foot in length and a pound or two in weight. The whole point is that most of the so-called pickerel caught in the middle west are really Great Lakes pike or, to cut it short, great pike. And the common error everywhere is to give the name of pickerel to the great pike, and as a result we are always balled up on "what is what."

Fortunately, there is one infallible method of identifying your fish and it doesn't rest upon the colors, either. Colors may come and colors may go in the fish families, the same species varying so much that you would hardly think they were even related. Lay off the color game in this pike business and put your money on identification by means of cheek and gill cover. You will always win if you do.

Here Is the Key.

Here is the key: If you stick it in your tackle box and use it on the first member of the pike family you catch, you will be able to "nail" the old boy at once and tell whether he is or he "ain't."

Pickerel—The cheek and gill cover are completely scaled.

Great Lakes pike, common pike, usually called "pickerel"—All of the cheek, but only upper half of gill cover scaled.

Muskellunge—Upper halves of both cheek and gill cover scaled; lower halves are naked or, you might say, "smooth shaven."

There is the key in a nutshell, as it were. It is simple, easy to remember and absolutely fool proof. Color differences are sometimes difficult to rember, but this scaling business on cheeks and gill cover its not so difficult and can always be relied upon.

Less Confusion in England.

Very likely the Great Lakes pike will be called pickerel for many moons, as that name is associated with this fish in almost every locality. In England much the same situation exists, although there is less confusion there, as over there they have but one species, the big pike, esox lucius. Over there they call the immature fish a pickerel, an older one a jack and the mature fish a pike, and, mind you, all three are the same species.

In our own country you find the small pickerel called baby pike or grass pike, the big or Great Lakes pike incorrectly called a pickerel and sometimes the mighty muskie is even insulted by being called an 'overgrown pickerel."

KIRKWOOD, SMITH TIE IN CALIFORNIA OPEN

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 6.—Joe Kirkwood, former Australian champion, and MacDonald Smith, San Francisco professional, were tied for first place with scores of 299 for seventy-two holes at the close today of the California open golf championship tournament. A playoff will be necessary to decide the title. It will take place next week on the Ingleside course here.

Eddie Loos of Los Angeles, who had led the field up to noon today, wound up in a tie for second place with three others, each with a score of 301. The others are Walter Hagen, British open champion; Hutt Martin of Los Angeles, and Joe Novak of Berkeley, Cal.

Jock Hutchison, Chicago, finished third with 303, and next was Gene Sarazen of New York, national open championship, with 304.

Of the amateurs who took part in the play, Fred Wright of Los Angeles, former Massachusetts open champion, made the best showing with 305. Jack Neville of San Francisco, California amateur champion, turned in a low of 310.

AMATEURS MOVE TO CONTROL ALL TRAP SHOOTING

New York, Jan. 6. — The amateur trapshooters of America today made their first movement toward assuming absolute control of the sport when incorporation papers were drawn up for a new organization to replace the American Trapshooting association, the existing governing body. The new organization will be known as the Amateur Trapshooting Association of America and will be incorporated under the laws of Delaware.

The American Trapshooting association, which has governed the sport for years, was sponsored by manufacturers of ammunition and trapshooting accessories.

NOTES OF THE CUE ROOMS.

Tom Hueston, the veteran former world's pocket champion, of St. Louis, defeated William Pettifer, 125 to 70, at the Radio room, 16 South Clark street, yesterday afternoon, and at night defeated Paul Barlow, 125 to 64, having high runs of 36 and 28. Following the matches Hueston gave an exhibition of fancy and trick shots. Hueston will play Frank Cancilla tomorrow afternoon, and Maj. White, a well known local player, in the evening exhibition, at the Radio room.

Kinrey Matsuyama, young Japanese balk line expert, will play Armless Sutton in exhibition matches tomorrow afternoon and evening at McLean's Recreation parlors.

ON LOCAL LINKS

Among the local players who will attend the annual meeting of the United States Golf association at Pittsburgh on Saturday are Robert A. Gardner of Onwentsia and Silas H. Strawn of Old Elm, former president of the United States Golf association. The locations of the three national tournaments have already been settled, the amateur at Flossmoor, the open at Inwood, and the women's at the Westchester-Biltmore course.

Memberships in the new Playmore Golf club at Winnetka already exceed 300. The maximum is 400.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Taylor of the Evanston Golf club are planning to visit Florida. Mrs. Taylor, who is chairman of the women's golf committee at Evanston, hopes to compete in the north and south championship at Pinehurst.

An English cloakmaker has designed a waterproof suit for golfers which is so light and compact is can be packed into a small case and attached to the side of the caddy bag.

The Hub indoor school will stage a handicap tournament for women on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday. Regular putting greens will be used. Among the entries received is that of Mrs. Melvin Jones, the city champion. There is no entry fee.

President Robert W. McKinlay of the Cook County Municipal Golf association will address a meeting of public parks players at Springfield, Ill., on Thursday night, and then go to Pittsburgh to attend the annual meeting of the United States Golf association there on Saturday afternoon.

Mineralites and Detroit Pin Crew to Roll Series

The Mineralites, leading team of the Randolph Bowling league, will roll a special home and home bowling match with the L. C. Smiths of Detroit, three games in Chicago, Jan. 13, and three games in Detroit, Jan. 21. The Smiths are an all star aggregation, each member of the team having held a championship in the American Bowling congress. The local games will be rolled at the Randolph, with total pins counting.

English Golfer Sails for Matches in Florida

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Capt. Ernest F. Carter, British golfer and holder of the Welsh amateur title, sailed for New York today on the steamship Baltic. He said he was going to try the golf links in Florida, and that, if he liked them, he would make his home there.

WOOD DELAYS SPEED TRIAL.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—Garfield A. Wood of Detroit, Mich., who had planned to attempt to break the international mile record for dual motored speed boats today with the Miss America I, has decided to postpone the speed trials until tomorrow.

IRVING PARK RIFLE TEAM HAS 999 SCORE

The Irving Park Rifle club, with a score of 999 out of a possible 1,000, set the pace in the sixth week of shooting in the city championship rifle tournament and advanced another notch toward permanent possession of THE TRIBUNE trophy. The Irving Parkers have two legs on this trophy and must repeat this year to keep it.

Chicago Rifle club, with one leg on the cup, shot 995 and kept on the leaders' heels. Centennial blazed away for 996, squeezing Commonwealth-Edison out of third place and sending Hawthorne into fifth position.

SUZANNE WINS IN CANNES TENNIS IN HARD MATCH

CANNES, France, Jan. 6.—Suzanne Lenglen defeated Mrs. Satterthwaite of England in the finals of the women's singles of the Cannes lawn tennis tournament today. She won in two sets, 6—4, 6—2, but against stubborn opposition, such as she has seldom met. In the first set, indeed, with the Englishwoman leading, 4 to 2, Mlle. Lenglen looked like a loser; her play had become ragged and she seemed to lack confidence and accuracy.

SUZANNE LENGLEN
[Keystone View Photo.]

Mlle. Lenglen's superior condition told in the second set. After the score had reached two games all Mrs. Satterthwaite weakened and Suzanne took four games in a row.

Spectators remarked that never since Miss Kathleen McKane carried Mlle. Lenglen to a score of 10—8 in the first set of the Brussels tournament last May has the French star been so evenly matched. Mrs. Satterthwaite ranks number five on the English women's ranking list, coming after Miss McKane, Mrs. Lambert, Mrs. Chambers, and Mrs. Beamish.

GRID OFFICIALS FORM LEAGUE IN EASTERN STATES

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Football officials belonging to the eastern area of the United States, comprising the districts of New England, New York, Philadelphia, and western Pennsylvania, convened here today and perfected an organization the purpose of which is to promote the American intercollegiate game of football and coöperate with the National Collegiate Athletic association, the intercollegiate football rules committee, and the central board of officials. The meeting was attended by forty or more officials. Although they convened behind closed doors and the objects and purposes were seemingly without other than lofty purpose, it was stated that back of it all was the necessity of the officials forming some sort of a union which will make them immune from some of the practices of certain colleges.

'Brick' Muller Works as Stevedore in Frisco

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 6.—Harold P. ("Brick") Muller, University of California star and all-American end of the second successive year, worked as a stevedore on the docks here during the Christmas vacation. Muller needs the money to pay his expenses at the university until May, when he will receive a bachelor's degree.

DAD THE HERO.

He edged his way inward, dejected and fagged,
And the jam grimly echoed his fears
Of no seat. As he stood there his pantaloons sagged
And his derby admitted its years.
He clung to his strap and there wasn't a soul
In all the weltering sub
Who properly guessed his legitimate rôle—
To them he was only a dub.

To the crowd he was merely a wage earning boob,
Akin to themselves, as a fact;
And they waved no adieu as he climbed from the tube
To stage his bewildering act.
And little they thought (if, indeed, there was one
A thought to the incident gave)
That the gray looking, jay looking son-of-a gun
Was a cavalier gallant and brave.

But Sonny and Sister, who opened the door
Of the Bensonhurst flat, could have told
Of tremendous exploits and adventures galore
And of deeds that were mighty and bold.
For the serf his disguise had abandoned and shone
In a halo of splendor and mirth,
And amid his kids' shouts had come into his own
Where the meek shall inherit the earth!

BROWN GRID MAN HURT IN BATTLE, LEAVES SCHOOL

Providence, R. I., Jan. 6.—Mian [Mike] Gulian, captain of the Brown football team last season and the selection of many experts for a tackle position on all-American elevens, was forced to return to his home in Newton, Mass., today on account of a serious injury to his head received in the Brown-Dartmouth contest in Boston last November. Gulian returned to Brown after the Christmas holidays last Wednesday, but since then had not been able to attend any of his classes.

U. S. Soccer Body Elects Haddock Olympic Chief

New York, Jan. 6.—William S. Haddock of Pittsburgh has been elected chairman of the Olympic committee of the United States Football association, which controls soccer in this country, it was announced today. Thowas W. Cahill of New York has been chosen secretary.

RARE TREAT IN STORE FOR 'IKES' AT BIG BANQUET

BY BOB BECKER.

JAMES O. CURWOOD

With many reservations already received, the first annual banquet and birthday celebration of the Chicago chapter of the Izaak Walton league, to be held Monday evening, Jan. 15, at the Sherman hotel, promises to be a red letter event for outdoor lovers in Chicago. Inasmuch as the wives and sweethearts of the "Hello Ike" members are also invited to this birthday party, the committee in charge of the affair is preparing to take care of a record breaking crowd.

Headed by James Oliver Curwood, noted author, explorer, frontiersman, and conservationist, the program which has been announced for the evening assures a veritable feast of outdoor stories and fun, as well as sober facts about the conservation situation in the United States today. Mr. Curwood has assured the league that he is going to open up with his big guns at this meeting and some "staggering disclosures" are promised.

Dickinson to Talk.

Besides Mr. Curwood, two other speakers are on the program. Judge J. M. Dickinson, who was secretary of war during the Taft administration, will speak on "What I Owe Outdoor America," and Bishop Charles Palmerston Anderson is scheduled to tell the Waltonians about "Recreation and Life." Bishop Anderson is an ardent fisherman.

The Chicago chapter of the league is preparing a special program-booklet for this banquet meeting which will not be without a real "fishing atmosphere." Frank Stick, the well known artist, is responsible for the cover of the booklet, which is guaranteed to give every angler spring fever, as the cover design depicts a trout stream fishing scene.

Portland to Celebrate.

Although Chicago's "Hello Ike" celebration will be a noteworthy event and fishermen living near this city who wish to attend the banquet are urged to send in their reservations at once, Portland, Ore., bids fair to run Chicago a close second, according to word received by Bill Dilg from the officers of the Portland chapter. Portland's Walton banquet will mark the affiliation of the Oregon State [illegible] Game association with the Izaak Walton league, and sportsmen of that city are planning for a fitting celebration.

Chicago outdoorsmen who wish to attend the local banquet and meeting may make reservations by getting in touch with Will Dilg, president of the league, at 326 West Madison street.

NAVY BOOKS MOUNTAINEER

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—That West Virginia Wesleyan would again appear on the football schedule of the United States Naval academy after an absence of two years, was made known here today by Carl V. Miller, athletic director. The game is booked at Annapolis Oct. 1

6,285 INSPECTIONS PER CAR

The faithfulness of performance so universally remarked in Dodge Brothers Motor Cars, is due, in no small part, to the thoroughness with which each unit is inspected during the process of manufacture and assembly.

A trained staff of 1100 experts is employed in this work alone, and approximately 5,285 inspections are made on each car.

So exacting and rigid are the standards applied to these inspections that the slightest variation, either in workmanship or material, is sufficient cause for immediate rejection.

Dodge Brothers are almost over-scrupulous in their constant aim to make each car as sound and perfect as is humanly possible.

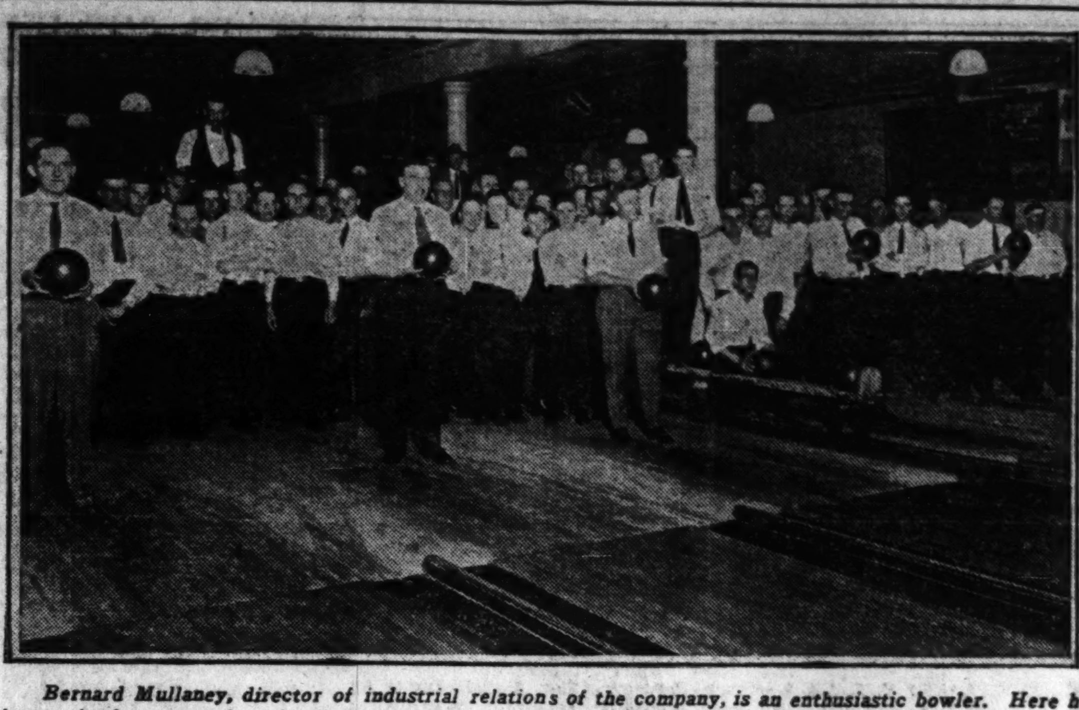
TURNING THE ILLUMINATING GAS ON ATHLETICS

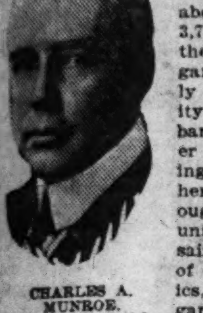
The sport of the links holds a great fascination for members of the Peoples Gas club. Edith Fletcher, woman's champion, is shown at the top center of this group of girl golfers.



Bernard Mullaney, director of industrial relations of the company, is an enthusiastic bowler. Here he is seen in the center of a trio about to send the big ball down the drives.

THESE ATHLETES SAY THEY DO IT BETTER WITH GAS

BY HUGH FULLERTON.



CHARLES A. MUNROE. [Photo: Moffett.]

Probably unique among industrial athletic organizations is that of the Peoples Gas company—the Peoples Gas club. This club, composed of about 3,000 of the 3,700 employés of the company, organized voluntarily in every activity from the great band to the checker club, is working along comprehensive and thorough lines. It is unique in that, seizing the idea of directed athletics, its sports and games are under the guidance of trained men and women.

Ex-service men, former college stars, former professional ball players, former pugilists and wrestlers—men who know the games—are training the others, and, while the officials of the company look on with satisfaction and give aid, are developing one of the finest athletic groups in Chicago.

Outdoor Men Don't Play.

One other odd feature of this force which is combating sedentary disease is that practically the only workers of the gas company who are not engaged in some of the club activities are the outdoor gangs, who, after carrying fourteen-foot lengths of pipe main all day, perhaps do not care much for athletic sports.

But of the others, practically all the workers in the great central building on Michigan avenue and in the fourteen shops and stations scattered over the city engage in one or more forms of athletics, and the club covers nearly the entire field of sport from baseball to checkers.

Not only is the gas company one of the first in America to take up industrial athletics and encourage the workers to engage in sports and games, but today, after three decades of athletic development, it is one of the firmest believers in athletics as a force for democracy and as a builder of morale among workers.

Officials Mix with Employés.

Take a look some day at Grant park at the noon hour when horse shoe pitching is in order, and you are liable to find a vice president and one of the bookkeepers wrangling over how far the shoes are from the stake, and in golf last fall a high official and a youngster from the engineering department battled it out in the finals with a bookkeeper as runnerup.

And spirit! When the gas club ball team starts out to play in the Chamber of Commerce league, with the band of fifty pieces going good, and a thousand or so pretty girls gathered in the stands and the cheer leaders working, there is as much noise and pep as at a college game. The yell? It sounds like "Rah! Rah! Rah! You can do it better with G A S!" and they follow it with a yell that sounds like a match lighted in a basement full of gas.

Baseball is the center of interest in the athletic activities of the Gas club, but it is enthusiasm centered around one of the best teams in the Industrial league. There is only one gas team. Years ago each of the plants and shops had a team, but the rivalry was too keen, and now each shop and department plays impromptu games and reports its candidates for the big team.

Won Two Titles.

It is a big honor to play for the company, and the team has for two years won the loop district championship only to fall before Western Electric in the finals. Jack Beall, once with the White Sox, is with the company and aids in developing the team, and Jack Miller of the Cubs works there and helps coach. The team's big game last year was against Western Gas Construction, champion of Fort Wayne, which it beat, 5 to 4, when Jimmy Hannigan made a home run in the ninth.

The indoor and playground teams are numerous—and the girls' league is the center of much rivalry. The winning team is the B's, and it clinched the championship when Tillie Lyons cracked out a home run with the bases filled and became the heroine of the club.

In point of active players, horseshoes, bowling, and tennis lead all the other sports. The horseshoe pitching mania struck the Gas club all in a heap and spread through the entire organization. Some one in the company persuaded the park commissioners to let them lay off quoit grounds in the park, and Johnny Hogan, the former state champion, was invited to dedicate them, and from then the game boomed. Arthur F. Henning was made chairman. At Park Ridge he has the only indoor horseshoe cour in the county. There are courses at each plant, and interdepartment contests rage winter and summer.

500 Active Bowlers.

There are nearly 500 active bowlers in the club, which boasts sixteen men's teams in the Interdepartment league, and eight teams in the sectional league, besides a girls' league of eight clubs. The club sent a team to Toledo and this year two teams will turn on the gas at the A. B. C. meet in Milwaukee. Eddie Schott of the accounting department is the star bowler, with an average of 265 for the last seven weeks.

There are 100 men and women tennis players and the race for the Insull cup and trophies brings out many players. The company maintains courts at 31st and Halsted street, where the interdepartment games are played.

Golf Booming.

Golf is booming. There were about seventy men and forty women golfers in last fall's events, but the next season will double the number of pill chasers. The club matches are played at Green Valley. Miss Edith Fletcher is the leading woman exponent of the Scotch game, while in the men's championship Vice President Charles A. Munroe and C. D. Wiley of the engineering department met in the finals. The official won, 1 up. Arthur Grandberg, a bookkeeper, won the fall cup.

Basketball, like baseball, centers around one team selected from the departments, although there are interdepartmental teams. The club team is fighting for honors.

The swimming team, with twenty-five speedy members, works in the Y. M. C. A. pool, and its picked team has won honors against many rival concerns.

There are billiard and pool teams, a strong hiking club allied with the Prairie club, a horticultural club, a millinery club, a photographic club, and skating, while unorganized, is booming, the hockey committee organizing the scattered skaters.

Besides all this practically every employé in the huge office plant takes part in daily calisthenics. At 10 and 3 o'clock each day the office workers are put through their paces. Ex-service men chosen for their knowledge of the exercises, leap to the top of a desk and direct the movements, putting them through a stiff workout for ten minutes which sends them back to the tasks freshened.

The crowning event of the year is the annual field day held at Delwood park, where every employé and all the pensioners of the company gather to watch the track and field sports, which include everything from baseball to horseshoes. Last summer more than 4,000 were present and more than 1,500 took part in the sports.

This organization is entirely for, by, and of the employés. But the gas company encourages the club in every possible way. The officers and directors of the various activities are chosen by the workers themselves. A. H. Thorne of industrial relations has just retired as president, after two years, in which he did much to build up the athletic and other departments of the club. W. G. Rudd succeeds him, while A. B. Curtis is chairman of the athletic committee. Irving Prince is the head hiker, W. O. Hinkley is chairman of baseball, C. C. La Forge of golf, Thomas J. Hunt of swimming, and Carl Olson of billiards and pool.

Sturch Boxing Instructor.

It is interesting to see how the old timers take to it. For instance, if the youngsters want to learn boxing, Joe Sturch, 35 years with the company, who fought more than 100 battles and who boxed Harry Forbes and lost to Benny Yanger, is ready to jump in and show them. Harold Jenkins, one of the cleverest of boxers, and Tom Moore are with the company, and will box or instruct in training.

There is a lot of athletic talent of the experienced kind to act as leaders—and it is small wonder that the Peoples Gas club is among the leaders in industrial athletics in the Chicago district.

CHICAGO TRACK STARS ENTERED IN MILLROSE GAMES IN NEW YORK

RUSSELL F. WHARTON, former University of Illinois runner, who is competing for the Chicago A. A., will race in the Rodman Wanamaker one and one-half mile run, one of the features of the annual indoor track and field games of the Millrose A. C. in New York Jan. 31. Wharton will be pitted against Joie Ray, McLean of University of Pennsylvania, Mike Devaney, New York A. C., and Connolly of Georgetown university. According to "Doc" Darwent, coach of the C. A. A. team, Wharton is in good condition and has been turning miles in 4:20 and better.

Earl Eby, former University of Pennsylvania track captain, who also is competing for the C. A. A., will run in the Millrose 600 yard race. The Cherry Circle star won the event in 1920 and 1921 and needs one more win to gain the trophy permanently. Eby will run against Tom Campbell of Yale, Allen Helfrick of Penn State, Sid Leslie of New York, and Suttner of Syracuse university, who won the event last year.

Ray Watson, former Kansas Aggies runner, who now is competing for the Illinois A. C., will run in the open two-thirds mile race.

NORSE DERBY TODAY DRAWS GREAT FIELD

One of the largest fields that ever competed in a local club skating derby will race today in the annual tournament of the Norwegian-American A. A. at Humboldt park. The Norse club is one of the oldest skating organizations in the city and its tournament is rated as a banner event in the local ice season.

The Norwegian team, headed by International Champion William Steinmetz, is out to cop the honors, although Alverno A. A., Northwest Skating club and Austin-Columbia A. A. teams also are primed to dispute this effort to the utmost. Eleven events are on the program, the feature event being the 2 mile handicap. The events carded are:

Class A, 1 mile; class AA, 1 mile; class B, 1 mile; class C, 1 mile; novice class, 1 mile; boys under 14, ½ mile; boys under 16, ½ mile; women, ½ mile; girls under 14, ½ mile; two mile club relay and 2 mile handicap.

Prizes to Winners.

Four prizes are offered by the club in the class A event, while the winning relay team will be awarded a silver cup and gold medals will be given the skaters on the team. Cups and medals also will be awarded the winners in the other events of the program.

Bob Reed of Riverside, who skates for the Alvernos, broke a wrist in an automobile accident last Tuesday and will not race today. It is expected, however, that he will be back on the ice for next Sunday's derby.

The ice is in perfect condition, according to officials of the Norse club, and fast times are expected in all events. The derby will start at 1 o'clock.

Two Other Derbies.

Two other derbies are carded for today. Out at Deer Grove in the forest preserve, the first annual forest preserve races will be held on the inner lake. Ten races for boys and girls are carded, and Ralph L. Peck and Chief Forester Ransom Kennicott will be in charge. The races will start at 2 o'clock. Deer Grove can be reached by the new Dundee concrete road through Palatine.

Out at Mark White square, Director R. V. Pierce will stage his first annual carnival. Speed races, fancy skating, and novelty events are on the program with the carnival starting at 2 o'clock.

LOCAL SKATERS START TRAINING FOR NATIONAL

Following the opening of the championship track at the Logan Square ball park last Thursday, Chicago skaters who will compete in the national championship tournament on Jan. 26, 27 and 28, have settled down to hard training. The ice at the rink is in perfect condition and an eight-inch blanket of glass surface will be built.

The first entry was received and accepted by the championship committee yesterday. The blank received was from Miss Gladys Robinson, Toronto, Canada, international and national women's indoor and outdoor title holder.

Most of the skaters will arrive in Chicago next week to finish training. Headquarters will be established at the Sheridan-Plaza hotel.

BIG 7 TO OPEN SEASON LATER

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 6.—The board of control of the Big Seven conference of Illinois high schools today voted to open the conference football season a week later than in former years. This will make the first game of the season come on the first Saturday in October and will permit but one game afterward with teams outside the conference.

The board also voted to raise the ban on basketball games before the first week in January. Hereafter games may be scheduled for any time after Thanksgiving day.

The annual track and field meet was awarded to Aurora, probably for May 26.

BRADLEY TAKES OVERTIME GAME

Galesburg, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Two overtime periods were required for Bradley to defeat Lombard here tonight, 26 to 23. The regular game ended, 20—20, and the first overtime period resulted in a 22—22 knot. Bradley scored four points to Lombard's one in the last period.

Ineligible Stanford Stars Turned Down at S. C.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—Three men of the Stanford university football team who were declared ineligible for athletic competition next season because of failure in scholarship, are said to have applied for admittance at the University of Southern California. Their applications were turned down, it was said, with the explanation that students who could not keep up in their grades at Stanford would not be permitted to enter U. S. C. and play with the Trojans.

Swimming is not overlooked in the club's list of sports. The club tank team works out at the Y. M. C. A. pool. Here the members are about to plunge into the water.

GRAND BEACH SKI MEET ATTRACTS NORWEGIAN

Foreign riders will compete in the ski tournament which will be held by Grand Beach Ski club at its new slide at Grand Beach, Mich., next Sunday, officials of the club announced yesterday. Two riders originally from Christiania, Norway, and two Canadian riders are entered, it was announced.

The Grand Beach slide will be opened today for the first time this season, Ragnar Omtvedt, club captain, making the initial slide. The two Norwegians who will compete and who are expected to try out the slide with Omtvedt today are Arns Miller and T. Masseng, both competing from the Frigg club of Christiana.

Special Trains for Fans.

Harold Monson and J. Berger, Montreal, are the Canadian riders entered. Several entries have been received from riders in St. Paul, Minneapolis, and Wisconsin cities. The meet is expected to bring out a large crowd of ski fans and special trains will be run over the Illinois Central, leaving at 10 a.m.

The new hill, which was erected last autumn, is rated as one of the best in the country. A structure 115 feet high tops the hill, which has been estimated as being 200 feet in height, and riders expect to make record jumps.

Norge Club Meet Jan. 21.

Riders of the Norge Ski club will practice today at their big hill at Cary, Ill. The annual tournament of the Norge club will be held Jan. 21. Improvements were made in the slide and seats for the fans were put up by the Norge club during the summer, and it is expected by the club officials that last year's crowd of 28,000 fans will be eclipsed at the Jan. 21 meet.

'Y' College Five Back from Jaunt, Preps for Armour

After a successful vacation jaunt in games played with former college players throughout the middle west, the Y. M. C. A. college basketball team is putting in hard licks of toil to perfect its play for the Armour Post Legion team, which humbled the Maroons recently. The Armorur game is slated for Thursday night at 8:15 on the "Y" college floor. On the trip the Y. M. C. A. college contingent won three games and lost one.

MORTON ANNEXES A PAIR.

Coach C. W. Long's Morton basketeers handed Proviso a pair of drubbings, the heavies winning, 22 to 18 and the lights, 20 to 6, at Cicero. All the scoring for the winners was done by Dahlquist with two baskets and six free throws, Stamiek, who sunk a pair of field shots, and Peschek with four field counters. Major lineup:

IOWA TRIMS OKLAHOMA.

Norman, Okla., Jan. 6.—Iowa State college defeated Oklahoma university, 29 to 18, here today in the first Missouri Valley conference basketball game of the 1923 season for the two teams.

MISSOURI NIPS DRAKE.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 6.—Missouri university tonight defeated Drake, 50 to 22, in a Valley conference game. Capt. Browning, for Missouri, shot eight field goals and ten free throws for a total of 26 points.

SUPERIOR CURLERS IN MEET.

Superior, Wis., Jan. 6.—Five Superior rinks will defend the head of the lakes curling championship title held by the local club in the Manly-McLennan event, which starts at the Duluth Curling Club rink Monday night.

CHICAGO SKATER TO COMPETE IN TORONTO RACES FOR WOMEN

TORONTO, Ont., Jan. 6.—Entries have been received from most of the fastest women ice skaters in Canada and the United States for a series of special races here Jan. 20 at distances of 220 and 440 yards and one mile.

Miss Gladys Robinson of Toronto, international champion, will face a strong field in all of these events, including Elsie Muller of New York, national titleholder; Rose Johnson of Chicago, Edna Webster and Ruby Johnson of Toronto.

KNOX COLLEGE BEATS WILLIAMS BY 32-24 COUNT

Williamstown, Mass., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The Williams college basketball team went down to its first defeat of the season tonight before Knox college of Galesburg, Ill., 32 to 24. It was anybody's battle up to the last few minutes, when the Illinoisans uncorked an irresistable rush. The victory can be largely attributed to the sterling work of Campbell and Albro of the visiting team. Capt. Blackmer put up a great game for Williams, but could not win single-handed.

Murchison Entered in New York Muny Sprint

New York, Jan. 6.—Loren Murchison,, former Illinois A. C. track athlete, now sporting the emblem of the Newark A. C. in open A. A. U. competition, has entered for the sprint medley which will be one of the features at the indoor athletic meet of the Municipal Athletic activities, to be held in Madison Square Garden on Jan. 15. The former Missourian will make this race the occasion of his first board floor appearance in the local district, and will make an assault on the 60-yard record of 6 2-5 seconds. Murchison is a joint holder of this mark and is reported in superb shape.

MONROE BEATS SEWARD BLUES

UNDEFEATED K. OF C. FIVES CLASH TODAY

Undefeated Hennepin and Columbus council teams will clash today at the Broadway armory in the feature game of the north section of the Knights of Columbus basketball league which is expected to reveal which team will furnish the real opposition to DeSoto for championship honors. Hennepin failed to show much class last Sunday in winning from Marquette by a single point, while Columbus plays particularly well.

DeSoto, which last Sunday, playing with four men, defeated University, will face O'Connor council. Marquette meets Bronson and University and Lafayette clash in other north section games.

Dowling, south section leader, is scheduled to take on LaRabida, Auburn Park meets Leo, Perez takes on Calumet and Loyola-Hyde park mixes with Englewood.

The games will start at 2 o'clock.

YORK HIGH DIVIDES PAIR.

With Lox sinking seven baskets to lead the scoring, York Community High school swamped Naperville yesterday at Elmhurst, 37 to 12. In the lightweight fray Naperville evened matters. Heavy lineup:

GARY BUMPS FROEBEL.

Laporte, Ind., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Froebel of Gary weakened after holding the Laporte high school basketball five to a 7 to 5 score for the first half, and allowed the locals to romp away with an easy win, 15 to 7. Laporte seconds defeated Westville, 24 to 12.

GOSS STREAK STOPPED.

Eight consecutive games tucked under their belts proved the undoing of the Goss Printing company five. In their quest for the ninth straight win, defeat was met at the hands of the Automatic Electric five yesterday.

Austin heavyweights invaded the Oak Park High gym and trimmed the home majors, 20 to 12, avenging defeat on the same floor last year when the Cook county title was at stake. The visitors did not leave with two scalps, however, the Oak Park ponies nipping Austin by a narrow margin, 15 to 14.

In the heavyweight melee, Drechsler of the home five was the only man of his team to score. He sank three baskets and six free tosses for Oak Park's entire total. For Austin Moore and Masters led the point gathering, the former caging three floor shots and the latter four. The two minor quintets put up a hectic struggle, but the Oak Park team was slightly stronger at the finish. Lineups:

HYDE PARK DIVIDES

Aurora, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—West High of Aurora defeated Hyde Park here tonight, 29 to 24, but lost a lightweight contest to the Chicago boys, 18 to 9. Hyde Park heavies led in the first quarter, 6 to 5, but dropped far behind in the second and third quarters. They made a great rally in the last quarter, after being behind, 21 to 10.

St. Michaels Basket Team Beats St. Mary's, 19 to 18

St. Michael's Catholic league basketball quintet handed the St. Mary five of Dubuque, Ia., a beating by one point yesterday, 19 to 18, at Seward Park gym. Lautz was the star for the winners, while Needham of the visitors featured with three baskets. Lineup:

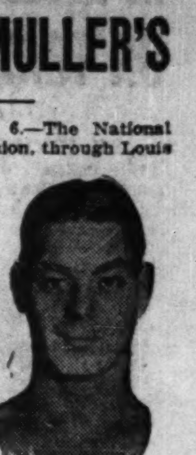
M'NABB BEATS ROCKFORD FIVE.

McNabb, Ill., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—McNabb Cardinals won a hard fought basketball game from Rockford Thomas Cats tonight, 41 to 32. It was the first time Rockford has been beaten this season. Clausen led in scoring for McNabb with eight baskets and Hortenlis led Rockford with seven.

A. A. U. APPROVES 51 RECORDS; 25 WEISSMULLER'S

New York, Jan. 6.—The National Amateur Athletic union, through Louis Goldsmith, chairman of the rules committee, today approved fifty-one record breaking performances, forty-seven in swimmiug and four in track and field events, made last year. Thirty-three of these marks will go down as American records, while eighteen will be registered as noteworthy performances, a category including feats under conditions or over distances not recognized as standard.



JOHNNY WEISSMULLER. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

All of these performances are in addition to about 100 others in track and field and swimming to which official recognition was given by the A. A. U. at its annual meeting last November.

The predominance of swimming marks is due chiefly to the individual exploits of Johnny Weissmuller of the Illinois Athletic club, one of the most sensational acquatic performers of all time.

Credited With 25 Records.

The Chicago star is credited in the new list with twenty-five American records, twenty-one at free style and four at back stroke swimming, over distances ranging from fifty to 500 yards, bringing the total number of new marks he has established within the last year to forty-five. These do not include a long array of noteworthy performances, eight more of which are added to his string in the new compilation.

Weissmuller also helped to establish an American record for the 400 yard relay over a 20 yard course, the Illinois A. C. team, of which he was a member, setting a mark of 3:42 2-5 at Chicago last March. The other swimmers of the quartet were Harry Hebner, Perry McGillivary and A. Siegel. With McGillivray, Siegel and W. L. Wallen of the I. A. C., Weismuller aided in a noteworthy performance for the 160 yard relay event over a short course of 1:16, also at Chicago.

Three Records for Miss Bauer.

Weismuller's individual records were established in meets at Chicago, Columbus, Louisville, Honolulu, Philadelphia, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and Atlanta.

Three American records and six noteworthy performances are credited to Miss Sybil Bauer, premier back stroke star of the Illinois A. C., at distances ranging from 50 to 400 yards and established at Chicago, Indianapolis and Brighton Beach, N. Y.

Other noteworthy performances for men include two back stroke marks at 200 and 400 meters, established by Harold Kruger of Chicago at Milwaukee, and a 440 yard breast stroke figure by Robert Skelt of the Illinois A. C. over a short course at Detroit.

Two of the new American track and field records displace standards recognized last November.

Penn State Loses Honor.

Through a confusion in data submitted to the rules committee the Penn State college quartet was erroneously credited with a record of 7:54 4-5 for the two mile indoor relay at a meet here Feb. 1, 1922. Investigation revealed that this time was three seconds faster than that actually made, and the record now is placed to the credit of the University of Pennsylvania team, which hung up a mark of 7:55 1-5 at an indoor meet here March 11, 1922. The members of the record breaking quartet were Larry Brown, George Meredith, J. C. Holden and E. McMullen.

The other record changing hands is the indoor running high jump standard, Leroy Brown of Dartmouth leaping 6 feet 4⅞ inches at a meet here March 11, 1922, to replace the mark of 6 feet 4¾ inches made by John L. Murphy of Notre Dame Feb. 1, 1922.

Other Approved Marks.

The other two records approved are:

4 MILE RELAY, OUTDOORS [FOUR MEN]—17:0 4-5, by University of Illinois team [Howard Yates, Bruce Patterson, Gordon McGinnis, and Russell Wharton] at Drake university relay carnival, Des Moines, Ia., Apr. 29, 1922.

JAVELIN THROW [JAVELIN HELD IN MIDDLE]—202 feet 9½ inches, made by Milton Angier, University of Illinois, at Drake relay carnival, Des Moines, Ia., Apr. 28, 1922.

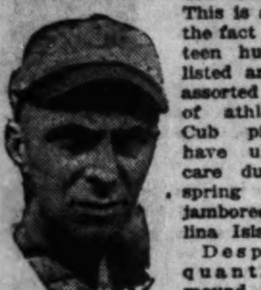
13 HURLERS TO BE IN KILLEFER BAND ON TRAINING TRIP

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.



BILL KILLEFER.

Bill Killefer, unlike many baseball notables, evidently has no fear of hoodoo numbers. This is shown by the fact that thirteen hurlers are listed among the assorted varieties of athletes the Cub pilot will have under his care during the spring training jamboree at Catalina Island.

Despite the quantity of mound talent there are only four fellows who have not previously paraded in Cub uniform. These are Wilbur Pelle from Meridian, Miss., C. E. Stauffer from Bridgeport, Conn., B. A. Hodges from Joplin, Mo., and lastly, but by no means least, Nick Dumovitch, late of Los Angeles. The last two named perform with their left wing.

Relies On Old Prospects.

The lining up of only four new men is somewhat below the average for any big league club but this is easily explained. Killefer had so many excellent possibilities on hand when last season closed that there really was no necessity for getting excited over the building up of the mound corps. He's relying on these fellows to come through.

For a nucleus of a staff the Cubs' boss has Grover Alexander, Victor Aldridge and Ernest Osborne. There are three fairly formidable gents. In addition Virgil Cheeves may finally find himself and following him are Tony Kaufmann, George Stueland, Vic Keen, Martin "Lefty" Dumovitch and Fred Fussell, the latter a raw southpaw who aroused great expectations last fall after he had been picked off the semipro lots at Denver.

Southpaws Are Needed.

The southpaw angle really is the big thing that Killefer must work on. Both Fussel and Hodges are too young and inexperienced to be figured as candidates for regular berths. Sometimes fellows such as these produce right at the jump but the cases are rare. However, even counting out this pair as well as Martin Dumovitch, the Cub manager has an ace in Nick Dumovitch, recently purchased from Los Angeles for four players and some cash.

Nick, although boasting only two years in organized ball, was looked upon as a prize by Coast league adherents last season. He is said to have everything a left hander should have, even control, which is unusual. On his record he appears to be every bit as good as Jakie May, the squatty left hander purchased this winter by the Yankees from the Vernon, Cal., club.

Has Making of Good Staff.

It doesn't take much figuring to see that if Killefer gets only one of his southpaw rookies going the Cubs are bound to stir up some excitement next season. It is a certainty Alex, with proper rest between starts, is going to win frequently. Aldridge should be even better than before, and Osborne, with the confidence born as the result of his great showing in the city series, ought to be a star. Add to this trio a left hander and a couple of gents able to fill in occasionally, and you have a real layout.

OKLAHOMA CITY FANS EXCITED OVER RING SHOW

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 6.—The boxing carnival at Oklahoma City, Monday night, is attracting about as much attention as the barbecue and inaugural of Gov. Jack Walton at the fair grounds, also on Monday. All boxers are on the ground and had their final workout this afternoon at the gymnasium.

Up to today Jim Delaney was a favorite to win over Hugh Walker, but today Walker was made a 2 to 1 favorite to win. Andy Schmader of Omaha, arrived today and looked great in his workout this afternoon. Schmader and Ole Anderson step ten rounds in the semi-windup.

Bobby Corbett and Roy Conley go ten rounds in the curtain raiser.

HIGH TAXES MAY KILL TURF RACE GAME IN ONTARIO

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 6.—Racetracks here may be closed temporarily, unless the Ontario government agrees to a reduction in taxes, an official of one of the racing associations announced today. The levy, which amounted to approximately $4,000,000 last season, has proved too great a burden, it was said.

The government exacts a daily license fee of $7,500, which the associations wish reduced to about $2,500. A "rakeoff" tax of 5 per cent on all winning tickets should be reduced to 3 per cent, the racing men declare.

REORGANIZE M.-O. BASEBALL LOOP

Flint, Mich., Jan. 6.—Reorganization of the Michigan-Ontaria Baseball league to include Hamilton and London, Ont., and Saginaw, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Flint, and Bay City, Mich., was consummated here last night. Thomas J. Halligan of Flint will head the circuit.

The directors voted to adopt a "split season," the first half beginning May 1 and ending July 1 and the second half starting July 3 and ending Sept. 9. A post-season series will decide the championship.

A general admission charge of 50 cents and a $1,500 forfeit were adopted.

Cleveland Amateur Bout Ban Is Lifted by A. A. U.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 6.—The ban placed on amateur boxing in Cleveland by the Allegheny Mountain association of the Amateur Athletic union has been removed by William S. Haddock of Pittsburgh, president of the association, who came here to investigate charges made against local boxers and promoters. Removal of the ban was made on condition that rules of the union be complied with. Five local residents have been appointed to supervise the sport for the A. A. U.

BREAKS WORLD ICE MARK

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Jan. 6.—Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, skating in the amateur races here today, broke the world's record for 100 yards by skating the distance in :09 2-5. Jewtraw also equaled the world's record of :19 for the 220 yard event. Both races were made in open competition on a certified track, with the required timers and other officials present.

The former recognized 100 yard record of :09 3-5 was made by Morris Wood at Verona Lake, N. J., in 1908.

COAST LEAGUE CHIEF ASKS LANDIS FOR RULE ON DRAFT AGREEMENT

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 6.—President William H. McCarthy of the Pacific Coast Baseball league telegraphed K. M. Landis, baseball commissioner today to ascertain the facts of a report that the major leagues have effected an agreement that all players sent from the major to the minor leagues by direct sale or on an optional understanding are subject to the draft.

According to McCarthy the two major leagues are reported not only to have entered into this agreement but to have provided for the increasing of optional agreement players from eight to fifteen.

"If such an understanding has been reached," McCarthy said, "there has been a deliberate breach of faith, of contract and of the major-minor agreement on the part of the big leagues. It can merely be a subterfuge to foist the draft on the nondraft minor organizations. We claim the right to dispose of the contracts of our players as we see fit."

THISTLE, HARVEY SOCCER TEAMS IN CUP GAME TODAY

President Jack Parry of the Peel Cup commission announced last night that the game between Harvey and the Thistles in the first round of the Peel Cup tournament, originally scheduled for today at Bricklayers' Park, will be played at Harvey. These teams already have met twice, the first game being a tie, 2-2. In the replay the Scots won, 1-0, but the suburbanites protested.

The only game today within the city limits will take place at 27th street and Kostner avenue, where the Bricklayers, Chicago's representatives in the National Cup tourney, will meet Sparta Union, leader of the District league.

The Scullins of St. Louis, holders of the national soccer championship, had a close call last Sunday when they defeated the Vesper-Buicks of the St. Louis Professional league, 3 to 2, after the latter had secured a lead of two goals. The Scullins have to play the St. Leos of St. Louis a week from today, and the winner will meet the Bricklayers of Chicago.

In the western division of the national cup race the Jeanette and Arden teams are still in the race, while in the eastern division the survivors are the Paterson team of New Jersey and Hartford, who have to play a match in the fourth round, and the Fore Rivers, who play the Abbot Worsted team of Massachusetts. The New York Soccer club and the J. P. Coats team of Pawtucket are the other survivors.

PORT HURON TO PROTEST TAKING OF FRANCHISE

Port Huron, Mich., Jan. 6.—Owners of the Port Huron-Sarnia baseball club have appealed to K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, against the action of the Michigan-Ontario league yesterday in taking over their franchise, according to Louis Bergman, president of the club. The franchise was taken over, he asserted, without remuneration. Civil action, he added, will be taken if an adjustment is not obtained through the baseball commissioner.

Action of the league directors in taking over this franchise as well as those of Kitchener and Brantford, Ont., preceded reorganization of the league to include Hamilton and London, Ont., and Saginaw, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, Grand Rapids, Flint, and Bay City. The reorganized circuit represents a consolidation of Michigan-Ontario and Central league clubs, the latter organization having been dissolved.

Athletic Rule of Navy to Be Changed Jan. 15

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The athletic administration of the Naval academy will be greatly changed after the departure Jan. 15 of Commander D. L. Howard, who has occupied the positions of athletic officer and secretary-treasurer of the navy athletic association for more than three years. Lieut. P. F. Perry, assistant athletic and gymnastic officer, will act as athletic officer and secretary of the association, while the duties of treasurer will be performed by Roland R. Thomas, now civilian assistant to the athletic officer.

Mitchell-Dundee Bout Is Postponed to Jan. 29

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 6.—The Richie Mitchell-Johnny Dundee boxing contest, scheduled for Monday night, has been postponed to Jan. 2. Physicians who examined Mitchell's injured shoulder last night said today he would be able to box on that date.

Johnny Mendelsohn had been substituted for Mitchell for next Monday night, but Dundee would not agree to the change.

HEYDLER FAVORS TEST OF 2 SUNDAY GAMES

Atlantic City, N. J., Jan. 6.—John A. Heydler, president of the National league, said today he would favor making a test of conflicting Sunday dates between the rival New York clubs, leaving final decision to public opinion.

He deplored that "personal or club animosities" should be injected into the schedule situation by the Yankees and Giants, but said that the committee faced a knotty problem in seeking to adjust the situation.

He began working on this and other subjects today with Ban Johnson and Barney Dreyfuss, the other members of the schedule committee.

Room for Two Games.

"I believe our first consideration should be to supply the public demand for Sunday afternoon games in the greatest community in the world," said Heydler. "I have seen thousands of persons turned away from the Polo grounds on Sundays and holidays. In my judgment we should not treat this as a purely club or leage matter, but look at it from the angle of what the public desires.

"Mr. Dreyfuss and I are agreed in this view and while we are in opposition to Mr. Johnson, we are willing to shoulder the responsibility of making some kind of a test of this conflict proposition so that the public may have a chance to make the final decision."

Why Yank Deal Fell.

New York, Jan. 6.—Col. Jacob Ruppert's side of the story of the failure of the negotiaions by which he was to buy the one-half interest in the New York American league baseball club held by his partner, Col. T. L. Huston, and become sole owner, came out today.

Before he departed for Chicago to attend a meeting of brewery interests, Col. Ruppert explained why the sale fell through after the purchase price said to have been $1,125,000 had been agreed upon.

"When the lawyers came to draw up the contract there were some clauses to which Col. Huston objected," said Col. Ruppert. "We had a series of talks. Finally, after we had agreed to disagree, we agreed to agree, and decided to call the sale off.

Not for Sale—Ruppert.

"My share of the Yankees is not for sale," added Col. Ruppert. "Just now I am heart and soul with the team and I would like to see them win another championship. I am interested in the game and like it."

FRANK KRAMER TO TRAIN LOCAL BICYCLE RACER

Frank Kramer, retired champion sprint bike racer, has found in Chicago a youngster whom he is going to try to place on the championship pedestal. The youngster is "Red" Zeigler of the Calerton A. C. He has been riding amateur races in Chicago for three years and is 17 years old.

Kramer saw Zeigler in the amateur sprint races which preceded the last six day bike race at the Coliseum. Yesterday Paddy Harmon received a letter from Kramer, who is now in Europe getting riders for the six day race starting here Feb. 11. It read: "I have been looking over the youngsters on the indoor winter tracks here, and will have some good men for your next race. But nowhere have I seen a youngster who looks so good to me as that red-headed Zeigler kid. Have him see me at the next six day race there, because I want to take him east next summer and develop him myself."

PULLMANS MEET OPALS TO SETTLE GRID SUPREMACY

Following weeks of challenge and arguments, the Pullman A. C. and Opal A. A. football teams will settle all disputes as to their respective merits today at Dexter pavilion. Pullman has been defeated only once in two years while the Opals are undefeated this season. The contest is expected to be bitterly fought, as Pullman was a close contender for the Midwest league championship which was won by the Opals. The Opals will have Gus Fetz, O'Malley, Stallman and Bepple in the lineup while the Pullman team will rely on such stars as Capt. Don Davidson, Nelson, La Forrest and Hanley. The game starts at 2 o'clock.

WISCONSIN STATE LEAGUE MEETS IN APPLETON TODAY

Green Bay., Wis., Jan. 6.—A meeting of the Wisconsin state league will be held tomorrow afternoon in Appleton on the call of President T. E. McGillan, to discuss plans for the 1923 baseball season and the application of several other cities for admission into the league. Representatives of the Marinette-Menominee, Green Bay, Manitowoc, Appleton, and Menasha clubs will attend.

SOU'PAW BROWN BURNED OUT HIS FUSE TOO YOUNG

This is the third article of a series on great boxers who failed to become champions, and the reasons why.

BY SIDNEY SUTHERLAND.

"Say, there's a guy boxing up at Brown's tonight you ought to see. He's a darb—good boxer, fast, and he's got a punch. But the reason you ought to go is that he's a freak—stands with his right hand stuck out in front instead of his left."

"Right hand out in front? Never heard of a bird like that. Who's he tangling with tonight? What's his name?"

"He's boxing 'Harlem Tommy' in the main bout."

"Must be good to mix with Murphy. But what's this guy's name?"

"He's called 'Knockout Brown.' Come on, let's watch him. He's going to be the lightweight champion before he's through."

Pose Amazed Boxing Fans.

The two men participating in this far from fanciful dialogue—there were many similar conversations along Broadway in 1911—were seated presently at the 23d street ringside. While they waited for the feature event, the less informed spectator was introduced by his friend to the exploits that had made the new fighter with the unheard of style a headliner in the ten round no decision bouts of that period.

"Knockout's" name was—and is—Valentine Braun. Born in the lower east side of Manhattan of German-American parents, young Valentine trod eagerly in the footprints of many another boxer who has risen to conspicuousness. Odd neighborhood jobs his intermittent and usually poorly rewarded livelihood, he chose for a hobby the punching of other boys' noses.

Of course, he could punch harder and do it more quickly than his companions could, and, of course, he began to dog the footsteps of the celebrity who had won deathless honors in the vicinity by appearing in $5 preliminaries at some of the numerous clubs that dotted any diagram of Gotham's sport history at the time.

Begins to Learn Fighting.

Valentine gained precious access to the gymnasium by volunteering to run errands for the neighborhood pug while he trained. Other idolators were rushing about the big room ministering lovingly to their idols in trunks and boxing shoes. Before long young Braun was permitted to remove his shirt, don the shapeless old gloves the boxers used for training, and try his luck with votaries of his age and heft.

He won the approving consensus of those tolerant toughs who watched the kids awkwardly battering each other about. As the months passed, Braun was given his tryout. That he made good without delay is shown by his record, obtainable in any book of his time.

A glance at that record for 1908 to 1911, inclusive, finds it generously studded with knockouts. He won 49 of his 100 contests in those four years by stopping his opponents.

No Insignificant Feat.

True, their names are musty in oblivion's calendar, their caliber was puny, and their prominence nil, but he, likewise, was a beginner; and it is no meritless feat definitely to knock unconscious any tyro of your size and weight and age and general ability.

Braun was fortunate from the start in obtaining the services of a crafty, wise and persuasive manager—Dan Morgan—by ironic sporting editors dubbed "Dumb Dan" because few there are who can talk as rapidly, voluminously and tirelessly as he in extolling the virtues of his charges. He soon moved "Knockout" from the opening bouts to the semi-windups, and then to the principal matches of the evening.

Under Morgan's guidance the money poured in, and the blond, sturdy, cross-eyed little southpaw battled his way to newspaper decisions in scores of battles. There were many crack lightweights in the east in those days. "Knockout" whipped them all, or got as good as a hairline draw. His fight with "Harlem Tommy" Murphy, pretext for the opening paragraph hereof, is a classic in ring lore.

Spectators Go Wild.

How they boxed with extraordinary cleverness, how they drove home stunning straights and crippling uppercuts, how their footwork and ducking and jabbing and hooking and slugging brought the packed house to its feet and kept it there, and how the reporters crouched at the ringside were unable to pick the winner—all this will be told and reiterated for your amusement and enlightenment by any New Yorker so fortunate as to have witnessed the bout. And you will hear other frenzied stories concerning his clashes with Leach Cross, Ad Wolgast, Matt Wells, Bert Keyes, Abe Attel, Matty Baldwin, Johnny Lore, Willie Beecher, and Jimmy Duffy.

Yet "Knockout Brown," with the faith of a betting boxing fraternity pinned to his queer right fist, never reached the heights defended in his era by Battling Nelson and Ad Wolgast. And this is the reason why:

You read in a preceding paragraph the words "scores of battles." The phrase is justified. Where other boys, later to win the title, were fighting from six to a dozen times each year, Braun was fighting twenty and more rugged opponents each twelfth month. In 1908, he boxed thirty-five times; in 1909, fifteen; in 1910, twenty-eight, and in 1911 and 1912, twenty-two times each—or a fight nearly every two weeks for five years.

Nobody Could Stand That Gait.

He simply burned out his fuse. Still growing—he was only 17 years old in 1908—he could not train as faithfully as he did and fight every other week without paying the price. Consequently, though neither he nor his manager realized it, "Knockout" had played out his string, when Morgan decided there were fields more golden and other honors more desirable than were to be found in the comparative safety of the east's short, no decision contests. So he took him to California.

But they both knew it when Brown met that terror of the Pacific coast arenas, Joe Rivers. The bout took place at Vernon, near Los Angeles, on Feb. 22, 1913, and in the tenth round the tow headed little easterner collapsed under the T. N. T. Rivers carried in his right glove. A photograph of that knockout is a pitiful thing.

Stopped Again; In Fifteenth Round.

A few weeks later Valentine was knocked out in the same ring in the fifteenth round by Bud Anderson; and astute Morgan realized that the scores of battles in New York had taken their toll of the strength a champion must have.

A few more mediocre performances and "Knockout Brown," at the age of 25—an age when men in other lines are just beginning to roll up their sleeves in the start of life's battles—passed out of the sport page spotlight forever.

Under Dan's sagacious tutelage, however, Valentine saved a goodly portion of his ring earnings, and today he has a comfortable income from his investments, a contented family, a fine home in New Jersey, and a future free from worry or regret.

(The next article will tell the story of Johnnie O'Leary.)

BURNED OUT

"KNOCKOUT" BROWN.

Valentine "Knockout" Brown, Gotham's pugilistic dynamo of a number of years back, burned himself out of a chance to become champion by fighting too often. He was a great southpaw boxer until Joe Rivers knocked him out.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE

ARE YOU A WILLIE?

Willie once held seven hearts
Including king and jack;
It seemed to him a hand of parts
Though aces he did lack.
He bid three hearts, and three no trumps
The player next did roar;
But Willie thought the man a chump
And raised his bid to four.

Willie once held seven hearts
Including king and jack,
And when the other doubled four
He promptly doubled back;
The bidding stopped—a card was led,
Then things began to hum,
The other fellows took ten tricks
And Willie now plays rhum.

The pathetic story told in the exquisite stanzas above is entirely true and may warn others from the same sad fate. Some new features are shown in the first of the deals which follows:

THE HANDS.

West secured 10 tricks.

Had the declarer played the queen of spades on the first trick, he would have wrecked the deal completely, but the declarer in this case was much too good to follow the silly rule of always covering an honor with an honor.

After the fourth trick, north could be counted on for four clubs and four hearts and the declarer played splendidly in taking two rounds of diamonds, regardless of the fact that it established that suit in the south hand.

The second discard wrecked the north hand and whether he discarded a club, a heart, or the king of spades, the declarer was certain to win all the remaining tricks. The deal would have been more interesting had south held the queen of clubs. In that case, after making the ace and king of clubs, the declarer would have led the queen and another heart, playing the king from dummy on the second round. The declarer would have led the queen of spades from dummy, winning the last two tricks in the deal with the ace and nine of hearts.

Bogash Wants Battle with Middleweight King

New York, Jan. 6.—Louis Bogash, Bridgeport's crack middleweight, who is boxing in the best form of his career at the present time, is hot on the trail of the middleweight title and is anxious to go to bat with either Johnny Wilson, the middleweight champion; Mike O'Dowd, recognized titleholder in New York state; Jock Malone, or any of the other lads in the division. Bogash is a slugger and never fails to give the fans a run for their money, as he is always ready to trade punches with an opponent.

Johnny Meyers to Take on Coast Wrestler This Month

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 6.—Johnny Meyers of Chicago, world's champion middleweight wrestler, is on the way to Los Angeles for a bout here with Sam Sandow of Long Beach, Cal., later this month, probably Jan. 17, according to a telegram received from Chicago.

GIBBONS ON WAY EAST TO DISCUSS DEMPSEY MATCH

Tom Gibbons of St. Paul, considered the logical opponent for Jack Dempsey, king of the heavyweights, will pass through Chicago tomorrow on his way to New York, where he will discuss terms of a proposed match with Dempsey. Gibbons and Manager Eddie Kane will meet Tex Rickard and preliminary plans for a championship bout will be discussed.

This was the information given out yesterday by Manager Kane, who expects to have little trouble coming to terms with Promoter Rickard, who is keen for the match.

Thinks Tom Is Ready.

"I am sure Gibbons is ready for Dempsey," Kane said yesterday. "You will note we have not clamored for a match with the champion since he won the title from Willard. I knew Tom was not ready. I knew he needed more experience, but I am now convinced he has everything which goes to make a worthy challenger."

Gibbons will arrive in the morning and may stay over a day to second Bud Taylor, Terre Haute bantamweight, in his fight with Jimmy Kelly before the Racine A. C. tomorrow night. Tom will take a light workout at the Arcade tomorrow afternoon.

Interest In Kelly-Taylor Bout.

Local fans are taking a keen interest in the Kelly-Taylor bout and indications are a capacity crowd will see the mill, which will be supported by four other contests. There will be thirty-four rounds of boxing in all. Tickets can be obtained at 129 North Dearborn street or at the Arcade gymnasium.

Johnny Buff, former bantamweight champion, and Manager Lou Diamond yesterday passed through Chicago on their way to the coast, where Johnny will engage in some four round bouts this winter. The former champion recently underwent an operation and is not in the best of health, but the California climate is expected to put him on his feet.

Sailor Freedman, local lightweight, and Manager Dick Curley returned from New York, where Curley posted a forfeit to bind a match with Bennie Leonard. Before leaving for the west Billy Gibson, manager of the lightweight champion, asserted Charlie White will never get a shot at the title until he boxes Freedman.

Pal Moore, local bantamweight, is hard at work at the Arcade for his ten round clash with Bud Taylor at East Chicago on Jan. 15. Eddie Long, matchmaker for the club, explained the arena is only three blocks from all railroad transportation, and that his ring will be pitched three and one-half feet above the floor, leaving all seats, with the exception of the first ten rows, elevated. A balcony surrounds the hall. Tickets can be purchased at the usual places.

Patsy Flannigan, St. Louis bantam, under management of Joe Keefe, is in town and ready to take on any of the 118 pounders. A match with Joe Burman at East Chicago is pending.

Square post, No. 232, of the American Legion, will hold its next stag on Wednesday. Tickets and other information can be obtained at 129 North Dearborn street.

Howard Carr, owner of the Arcade gymnasium, announced his gymnasium will be open today so that boxers who will engage in contests during the week may train.

Hussane and Stecher Sign for Finish Mat Battle Here

YOUSSIFF HUSSANE.

The Joe Stecher-Yousiff Hussane wrestling match assuredly is on at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium on Jan. 15, and Ald. Oscar Olson, chairman of the city athletic commission, will have his wishes granted. Not long ago the two men met in a six round affair which was declared a draw, and at that time Ald. Olson expressed a desire that the men should go to a finish to ascertain which was the better man.

The match has been hanging fire ever since, with Stecher holding out for a limited contest with a referee's decision. Hussane did a lot of balking until finally the scissors hold expert agreed to go to a finish, but still insisted that the match be staged with the White rules governing.

The promoters were anxious to get the matter settled and believed that the differences could be ironed out once the men posted forfeits. This has been done, and the only thing to be settled now is the code under which the men will wrestle. It is believed that the Nebraskan will agree to a finish match under the old rules.

The promoters declare that the winner may get a match with Ed (Strangler) Lewis, and this probably will be an incentive to Stecher to back down from his stand. A match of this nature under control of the city athletic commission probably would meet popular approval.

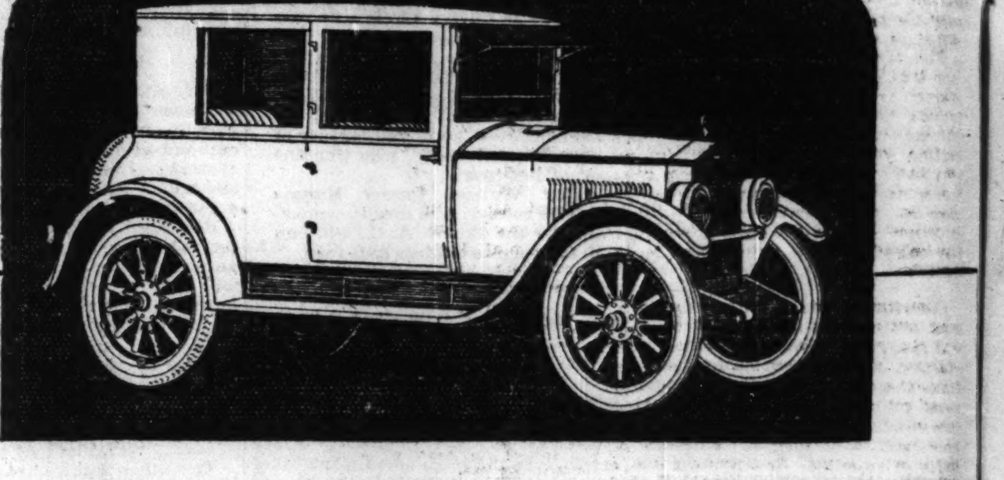
Hussane, who is credited with putting up a stellar exhibition against Stecher in their last brush, has been in training ever since the return match was suggested, and from all reports Stecher has been leaving nothing undone to fit himself for the real acid test of his "comeback" campaign.

With only a week to go, the two mat foes no doubt will put in some good licks to be sure they are in physical condition to go an unlimited time. Tickets will be on sale at the usual places in a day or two, according to officials of the Midwest Athletic club which will stage the contest.

SWEDISH CLUB TO STAGE A.A.U. MAT BOUTS JAN. 20-21

The fourth annual invitation A. A. U. wrestling tournament will be held under the auspices of the Swedish-American A. A. on Jan. 20 and 21, Harry Berz, secretary of the registration committee of the Central A. A. U. and in charge of the mat tournament announced yesterday. Bouts in eight classes, from 118 pounds to heavyweights, will be held, the preliminaries being carded for Jan. 20 and the finals Jan. 21.

Secretary Berz also announced that the headquarters of the Central A. A. U. registration committee is now located at 429 Monadnock building. The former offices were in the Malters building.



Essex Coach Now $1145 Freight and Tax Extra

Recently Reduced $100

Until Essex brought out the Coach a closed car on a first rate chassis could not be had at a moderate price.

That was one year ago and the price was then $1495. More than 27,000 Coaches have been sold. That volume has made possible price reductions totaling $350. The Essex Coach is lower in price than even open cars with which its chassis worth may be compared.

What Experts and Owners Know

It is a handsome car, with all essential closed car advantages. The chassis costs more to build than the chassis of any like-priced closed car in the world. English and American experts claim it the finest of its size built.

Many Essex cars with more than 70,000 miles service are still doing capable, satisfactory service.

The Coach is sturdy and comfortable. It retains its good looks and affords all comforts at a price you can't ignore.

MOTORDOM

Cure Troubles in Starting System Well in Advance

Simple Prevention Rules Will Prove Best Treatment.

BY HIGH SPEED.

TO every motorist sooner or later there comes the unpleasant experience of stepping on the starter button and instead of the merry whirr of turning gears being greeted by stony silence. It is scarcely remarkable that this occurs, indeed the wonder is that the starter holds up as well as it does under the abuse that it receives at the hands of the average car owner.

The starter is not a delicate unit, but it does perform a most strenuous service and the various components must receive a limited but regular amount of attention if they are to continue performing regularly.

The starter system embodies the following units: A storage battery, the cables that connect the battery with the rest of the system, a switch for bringing the starter into action, and as a general thing the frame of the car, which is used to return the current to the battery after it has turned over the engine.

In cases of starter failure the first thing to suspect is the battery which supplies the current that operates the starter. Once a week during the active season the battery must be filled to level with distilled water. The acid solution should be tested at these times with a hydrometer, showing the specific gravity of the solution. If this has fallen below 1200 the battery is away below charge and must be recharged without delay. If the battery is permitted to become dry or to fall so low in charge that it cannot turn over the starter, the cause of the failure is at once revealed.

The next place to suspect is the cables that connect the battery with the starter by way of the switch. While trouble here is not so frequent, nevertheless insulation may wear through, setting up shorts that drain the battery and prevent the starter from doing the work. Occasionally also the switch goes out of business, but if the battery is proved to have adequate current and the cables are all right examine the switch.

Sometimes the starting motor itself goes out of business through mechanical failure or lackof lubrication. The starting motor is generally lubricated from the engine on one end and by a small oil hole on the other. The engine lubrication is automatic, but the oil hole requires a drop of oil every 500 miles of running. In some cases both ends of the starting motor depend on oil holes for lubricant.

The brushes and commutator of the starting motor do not need oil; in fact, if oil gets on these parts it is likely to stop the motor from operating. In this case the oil may be cleaned off by holding a small piece of fine sandpaper against the commutator while the motor is running.

From all this the car owner will get the obvious lesson that troubles in the starting system are best cured by reasonable care beforehand. Keep the battery up to its work, watch the cables for broken insulation. Give the starting motor the drop of oil it needs and the starter will continue to whirr obediently to your foot pressure while the crank rusts in idleness under the back seat.

Michigan Moves.

It took two special trains to carry the advance guard of Detroit and Michigan automobile manufacturers, dealers, and others interested in the automobile industry to New York Friday night to attend the opening of the annual automobile show. Detroiters, as well as Detroit built cars, are always in the majority at this annual exhibit, and they make the metropolis their headquarters during the week. The opening of the twenty-third proved no exception.

WHEEL ALIGNMENT.

Whenever the car has suffered a bump of any kind, a crash against the curb, or anything of the sort, the wheels should immediately be tested for alignment, as a bang of this kind is quite enough to force them out of correct alignment, which will lead to excessive tire wear.

OUTWITTING ZERO WEATHER

London, Ont., automobiles are "sitting pretty" this winter as the result of a novel scheme worked out by a local light and power company for cars parked in the open. The company has placed taps on light poles at regular intervals, and any car owner desiring special heating service pays an annual fee for a key, connecting cord, and electric engine heater. The engine is kept warm in zero weather by connecting the cord and heater to the nearest pole.

"Ake" Is Removed from Lake Street; Pavement Opened

THE old Lake street route to Elgin—state highway No. 5—is open for use, or practically so, according to a recent road survey made by the highway department of the Chicago Motor club.

From Melrose Park west the new pavement is finished to a point a half mile west of Bloomingdale; then comes a mile of graded dirt, which will be paved in the spring.

Pavement then extends to just east of Ontarioville, where the state is making a relocation for an underpass at the Chicago and Northwestern tracks. For a shade over a half mile the old highway is used; concrete begins again just after crossing the railroad at Ontarioville.

Four and a half miles west of Ontarioville begins a half mile unpaved stretch, where the state is to build a viaduct over the Elgin, Joliet and Eastern tracks. Pavement extends through Elgin over Villa street to Chicago street, west on Chicago street across the Fox river, north on North State street for one block, west on Highland avenue, forking left on Larkin avenue to the Elgin city limits.

Then comes a mile unpaved, which will be graded this winter and paved in the spring. At Hornbeek's corner the concrete is again met. Out of Elgin 10.7 miles a gap in the pavement of a half mile has been left for a railroad viaduct, and 2.8 miles beyond this point there is an unpaved stretch of 2.7 miles. West of Elgin 35.4 miles a block remains to be paved and 9.9 miles beyond Rockford a quarter mile is still unpaved at a railroad. From this point to Freeport and for two miles beyond the road is paved. In other words, the route from Chicago to Freeport is all paved save 6.8 miles.

AUTO COMMUTERS.

In eighty large cities of the United States there are nearly 135,000 suburbanites mainly dependent on the automobile for travel to town or office.

STRONG MEASURES

With various punitive efforts failing to stop the pounding to pieces of certain highways in Maryland, the authorities have adopted a novel method for putting an end to this trouble.

Truck drivers are forced by the highway police to unload and pile at the roadside such part of the load in excess of the law and then to send for another truck at the operator's expense to carry it off. It was soon found that drivers were careful to keep within the lawful load.

GOSSIP of the AUTO TRADE

AUBURN has stepped into the 1923 field with a double appeal to the motoring public. Announcement by the Edwards & Christ company, Chicago distributors, shows a sweeping reduction in the price of all standard models, ranging from $100 to $200, and the introduction of two new series of cars to the Auburn line. The latter is a deviation from the "one chassis" practice of the factory in the past. The new series includes the "6-63 Supreme," equipped with the new Auburn motor and ranging in price from $1,650 to $2,245 for the closed cars. The present "6-51" models, equipped wtih Continental engines, will be continued. The "6-43" series will carry a Continental engine and corresponding parts.

Increased sales and service has resulted in the opening of new and handsome Case headquarters at 2436 Michigan avenue by the Smith-Sauer company. The Chicago distributors now consume a large portion of the Case factory production.

Harry C. Stutz's new six cylinder model, shown for the first time at the New York show, has proved a sensation. It is declared to be one of the most clean cut engineering jobs on exhibit and has the double advantage of lightness and flexibility.

Joe McDuffy, pioneer of the automobile industry and veteran of the Chicago row, has severed his connection with the Cole Motor company in Indianapolis, according to announcement made yesterday. He has been assistant general manager of the concern. His plans for the future will be announced after the New York show.

Latest Overland and Willys-Knight models were unveiled to Chicago last night, when the Overland Motor company held open house in its salesrooms, 2419 Michigan avenue.

The Hupmobile price reduction, ranging from $35 to $110 on all models, announced last week, is the second cut the company has made in the last six months and the third within a year.

CARBURETOR FIRE.

In the rare cases where the carburetor catches fire because of a backfire the conflagration may be extinguished by turning off the gasoline and then racing the engine. In this way the engine sucks the flaming liquid out of the carburetor and so the fire dies out of itself.

ASBESTOS WASHERS.

Spare asbestos washers should always be treated before being placed among the spares in the car. A six hours' soaking in olive oil, followed by a draining and brief drying and a final rubbing with fine black lead, will give a good tight washer that will come adrift cleanly at any time.

Sheets Open War on "Bandit" Road Bidders in State

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. — "Wildcat road bidders" were advised to discontinue their operations in Illinois by Supt. Frank T. Sheets of the state division of highways, in welcoming road builders to the letting of contracts here of 195 miles of hard road, 15 sections of grading, and 12 bridges.

The contractors were gathered in the representatives hall, where Supt. Sheets addressed them.

"However," he added, "lately there have transpired several incidents that mar your fair record. 'Wildcat' bidders have come here with you. They come intending to get the calls at a low price, and then make profit on it, not by honest work, but by farming it out to other road builders. I want to give warning now that the state of Illinois has not bids for sale. Our contracts will go to the lowest bidder, and you who bid are the persons we expect to deal with, and not with another."

Contracts which Mr. Sheets then started reading for bids provided for work in thirty counties in the state.

A NATIONAL INSTITUTION

1898 MOTOR INDIANA TRUCKS 1923

Buying A Truck? Try This Plan

KNOW the manufacturer—and you will know the truck he builds. Study his—

1. Stability
2. Financial Strength
3. Experience
4. Policies
5. Scope
6. Performance

These six factors determine any manufacturer's ability and desire to give maximum truck-value and service.

INDIANA'S QUALIFICATIONS

1. STABILITY: A strong, old-established company, founded in 1898. Nearly a quarter-century of steady, solid, substantial growth.
2. FINANCIAL STRENGTH: Ample capital and strong resources, assuring the advantageous buying which makes INDIANA values possible.
3. EXPERIENCE: Twenty-four years of successful manufacturing, of which twelve years have been exclusively devoted to the manufacture of high-grade motor trucks.
4. POLICIES: A fixed determination to build nothing but the best, to put value and service ahead of all else, and to give the utmost for the money.
5. SCOPE: A nation-wide institution in manufacturing, sales and service; eleven strategically located factory parts-depots covering the entire country, and hundreds of distributor and dealer parts-stocks available in as many cities.
6. PERFORMANCE: Thousands of Indiana Trucks in service in almost every country—many of them in daily operation 10 years and longer, and many that have gone a hundred thousand miles and more.

The makers of Indiana Trucks are qualified to give you value and service—and are satisfied with nothing else.

Auto Perfection Finds Expression in Gotham Show

Makers Pack 23 Years of Achievement Into Exhibits.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—Twenty-three years of American mechanical achievement reached the acme of its climb this afternoon when the doors of Grand Central palace swung open to the greatest army of automobile fans that has ever fought its way to the premiere of a national automobile show.

The opening spectacle was immense. A half hour after the first 5,000 jammed their way through the five palace portals every available inch of space, equal in area to four city blocks, was filled to overflowing. Electric motors hummed. Lights struck color cascades from hundreds of brilliant exhibits. A half dozen bands blared into the medley of shop talk, the reunions of "old timers," and the gala day riot of beautifully gowned women and prosperous men. More than 400 accessory exhibits whirled into lifelike motion and Motordom entered, full stride, into the greatest prospective year in industrial history.

The 1923 display is staged on a more elaborate scale than ever before. A total of seventy-nine makes of automobiles and 400 accessory devices are included in the show. Closed car models and complete motoring equipment on every automobile displayed are far and away the features of the show, but engineering refinements, improved body lines, and striking color combinations run a close second in the race for popular approval.

Competition in automobile building was never greater, and for this reason more individuality is built into the new models and manufacturers have reached the limit in artistry and mechanical perfection in order to bring their offerings into the limelight.

The show this year is replete in working demonstrations. In years past an enterprising exhibitor here and there has brought working models, cutout chassis and electrically moved devices to his booth in order to impress owners and prospective owners with the actual play of moving parts. Today the huge crowds watched engines running as they will on the open road, tires travel over the obstacles they will meet in daily use, crankshafts and rear axles subjected to the strains held in high hills and country roads, lubricants doing their stuff under operating conditions, and accessories accomplishing the things their makers promise.

In short, the show of 1923 will go farther in teaching the motorist why mechanical wheels go round and what the modern automobile and its accessory is called upon to do than any exposition ever staged.

Not the least of the annual show attractions is the elaborate decorative scheme worked out in detail to lend the desired atmosphere. Fans today entered vast rose bowers of velvet touched with gold. They found each of the great palace columns boxed with velvet of American Beauty color in gold frames. The columns in turn have been joined by valances of velvet, edged with gold braid and all windows on the lower of the four floors have been similarly treated, with the addition of French curtains. Mirror chandeliers, glittering with hundreds of lights, are suspended in the center court and artfully arranged mirrors accent the richness of decorative treatment throughout the building.

Blue, set off by foliage and flowers, has been adopted as the color scheme for the second and fourth floors and green has been utilized on the third.

The automotive industry faces the coming year with extreme optimism and confidence. For this industry, at least, the period of reconstruction has practically ended. Despite their universal utility, motor cars were the first to react to the conditions caused by the high cost of materials and labor during the war period.

Car prices have been stabilized, even though slowly; the industry is just closing a year that has been amazing in the volume of production and sales, and there is every indication that the coming year will end in a blaze of glory. Not only are general conditions indicative of continued prosperity, but there is every evidence that the public is in a frame of mind to accept the modern car as the highest expression of design that may be expected for some time to come.

Show week, as usual, will be filled with a succession of conventions, dinners, and meetings of one kind or another. The outstanding social features of show week will be the dinners of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Commodore on Jan. 9, the Motor Accessory and Manufacurers' association at the same hotel on Jan. 10, and the dinner of the Rubber Association of America at the Waldorf-Astoria on Jan. 8. Chief among the business meetings will be the convention of the N. A. C. C. Export Managers on Jan. 8, the annual meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, Jan. 9 to 12, and the N. A. C. C. directors' meeting on Jan. 10.

The following cars are displayed in Grand Central palace: American, Anderson, Apperson, Auburn, Barley, Buick, Cadillac, Case, Chalmers, Chandler, Chevrolet, Cleveland, Cole, Columbia, Courier, Crawford, Dagmar, Davis, Dodge Bros., Dorris, Dort, Durant, Earl, Elcar, Elgin, Essex, Franklin, Gardner, Gray, H. C. S., Handley-Knight, Hatfield, Haynes, Hudson, Hupmobile, Jewett, Jordan, King, Kissel, Lafayette, Lexington, Liberty, Lincoln, Locomobile, McFarlan, Marmon, Maxwell, Mercer, Mitchell, Moon, Nash, National, Noma, Oakland, Oldsmobile, Overland, Packard, Paige-Detroit, Patterson, Peerless, Pierce-Arrow, Pilot, Premier, R. & B. Knight, Rauch-Lang, Reo, Rickenbacker, Roamer, Rotary Six, Stanley, Star, Stearns, Stevens, Studebaker, Stutz, Velie, Westcott, Wills Sainte Claire, Willys-Knight.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." For today's question James H. Burton, 706, 115 South Dearborn street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

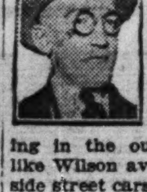
Do you think automobiles should be allowed to park one-half hour within the loop during business hours?

Where Asked.

Cigar store, 5 South Dearborn street.

The Answers.

William J. Major, 643 Melrose street, auto trimming—Yes and no. The trouble is there is practically no place to go outside of Grant park. Many people leave their cars at home because of parking troubles. There was talk about building some sort of public garages every few blocks where people could leave their cars. Haven't read anything about that recently. I think it would bring very good returns.



Quinn Hall, 8 South Dearborn street, cartoonist—I think they ought to be allowed to park their cars any time they want to. If the loop doesn't allow parking stores are going to lose a lot of business, because they allow parking in the outside business districts like Wilson avenue. North and south side street cars should not turn around in the loop; they should go straight through.

J. H. Brunwasser, care Tom Murray company, 112 North La Salle street, uniforms—I don't believe autos should be allowed to park in the loop—Quinn Cassius Hall to the contrary, and in spite of the good cigar he just gave me. But I do agree with him on the through routing of north and south side cars. And we all agree that Chicago needs a subway. Get the traffic moving, then it will be easier to solve our parking problem.

Oscar Olsen, 1813 Homer street, newspaper distributor—Yes, even an hour, for the business man or a man that has business to take care of, but not for people who are just visiting or shopping. The should park outside. And no one should be allowed to park on streets where the elevated roads are. Try to go down one of those streets in a hurry without swearing.

Thomas K. Davey, 725 West 73d street, manufacturer—I suppose there should really be no parking, but one hates to say it. It is imposing a very great hardship not to be permitted to park your car for a few minutes. Seems to me if the existing rules were strictly enforced, and no favoritism shown, it would be much better than it is right now, and we could get along for a little while longer.

Rick's Annual.

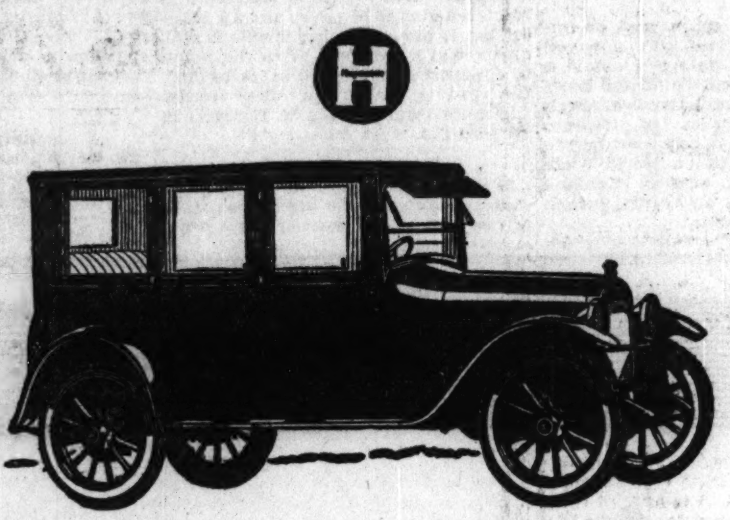
Rickenbacker Motor company's first annual shareholders' meeting was held last week at Detroit, the company's headquarters.

All the original directors and officers were reëlected to the board, and all executives remain the same as from the inception of business. These are: Byron F. Everitt, president and general manager; E. V. Rickenbacker, vice president and director of sales; H. L. Cunningham, secretary-treasurer; R. M. Hood, assistant general manager in charge of purchases; C. M. Tichenor, factory manager, in charge of production; E. R. Evans, chief engineer.

The report showed the concern to be in a flourishing condition and the prospects for the coming year most encouraging.

NO ROADS.

Iceland is reported as having forbidden the importation of automobiles. Lack of roads is said to be the reason given.



No Compromise with Quality in Hupmobile Closed Cars

You have probably observed how fresh is the appearance of Hupmobile closed cars which have been in service over a long period of time.

The notable extent to which these cars hold the values of their original appearance is due to the way the bodies are built and finished.

In the first place, Hupmobile closed bodies are built by Hupmobile, in its own plants. They are made as staunch, as strong, as durable as closed bodies can be built.

Both interior and exterior are finely finished with great permanency of finish, one of the chief ideas in the minds of designer and workmen.

When you buy a Hupmobile closed car you do so in the certainty that it will be a source of saving and of satisfaction for an indefinitely long time.

REPUTATION

The man who builds and the man who buys are both beneficiaries of a good reputation. To the one it is a continuous spur and an incentive—to the other the strongest of all guarantees that what he buys is worthy. ☛ We sometimes speak of winning a reputation as though that were the final goal. The truth is contrary to this. Reputation is a reward, to be sure, but it is really the beginning, not the end of endeavor. It should not be the signal for a let-down, but, rather, a reminder that the standards which won recognition can never again be lowered. From him who gives much—much is forever after expected. ☛ Reputation is never completely earned—it is always being earned. It is a reward—but in a much more profound sense it is a continuing responsibility. ☛ That which is mediocre may deteriorate and no great harm be done. That which has been accorded a good reputation is forever forbidden to drop below its own best. It must ceaselessly strive for higher standards. If your name means much to your public—you are doubly bound to keep faith. You have formed a habit of high aspiration which you cannot abandon—and out of that habit created a reputation which you dare not disown without drawing down disaster. ☛ There is an iron tyranny which compels men who do good work to go on doing good work. The name of that beneficent tyranny is reputation. There is an inflexible law which binds men who build well, to go on building well. The name of that benevolent law is reputation. There is an insurance which infallibly protects those whose reason for buying is that they believe in a thing and in its maker. The name of that kindly insurance is reputation. ☛ Choose without fear that which the generality of men join you in approving. There is no higher incentive in human endeavor than the reward of reputation—and no greater responsibility than the responsibility which reputation compels all of us to assume. Out of that reward and out of that responsibility come the very best of which the heart and mind and soul of man are capable.

Imperial Primer

$4.00 For Fords

Start Your Motor Instantly In COOL Weather!

The worst of winter is ahead—buy an Imperial Primer and do away with starting troubles at once. You need it until late spring.

Double the Life of Your Battery

An Imperial Primer will double the life of your battery, which is only 50% efficient in cold weather. One or two turns of your motor—and you're off. No more grinding the starter, breaking down plates, or recharging.

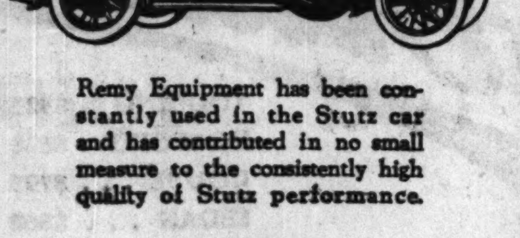
Don't Ruin Your Motor With a Choker

When you start with the choker which comes on your car you flood the cylinders with gas, which seeps down past the pistons, thins out the oil in your crankcase, starts ruinous wear and tear in bearings and cylinders and ends in big repair bills. An Imperial Primer is a necessity on nearly every make of car.

Any dealer or garage can supply you and make a quick and economical installation.

The Imperial Brass Mfg. Co.
Chicago, Ill.

The Imperial Primer draws gasoline from your supply line and shoots it into the cylinder in the form of a quick-firing, atomized vapor. Always works—instantly.



REMY
STARTING LIGHTING IGNITION SYSTEMS

The discriminating public has learned to know that the presence of Remy equipment in any automobile is substantial evidence of car quality throughout. Remy is a quality product, designed and built to insure for car owners that dependable winter and summer starting, lighting, and ignition so necessary to modern driving needs. A car purchaser is amply justified in considering Remy equipment as an important factor in determining his car selection.

Remy Equipment has been constantly used in the Stutz car and has contributed in no small measure to the consistently high quality of Stutz performance.

Authorized Remy Service and genuine Remy parts may be secured from United Motor Service Branches and Authorized Distributors

An Open Invitation to a Special Showing of the 1923 Columbia Sixes—the same improved models that are at the New York Show

Last night there opened at the Grand Central Palace in New York City, the 23rd Annual National Automobile Show, where the latest products of practically every American motor car manufacturer are on display.

The 1923 Columbia Six is represented at New York by a notable exhibit, with a variety of important improvements in the entire line and with several models that are making their first formal appearance.

By special arrangement with the Columbia factory, we are showing this week these same 1923 Columbia Sixes—the line that was announced in the January 6th "Saturday Evening Post" and that is now being exhibited at New York.

Columbia Six prices range from $985 to $1395, f. o. b. Detroit—the lowest ever set on cars offering the recognized values represented by such standard mechanical units as a 50 h. p. Red Seal Continental Motor, Timken Axles, Durston Transmission with Timken Bearings, Borg & Beck Clutch, Auto-Lite electrical equipment, Spicer Universal Joints and other units as widely and favorably known.

Please accept this as a special invitation to visit our New York Show Extension Exhibit, which will continue at our display room all this week. See the Columbia Sixes that are being displayed at the National Automobile Show, and let us demonstrate the performance of these cars on the road.

Industrial Plans for 1923 Include 3,000,000 Motors

Detroit Plants Ready for Big Competitive Battle.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 6.—[Special.]—The year 1922 is now history, but from an automotive standpoint it was a record breaker. Twelve months ago the most optimistic did not predict the great flood of business that rolled like a tidal wave over the industry, but today many manufacturers predict a more prosperous year for 1923 than the one just closed, and are trimming their sails accordingly. Production schedules now arranged, after much thought and study, place the output for 1923 at close to 3,000,000 passenger cars and trucks.

Detroit and other Michigan companies, where 85 per cent of the total product is manufactured, are looking to their finances in preparation for a year that offers the strongest sort of competition, especially in cars of the $1,000 and $1,200 types.

An indication of what is to be expected during the present year is best illustrated in the attitude of the Detroit plants at the present time and during the final months of 1922.

The Ford plant enters the new year with approximately 75,000 persons on the pay roll, and has reduced its inventory period from two weeks to three working days in order to save every minute possible and keep up with the incoming orders. To this company a total of 125,000 unfilled orders means only a question of three weeks' production.

The Dodge Bros. factories are running at capacity, which means 625 cars daily. Maxwell, now in full control of the Chalmers, is going ahead with a schedule which will show a healthy advance over 1922 on both Chalmers and Maxwell models.

The Hupmobile sales for the year just closed totaled 35,000 cars, and according to a statement made by General Manager O. C. Hutchins, the production during 1923 will greatly exceed those figures.

The Cadillac Motor Car company has done away with the usual annual inventory for the first time in its history, in order to meet the demands for cars which has resulted from the recent price reduction.

The body plants and accessories manufacturers are facing what they all claim to be their best year. The mammoth additions in course of erection for the building of bodies will soon be completed and in operation, which will practically double the capacity of 1922, but even with this added facility the demand for closed models has steadily increased to such an extent that there is a serious question whether or not it will be possible to supply it. At the present time body producing plants find their facilities inadequate to meet the volume of business in midwinter.

The unusual heavy weather business is attributed principally to the popularity of the closed car.

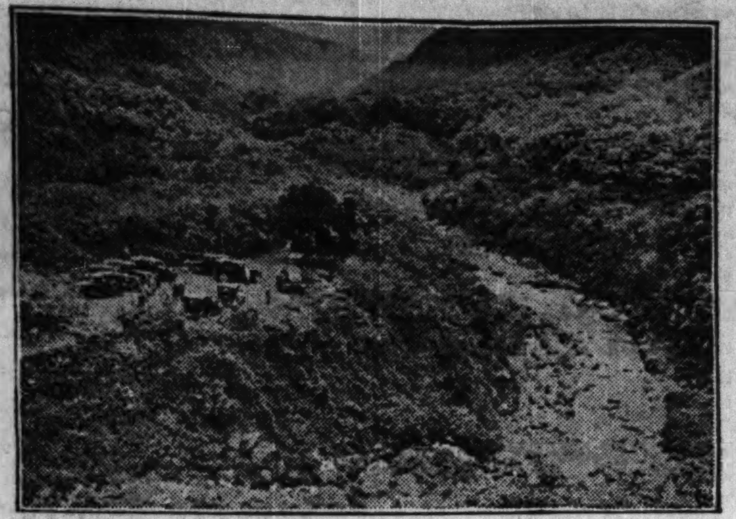
Wins Sales Banner.

Another national sales record has been brought to Chicago as the result of the merchandising and service methods given the public last year by the W. E. Butler company, Chicago distributors for Franklin automobiles. Announcement that the Chicago firm is the 1922 leader of all American distributors was made yesterday by S. E. Ackerman, Franklin sales manager in Syracuse, N. Y.

Rumors Denied.

Rumors that the Paige-Detroit Motor company will discontinue the Paige six for an eight were branded as untrue by President H. M. Jewett. The Paige, now on exhibition at the New York show, is a six. It offers many innovations.

INVADING THE ISLANDS



Motordom is rapidly extending its borders. Here is a party of 100 per cent trail fans "sittin' pretty" on the Table, one of the picturesque spots of the Iao valley on the beautiful South Sea island of Maui. Automobile roads are threading their way to every available spot on the islands.

[Photograph from International.]

Day by Day—

IN every way:

America is encircling the globe with automobiles;

Automobiles are becoming more and more complete;

The automobile is becoming more and more an all weather, all season vehicle;

The efficiency of the automobile is being increased more and more through simplification and interchangeability of parts and units;

The automobile is becoming more and more essential in social, commercial and industrial life;

The automotive industry is developing more and more along railroad lines;

The automobile is meaning more and more to millions of men and women in terms of human freedom.

Pays the Bill.

Officials of the American Automobile association have indorsed the action of congress in assuring federal aid for highways throughout the country during the next two years. The appropriation of $50,000,000 by congress for the fiscal year has been included in the deficiency bill recently reported.

Road building during 1923 will be carried on to a greater extent than ever next year.

SHOWS INCREASE.

On July 1, 1922, the motor vehicle registration was 10,620,471. This is an increase of 157,176 over 1921.

Builders Predict Fight for Better Highway Methods

AMERICA'S foremost captains of the good roads movement are heading toward Chicago. They will assemble here in legion during the annual national good roads congress and road show to be staged Jan. 15 to 19 at the Congress hotel and the Coliseum.

Chief among the noted authorities to attend the convention will be Bainbridge Colby, formerly secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet; Claude N. Sapp, formerly assistant attorney general of South Carolina, now a member of the South Carolina legislature, and W. H. Malone, chairman of the Illinois board of taxation. Other celebrities will be present to wield their cudgels in behalf of better highways.

A total of 193 firms have taken space for the coming show. Last year the number of exhibitors was 178, while in 1920 it was 144 and the year previous 117. Hence the 1923 assemblage is going to be a record breaker.

The show will be noteworthy for its number of exceptional exhibits shown by the United States bureau of public roads, the Asphalt association, Portland Cement association, National Association of Paving Brick Contractors, and the Associated Pennsylvania Highway Contractors.

A large number of new road building machines and devices will be exhibited for the first time, and engineers and contractors will be enabled to post themselves in the short period of the exposition to a greater extent than could be done in months in any other way.

Representatives of the United States bureau of public roads and officials from all the leading state highway departments are slated to appear at the congress to make known the results of their research campaigns. Highway finance, administration, construction, and maintenance, as well as that important question, state aid, will come up for a full and complete discussion.

Big Wheel Merger.

The Haynes Wheel company of Jackson took over the Imperial Wheel company of Flint on Jan. 2. The Imperial stockholders were allowed par or $100 on their holdings, taking in exchange Haynes at 38½. The Imperial Wheel company makes wheels for Buick, Cadillac, and other companies, and was organized by W. C. Durant about twenty years ago. It is believed the combination will result in the largest wheel company in the world.

INTERESTING FACTS

105,799 Ford Cars and Trucks Retailed in December

Approximately same number scheduled for delivery this month

What Does This Mean?

This volume of deliveries to actual owners is entirely unprecedented for this time of the year—

It has taxed the manufacturing ability of the Ford plants working at full capacity—

It indicates a volume of business during the rapidly approaching months of "heavy demand" which will be far beyond the maximum production schedule which the Ford Motor Company has set—

And that means a Ford shortage even more acute than the one which existed last Spring and Summer.

Dealers' stocks all over the country are low—there are no reserves to draw upon to meet the demands for delivery—

There is no way in which dealer reserves can be built up, as deliveries have been made to customers as fast as Cars could be manufactured since last April.

The only way you can protect your desire to obtain prompt delivery of a Ford even at this time is to place your order immediately.

This emphasizes more strongly than anything we could possibly say the necessity of your making prompt arrangements with a Ford Dealer for the listing of your order, particularly if you are contemplating the purchase of a Ford Car or Truck for use this Spring or Summer.

We believe you are entitled to know these facts as they actually exist.

FARM AND GARDEN

Illinois Beemen Ask Larger Fund to Fight Disease

By Frank Ridgway.

ALARMED at the destructive work of American and European bee diseases that threaten to wipe out an industry that concerns 60,000 farmers and commercial apiarists in Illinois, beekeepers are appealing to the state legislature for an increased appropriation of $12,000 instead of $3,000 a year for inspection work.

DR. A. C. BAXTER.

In making the request Dr. A. C. Baxter of Springfield, president of the Illinois State Beekeepers' association, is strongly supported by county organizations all over the state. The Cook county Beekeepers' association, headed by Samuel Cushman, with more than 100 members in and around Chicago, is one of the strongest supporters.

Diseases Spread Rapidly.

Lack of funds has seriously handicapped the inspection work of the 200,000 or more colonies in Illinois and the disease continue to spread rapidly.

MAURICE G. DADANT.

"The report of our state inspector for the last year shows that only 9,067 colonies of bees were inspected and that of these over 14 per cent were diseased," says M. G. Dadant, secretary of the state association. "Think of it! Fourteen per cent of the colonies of bees which were inspected are not productive and need to be destroyed, and of those not inspected at least an equal percentage is diseased and remains as a menace to the honey crop. Our losses, therefore, through diseases, at the minimum is $140,000—bees, dying or destroyed—and $100,000 in diminished amount of honey produced, besides indirect losses of pollinization and curtailment of the industry."

Honey Crop Drops.

Mr. Cushman cites specific cases of the damage being done to bees in Cook county because of insufficient state funds to inspect apiaries. "I know of 450 colonies owned by a man in Oak Park," he says. "They were scattered over the country during the harvest. His crop of honey two summers ago must have been not less than twenty-five tons, and probably was fifty tons. Because he has had to fight diseases continually, he offered to sell 100 colonies at $15 each, and it will be difficult to sell them at one-third that price because brood diseases are in that territory.

SAMUEL CUSHMAN.

"I know of a dozen or more sideline beekeepers within the city limits of Chicago who take care of from 50 to 125 colonies, producing in good seasons from $1,200 to $1,800 worth of honey, but often men like these are hit by diseases and are put out of business. They need protection by having an inspector paid by the state to help fight these diseases."

Calls It Beeman's Paradise.

The beekeeper with 400 or 500 colonies may be able to fight the American brood disease that is so destructive in Illinois, and it may benefit him to allow the small operators to be put out of business, Mr. Cushman thinks. He adds that the honey producing industry now bringing into the state approximately $1,000,000 a year is in danger, and adequate inspection will ward it off.

"Since the general introduction of clover, all that prevents Illinois from becoming a great honey section is the lack of inspection to control disease. I have never lived where bees pay as well as they do here, if they are kept free from disease. This is a beekeeper's paradise, but it needs protection," says Mr. Cushman, who has kept bees in various parts of the country.

In inspection work Illinois is away behind neighboring states. Frank N. Wallace, state entomologist, Indianapolis, Ind., says he used about $8,000 in 1921, but last year the appropriation was increased and he used about $13,000. During the last four years careful inspection has reduced Indiana beekeepers' losses from 25 to 2 per cent and the honey crop has increased a million pounds, close to $1,000,000 for the four years.

B. F. Kindig, Lansing, Mich., says his state appropriates $10,700 a year for inspection work.

Plenty of Nectar.

Because of the enormous acreage of white clover, golden rod, Spanish needle, and other nectar producing plants, Illinois provides an ideal place for bees. At one time it ranked second in honey production in the United States; today it has fifth place in the number of colonies and seventh in honey production. According to Mr. Dadant's figures millions of pounds of its potential honey crop are ungathered, and thousands of pounds are shipped in from other states.

Diseases have been brought here through the exchange of materials and from buying and selling colonies.

The disease could be eradicated by proper control measures, experts say. The cure lies in the prompt destruction of all combs of infected hives. The infected material is burned and completely destroyed.

Law, but No Money.

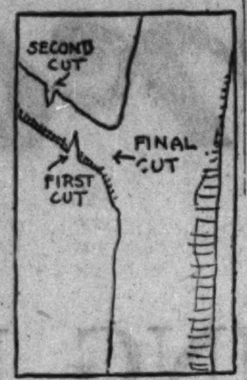
In most states laws are provided for a state officer, known as inspector of apiaries, who directs the control of the disease. Illinois has such a law, but has been so handicapped by lack of funds that the inspector could not organize his department to do the necessary work.

Since beekeeper organizations are being formed all over the state, control measures will be much more easily put into operation. Mr. Cushman suggests that provisions be made to have every beekeeper register at the county seat to aid in locating the apiaries for inspection work.

The Cook county association will call a massmeeting in Chicago of all apiarists in the state to discuss ways of controlling disease and to get cooperative support in urging the legislature to increase the appropriation for inspection. The meeting probably will be held Jan. 22, but the exact date will be announced later.

GARDEN NOTES

It's pruning time in the orchard. This is the time of year to rejuvenate old fruit trees. Sawing off big branches twice is a trick old orchardists resort to as a means of avoiding ugly scars. There are usually some good sized limbs to cut out in trimming old trees that have not been pruned for several years. Make the first cut on the underside of the branch at least six inches from the trunk, sawing half way through, and then make the second cut on top about four inches from the first, as shown in the accompanying diagram. The short stub left can be sawed off close to the trunk, leaving a wound that will heal readily without the usual large scar.



When C. C. Burns, farm adviser of Jo Daviess county, Illinois, went out to check up on the results of the potato crop in his county he found that Bordeaux mixture had worked wonders in the farmers' potato patches last season. Where the vines were sprayed with a 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture the yield had been greatly increased. Sprayed potato patches yielded 198 bushels to the acre and the unsprayed only 166. Spraying controlled the leaf hopper and increased the yield 32 bushels per acre. At 60 cents a bushel the increase amounted to $19.20, leaving a net profit of $12 an acre after the cost for spraying, which was $7.50 an acre, had been deducted

Tax Valuation Called Unfair for Indemnity

OPPOSITION to the proposed plan to use assessors' reports in appraising cattle that react to the tuberculin test was registered within twenty-four hours after the publication of the details.

Typical of these protests is that of the Stephenson County Holstein association, because cattle are assessed as a herd and the average taken for taxation purposes, while indemnities should be paid on the actual value of each animal.

Assessors' Figures Vary.

C. M. Long, field man for the Illinois Holstein Friesian association, says in his report that members know assessments are not uniform throughout the state.

"Assessments bear little relation to market values," he adds. "The one does not change; the other rises and falls. The association knows of a certain establishment in Freeport which is assessed at $10,000, and a single machine in this plant is worth more than that. An assessors' valuation is not the basis of settlement when land is condemned for roads or railroad purposes; members think cattle condemned for public benefit should be treated as other property taken for the public good."

Thinks Herd Average Unfair.

Protests are expected from the Illinois Agricultural association and the Illinois Holstein Friesian association. George A. Fox, executive secretary of the state agricultural association and president of the state Holstein association, believes the new plan, if put into effect, would seriously handicap eradication work. He thinks indemnities should be reduced, but not by using assessors' reports.

"Tax assessors do not figure on individual animals," says Mr. Fox. "They give herd estimates, and since members of a herd vary so widely this is of no assistance in indemnity work.

"Again, for taxation purposes it is, and always has been, the practice to appraise live stock and all other tangible property at less than true value. The percentage differs in townships and counties—there is a woeful lack of uniformity. This situation can be remedied only by a general tax reform."

Farmers' Week Offers Many Practical Aids

Farmers' week at the University of Illinois, to be held at Urbana, Jan. 22 to 26, gives farmers of this state a chance to keep step with the developments in the scientific and practical lines of agriculture. Intensive class work will be given to farmers during this short course in animal husbandry, dairy husbandry, horticulture, farm mechanics, farm management, crops, and soils. Information, now being boiled down, will be presented in practical language, so the busy farmer can apply it to his own every day problems.

All of this information is offered free. Farmers will also have a chance to hear agricultural authorities from different parts of the country discuss vitally important farm questions.

"The Farmer and the Nation" will be the topic of Dr. L. H. Bailey, formerly dean of the college of agriculture, Cornell university. Among other speakers are: C. W. Pugsley, assistant secretary of agriculture; Dean Herbert W. Mumford, and President David Kinley, University of Illinois.

Among the crop questions to be discussed at the third annual utility corn show, held during Farmers' week, will be: "Is There Any Correlation Between Types of Corn Disease Resistance and Yield of Corn in the Field?" "Will Prize Winning Show Corn Outyield the Corn Which Was Not Awarded a Ribbon?" and "Is It Possible for the Farmer to Select Two Types of Corn, One a Higher Yielding Type than the Other, Out of His Own Seed?"

A Nation's Tribute to Buick

There is an inspiring tribute to an industry in the universal recognition annually accorded the National Automobile Shows.

Thousands come to these exhibitions from every section of the continent and from foreign lands as well, and their advent is widely heralded the world over.

In the twenty-third National Automobile Show, just opening in New York, and later in Chicago, the nation is provided with a display of its chief means of personal transportation. This display is so complete and so magnificently set forth that all who come may easily carry away a perfect picture of the latest accomplishments in motor car building.

Year after year the national shows receive the homage of the entire country. Year after year they mark by their own increased magnitude and splendor, the increased growth of the automobile industry.

In occupying first place at both national shows for the fifth consecutive year, Buick continues the position in the industry awarded it by universal public opinion.

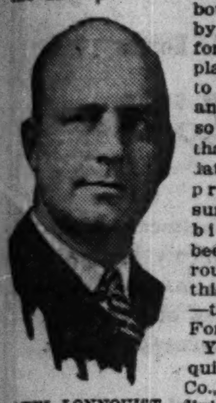
PLAN SUBDIVISION OPPOSITE GATE OF NEW FORD PLANT

Lonnquist, Driver & Co. Buy 85 Acre Tract.

BY AL CHASE.



AXEL LONNQUIST.

With steel being dumped daily on the seventy acre tract in Hegewisch bought recently by Henry Ford for his $6,000,000 plant, ultimately to employ 16,000 and work already so far advanced that the opening date of May 1 is practically assured, the next big step has been taken in the rounding out of this great project—the housing of Ford employés.

Yesterday Lonnquist, Driver & Co., who have subdivided millions of dollars' worth of land around the Ford plants in Detroit, and who are active in the Edgebrook district of Chicago, bought a little more than eighty-five acres at the main entrance of the new Chicago Ford factory and will at once place it on the market as a high class subdivision.

Make Competitors Act.

And high class is used advisedly, for the entry of Henry Ford with his high wages and short hours means two important things in the neighborhood of his plant: First, every employé can afford to live well and to own his own home, and a good home at that, not a shack housing ten or twelve people, common around some big industrial plants.

The second result of Mr. Ford's entry has always resulted in higher wages and lower hours in adjoining factories and resultant better working and living conditions. Some even predict that Mr. Gary will find time to do away with the twelve hour day at his not far away steel mills when Mr. Ford arrives in the neighborhood.

Predicts New Era for Chicago.

Mr. Lonnquist, just back from Europe, and a close student of economics in both this country and abroad, comments on the Ford entry into Chicago as follows:

"Henry Ford's new purchase and construction of a plant on the Calumet river as well as the development of Calumet harbor by the city of Chicago, thereby insuring numerous other industries and activities at that point, is the beginning of a new era in Chicago's growth. This man, without the question of a doubt, is the world's greatest manufacturer. It makes no difference whether you agree with him or not, he's a genius of manufacture and finance, and he does pay his men the necessary high wages to enable them to live as Americans should live and to own their own homes.

"His entering Chicago will have more effect on industrial conditions than all the arguments and influences that could otherwise be involved or brought to bear on this intricate subject, involving as it does the twelve hour day and other things."

Overlooks Carondelet Park.

Mr. Lonnquist undoubtedly has purchased the choicest property available in the neighborhood. The office building of the Ford plant and the main entrance will be at the southeast corner of Torrence avenue and 130th street. The new subdivision, to be called the Lonnquist, Driver & Co. Ford City subdivision, is directly opposite this. Half of it is bounded on the east by Carondelet park. Mr. Lonnquist already has offered to dedicate sufficient land to widen 130th street to a 100 foot business street.

"There'll be no thirty foot lots," adds Mr. Lonnquist. "The smallest residential lot that we sell is a forty foot lot. That gives a man breathing space and enables him to have a yard of some size and even a driveway for his Ford car."

To Have Interurban Station.

The interurban line skirts the southwestern boundary of a large part of the subdivision and a station already is announced for 131st street extended. Mr. Lonnquist says work will start at once putting in improvements. The ground is high and dry—unusual in some parts of the Calumet district—and trees will be planted throughout the subdivision.

Here's an interesting bit of information which we ran across. Some of the lots originally sold in the Lonnquist, Driver & Co. subdivision near Ford plants in Detroit, for from $225 to $650 are selling today at from $2,000 to $25,000.

Bought from Calumet Trust.

The property just bought was purchased from the Calumet Trust through Hodge, Chandler & Nicolson, who also negotiated the recent sale of the Ford plant's seventy acres. John F. Wallace & Co. represented Mr. Lonnquist in his purchase.

The site is bounded on the north by 126th, on the west by the Ford plant and the Nickel Plate and interurban railroads, on the south by 132d, and on the east by Exchange and Muskegon avenues.

It is understood that Lonnquist, Driver & Co.'s Ford City subdivision is only a starter for them in the district. Several other big subdivisions are being negotiated now and will be announced later.

News of the Architects

The partnership between Architects Robert L. Kane and Monroe R. Sandel has been dissolved. Mr. Sandel is now associated with Architect Arthur Foster, room 608, at 56 East Randolph street. Their phone is Central 2702. Mr. Kane will continue at his present address in the Garrick Theater building.

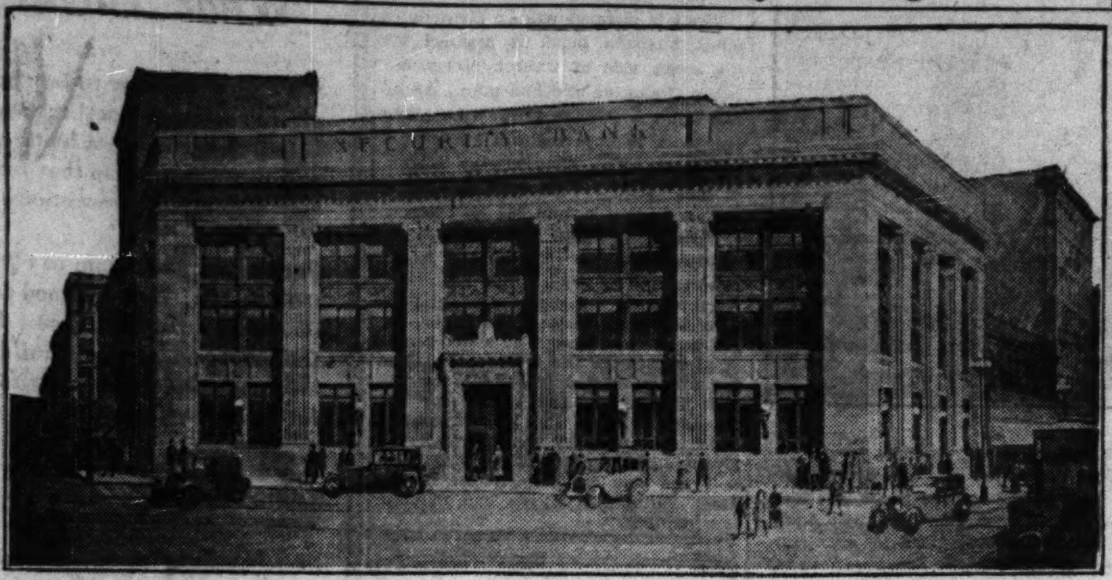
New Home of Security Bank of Chicago



The Security Bank of Chicago, now at Milwaukee avenue and Carpenter street, will commence the erection next April of one of the handsomest banking homes in the city at the intersection of Milwaukee avenue, Chicago avenue, and the new Ogden avenue extension. The new building, designed by Architects Childs & Smith, will front 112 feet on Ogden, eighty-five feet on Milwaukee, and sixty-two feet on Chicago avenue. It will be three stories and will provide for all the bank's needs in the basement and first floor. The second and third floors will be rented for offices which will overlook the spacious plaza in front of the new building.

The bank was organized in 1906 by J. C. Hansen, formerly of the First National bank, and J. B. Forgan, chairman of the board of directors of the First National bank, who is also chairman of the board of the Security bank. Mr. Hansen, president of the Security bank, was active in getting the Ogden avenue extension put through. The new building will be completed by March 1, 1924.

ARCHITECT URGES CLEANING OF ALL STONE BUILDINGS

Architect Jacob Lewis writes the real estate editor the following letter of suggestion, which explains itself:

"At a period when so many of our newest and finest buildings, both public and otherwise, are being faced with Bedford stone, it is, I think, not amiss to discuss the advisability of cleaning such types of buildings.

"Owners of large office buildings faced with terra cotta do not consider it other than a wise investment to wash down terra cotta at least once a year, and in the outlying sections the owners of apartment buildings and residences do not consider it other than wisdom to have the stone façades cleaned by sand blast or other means.

"Yet, strange to say, our finest buildings are allowed to become so blackened with smoke that even the cleverest person can not say just what the material is, whether granite, Bedford stone, or marble. Millions are spent in keeping the interiors of buildings clean, but not a red cent for the exteriors.

"The Chicago public library recently celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of its founding. I wonder if it occurred to any of the library board to attempt to get an appropriation for the cleaning of that building in honor of the event. The architect of the present building won his commission in competition with other world famous architects. It is a beautiful building architecturally, but an eyesore to Michigan avenue with its coal blackened façade. Our splendidly designed city hall and county building have become equally as black, and the same can be said for other public and semi-public buildings.

"No doubt in a few years our newest, highest, and finest office buildings, the Chicago Temple and the Tribune Tower, will likewise follow their stone front predecessors unless a concerted move is made to clean these buildings at regular intervals and keep them clean.

"Who will be the first to start this move towards aiding the perfection of our City Beautiful?"

Will Open Braeside Manor in South Highland Park

George L. Schein of Schein & Beckwith, attorneys, has bought twenty-five acres in the southern end of Highland Park from Charles H. and Mary Worcester for $85,000, or $3,400 an acre, through O. B. Von Linde of Perry Ulrich's office. The property is at the northeast corner of the county line road and the railroad at Braeside station, overlooking the Lake Shore Country club. Mr. Schein intends to open a subdivision called Braeside Manor.

SINCLAIR BUYS SERVICE SITES.

The Sinclair Refining company has bought the following service station sites: Southeast corner Clark and Addison, from J. F. Cornelius, of H. O. Stone & Co., 52x85, $16,500; northwest corner Harper and 56th, 94x75, from David Hawkinson, $27,500; southeast corner Western and Marquette road, 91x125, from Catherine Sheehan, $25,500.

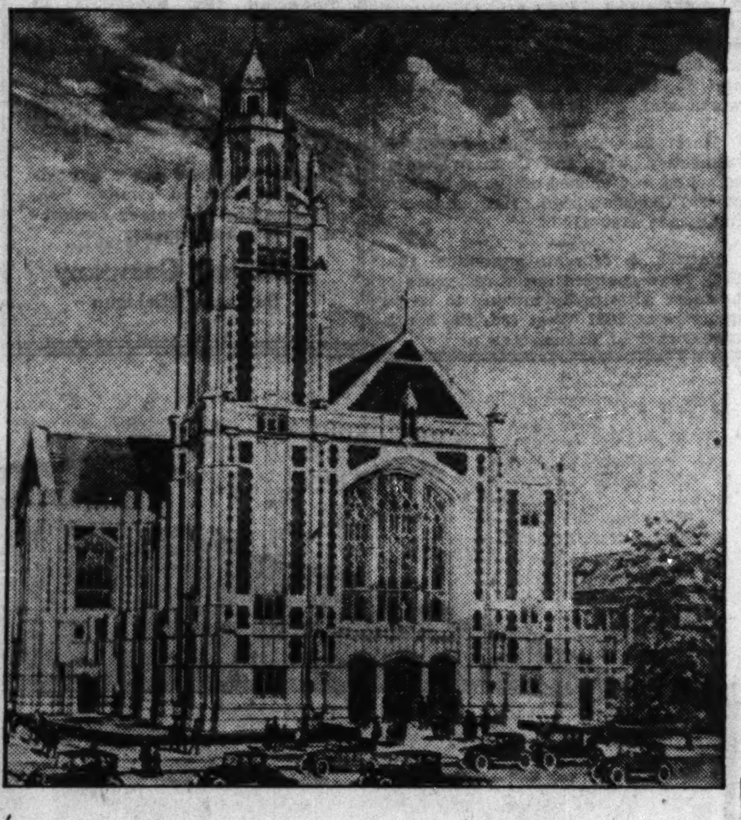
St. Thomas Aquinas Church



K. M. Vitzthum and J. J. Burns of the architectural firm of K. M. Vitzthum & Co. designed the above new church for St. Thomas Aquinas parish, to be erected at Washington boulevard and Lavergne avenue. The Rev. Daniel Luttrell is pastor. It is designed in modified Tudor Gothic, both interior and exterior. It will have a 135 foot tower of unusual design, with a lanternlike crown supported by flying buttresses and which can be illuminated at night. The church will seat 1,200 and will be completed next fall. The foundation and basement already have been built.

To Build Flat on Former Site of Catholic Church

Maurice B. Rissmann has bought the southwest corner of Washington boulevard and Parkside avenue, former site of St. Catherine of Sienna church, from the Catholic bishop of Chicago for $53,500, and will improve the 243x134 site with a ninety apartment building. Rissmann & Hirschfeld are architects. Cremin & O'Connor and F. A. Horrigan were brokers.

Building Permits

Five building permits were issued yesterday for a total valuation of $30,500, among them being the following:

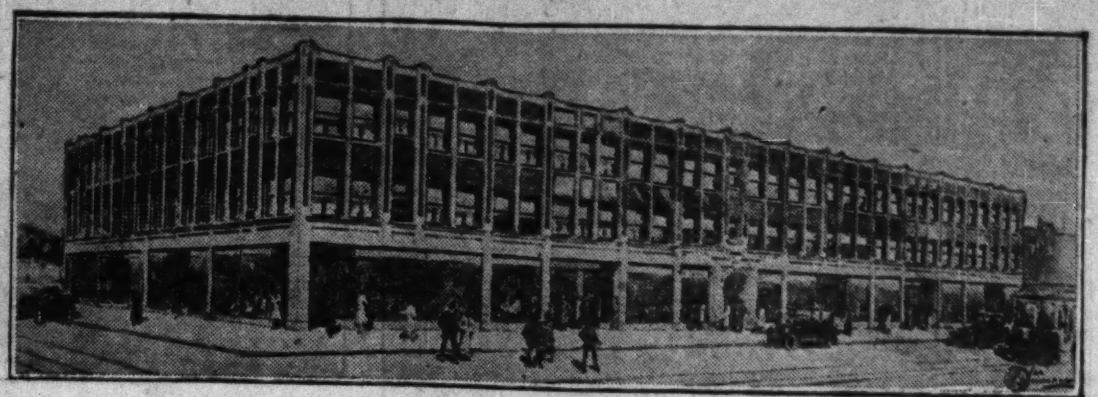
LACKNER, BUTZ
AND COMPANY
CONWAY BUILDING 111 W. WASHINGTON ST. CHICAGO

Improvement at Cottage Grove and 79th



Above is a three story fireproof building to be erected at once by Charles Spangenberg at the northwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 79th street from plans by Architect Z. Erol Smith at a cost of $250,000. It will front 200 feet on the Grove and 125 feet on 79th and is one of the most important improvements on the far south side. It will have fifteen stores, a bank, six offices, and twenty-four flats. O'Conner, Burke & McDonnell will handle the construction of the building and have charge of the leasing.

NO HONKING FOR OPEN DOORS IN THIS GARAGE

There'll be no honking by impatient chauffeurs desiring to enter the new garage at Juneway terrace and Chicago avenue, being erected by Frederick J. Fadner, for an automatic door plate is being installed which noiselessly swings open the doors when the car runs upon it. Mr. Fadner says it's foolproof also.

"The minute the chauffeur drives on to the big plate the doors fly open," he said. "It's especially handy in stormy weather and should save much profanity as well as other noise."

Mr. Fadner has a straight ramp in his garage and a gas filling station which is open, yet protected against bad weather. Then, not to be outdone by any gold coast garage, Mr. Fadner announces a "ladies' vanity room with restful furnishings" and a "chauffeurs' clubroom with showers, lockers, etc."

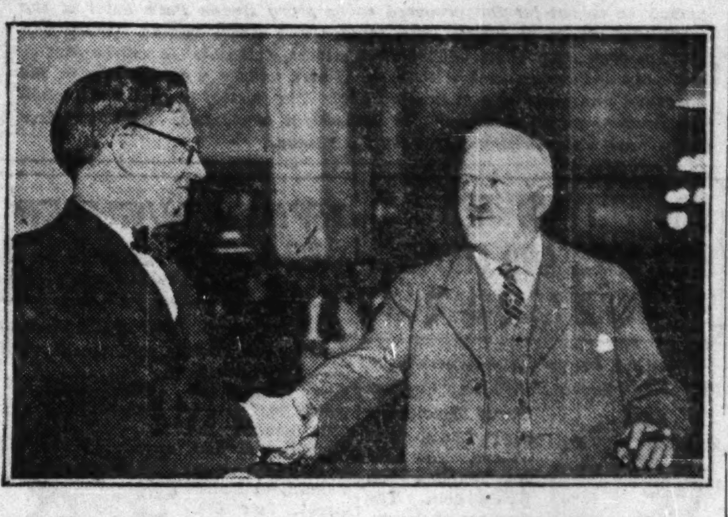
The building is two stories, fireproof, with a Juneway frontage of 106 feet and 154 feet on Chicago avenue. It will care for 225 cars. Mr. Fadner is both builder and owner.

Beg Your Pardon

In reporting the lease of the four story building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Oakdale to Emil Klingbeil, made through W. E. Schofield, hotel broker, the term rental was given as $268,000. This should have been $270,000 and in addition the lessee says he has to furnish heat for eleven stores. W. Scott Armstrong was the architect and not John A. Armstrong, as reported.

In reporting the sale yesterday to John Blaine of forty-five flats negotiated through A. E. Ohlander, the address was incorrectly given as 634-42 Cornelia avenue. This should have been 622-30½. George Frantzen was attorney. Mr. Ohlander represented all parties as broker.

Many More of 'Em, Jimmy



Above you'll see James T. Kilcrane, county map superintendent, or "Jimmy," as he's known to the realty profession, receiving congratulations from County Recorder Joseph F. Haas. Jimmy has just rounded out his thirtieth year in the recorder's office, and his fellow workers showed their love and appreciation of Jimmy and his unfailing courtesy and kindness with flowers and other tokens. Jimmy supplies the press with real estate data, and his nose for news has won him a firm place in the hearts of the real estate editors. He knows a story when he sees one, and many a deal filed in such a way that it appears insignificant has been spotted by Jimmy and tipped off to the papers. He lives at 2614 East 74th street and is an enthusiastic booster for the south shore district. In the above picture he is on the left.

Plans Two Story Factory on Diversey Parkway Site

Carl and Emil Metterhausen have bought the 100x125 at 1304 Diversey parkway from Gustav Moeller for $13,000 and will improve with a two story building for light manufacturing. J. E. Ploner of the Steel Realty Development corporation handled the purchase of the site.

Will Subdivide Block of Vacant in River Forest

Albert H. and William H. Bromann have bought the block of vacant in River Forest bounded by Thomas, Augusta, Monroe, and Jackson, just west of Concordia Teachers' college, from Edward C. Waller for $60,000. F. A. Hill & Co. will subdivide it into lots of 60x188 and larger and may build a few residences.

WAGES MAIN ITEM IN OPERATION OF OFFICE BUILDING

Arthur B. Hall Puts Taxes and Coal Next.

ARTHUR B. HALL.
[Walinger Photo.]

Wages, taxes, and coal, in the order named, are the three main items in the annual expense account of the modern office building, according to Arthur B. Hall of Hall & Ellis, in a lecture on "The Operation and Management of Office Buildings" before the realty class of the Y. M. C. A. school of commerce.

"These three items together comprise 70 to 75 per cent of the total annual expense," stated Mr. Hall. "As compared with pre-war days, coal has increased in price nearly 200 per cent and wages and taxes about 120 per cent. During the same period rents have increased approximately 100 per cent.

Did you ever stop to think how seldom one reads of a fatal elevator accident notwithstanding the millions of miles traveled by the countless of lifts in the loop alone? Probably not. Here's what Mr. Hall had to say:

"It may be interesting to note that elevator travel is probably the safest form of locomotion known. The coroner's records in Chicago for a number of years show but one fatal accident to every 100,000,000 passengers carried in passenger elevators."

And here's some inside information on how your office building elevator should run. "A first class building has a satisfactory elevator schedule if a car leaves the first floor every thirty seconds," states Mr. Hall.

MAY USE CAMERA IN REPRODUCING REALTY RECORDS

Innovation Suggested by County Recorder.

Photography to supplant typewriting in the reproduction of records in the county recorder's office is practically assured as the result of the action of the legislative committee of the county board yesterday in approving a bill drawn by J. Scott Matthews, chief Torrens examiner, for County Recorder Joseph F. Haas, for presentation to the fifty-third general assembly shortly. This is one of the most radical and far reaching innovations yet undertaken in the county building and is expected will cut down expense and time at a tremendous rate and at the same time be a big boon to the general public.

The same bill also paves the way for a "public hall of records" advocated in the recent report of the special committee representing the realty boards, the Torrens Land Title Registration league, and the Chicago Bar association. The bill allows the recorder's office to be located either in the county building "or in a suitable building provided by the county for which he is recorder."

Two Other Bills Approved.

Two other important bills drawn by Mr. Matthews for Mr. Haas were O. K.'d by the legislative committee. One allows the county board to fix the charges for abstracts and copies by resolution from time to time, subject only to certain maximum charges beyond which the board cannot go.

The third bill allows the separation at the filing window of bills of sale of personal property and chattel mortgages from all other documents. A new serial number is provided for bills of sale and chattel mortgages. This will give two windows for receiving documents, and thus cut the time of waiting in half for the public.

One of the bills also is drawn with a view of removing the discrimination against Cook county in the matter of recording fees. The fees are fixed on a basis of pages and fractional pages, in view of possible use of photographic reproductions, but the words on each page are charged for on a basis of 15 cents per 100 words, with a minimum fee of $1.25. The small additional charge on each instrument would mean an increase in fees in the recorders' office of approximately $250,000 to $300,000 annually, it is pointed out.

Many Problems Unsolved.

"There are many problems still to be ironed out," said Mr. Matthews, who has been using photography successfully in his department for several years on a small scale. "But the new system will mean the public can get copies the next day following the filing of the original. The negatives will be kept in the county building, and copies can be made at a moment's notice."

Plans Buildings at Two Cottage Grove Corners

Frank Loeffler has leased the northwest corner of Cottage Grove and 64th from Mrs. Mary A. Bonfield for twenty-five years at $6,000 annually for the first ten years and $6,750 yearly for the balance, with an option to extend the lease twenty-five years more at 6 per cent of the appraised value. Mr. Loeffler intends eventually to erect a four story store and office building on the site of the present one story store. The site is 44½x122. Cremin & O'Connor were the only brokers.

Mr. Loeffler several days ago leased the 104x125 vacant across the street at the northeast corner from Mayor Thompson and his brothers, for ninety-nine years, at $7,500 annually, and will improve with a three or four story building designed by Loewenberg & Loewenberg. J. F. Miller represented the lessors and Joseph H. Donlan of E. G. Krumrine & Co. the lessee.

LITTLE HOPE FOR LOWER BRICK PRICES.

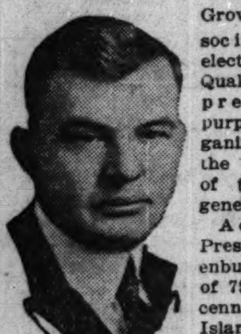
"There is nothing to indicate that there will be abrupt changes in the price of brick during the coming year," states the monthly digest of conditions in the common brick industry. "While it is expected and hoped that the trend of prices during the next five to ten years will be gradually downward, it is not safe at this time to predict that building can be done at any lower cost per cubic foot during 1923 than prevailed during the year just closing."

O. K.'s Buena Park Hotel.

Building Commissioner Charles Bostrom yesterday received an opinion from the corporation counsel's office recommending that a building permit be issued for the proposed seven story Buena Park hotel at the southwest corner of Buena Park terrace and Hazel avenue. Work will start at once from plans by Architect Albert S. Hecht. It will be 55x100, and have 100 rooms, each with bath. There will be a gymnasium in the basement and possibly a swimming pool. The cost of the project, including furnishings and land, will be $470,000, it is claimed. Leight, Holzer & Co. have underwritten a $250,000 bond issue.

PROPERTY OWNERS AT 79TH AND GROVE FORM ASSOCIATION

More than 400 property owners have formed the Seventy-ninth and Cottage Grove District association, and elected Edward Qualkenbush as president. The purpose of the organization is for the improvement of the district in general.



EDWARD QUALKENBUSH.

According to President Qualkenbush the paving of 79th from Vincennes to Stony Island avenue will be completed within thirty days, making 79th a through street from Ashland avenue to the lake.

Two building syndicates have already purchased four square blocks of property in this district and will improve with apartment buildings, says Mr. Qualkenbush.

"I believe that these improvements, together with Chatham Fields subdivision and the rapidly growing surrounding property, will make the 79th-Cottage Grove district one of the greatest on the south side," said Mr. Qualkenbush.

The directors of the new association are: Fred E. Downey, Thomas H. Cochran, Charles Spangenberg, Frank J. Adamson, C. M. Wasson, Frank Jamison, and John W. Gibbons.

A picture of the most important building project in the history of the district is given in another column of this department.

Light Companies Rent in New Englewood Building

Joseph August Martin has had plans drawn by Kocher & Larson for a two story white terra cotta front building at 848-54 West 63d, 104x107, according to Attorney Louis J. Du Rocher, who represented the lessor. The two stores on the first floor will be occupied by the Commonwealth Edison and the Peoples Gaslight and Coke company for ten years, at a rental of $6,000 annually for the first three, $6,300 for the next two, and $7,200 annually for the remaining five. Ward T. Huston & Co. represented the lessees.

MORE BUILDING LOANS.

Arthur Curtis of the Chicago Trust company tells us that the Metropolitan Life yesterday wired authorizing $227,000 in building loans, which makes $800,000 authorized since Dec. 10. Most of the building is in Chicago and suburbs, Gary being especially active.

MADISON-PEORIA CORNER SOLD.

Clarence A. Dammarell and Richard M. Harvey have bought from Allan C. Hurdman and others the 100x125 at the southeast corner of Madison and Peoria, improved with a three story hotel, for $70,000, subject to $40,000, through Kenny Bros. The new owners will operate it as a hotel.

GIVES DAUGHTER $36,000 BANKS STREET HOUSE

B. J. Rosenthal, head of the Chicago Housing association, and president of several big Chicago commercial concerns, yesterday bought the residence of Mrs. Dorothy F. Counselman, 41 Banks street, for $36,000 cash, as a gift to his daughter, Mrs. Louis Rhinehardt. Miss C. M. Reize of the Upper Michigan avenue branch of H. O. Stone & Co. negotiated the sale.

B. J. ROSENTHAL.

Miss Reize also sold the three story store and apartment building, 60x66, at the northeast corner of Division and Wells, for Mrs. E. Fosterling to Dr. John W. Zwack, for $50,000.

MORGAN PARK TO HAVE A $160,000 MOVIE THEATER

Work is well under way on a $160,000 theater, store, and office building at Monterey and Homewood avenues, in Morgan Park, designed by Burett H. Stephens. There'll be a 1,000 seat movie, 75x133, and an office building, 65x75. The theater will have a 25x100 lobby opening on Monterey avenue. Opening date is set for March 1.

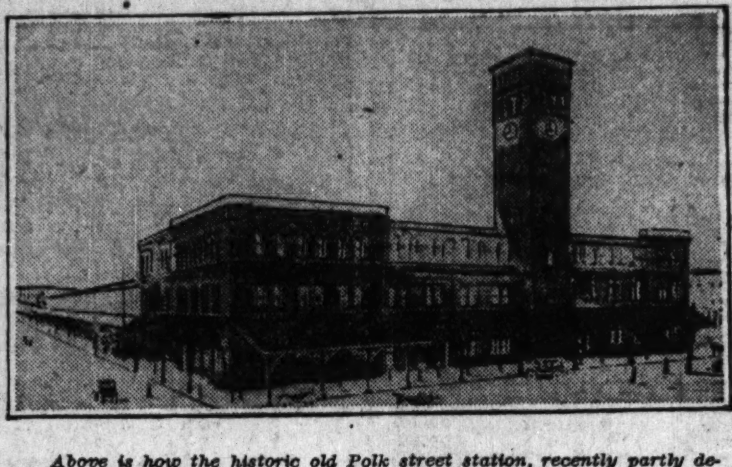
W. E. Macfarlane Purchases Residence in Kenwood

W. E. Macfarlane, manager of THE TRIBUNE'S classified advertising department, has bought the ten room brick and frame residence at 4840 Kimbark avenue, from Laura W. Rockwood, through James J. Parker & Co. He will completely remodel and occupy the modernized residence about April 1.

Annual Review Section of the Economist Now Ready

The annual review section of the Economist, on which Assistant Editor Winters has been laboring for several weeks, is now on sale. It's a valuable number to keep on file if you're interested in realty matters.

How a Rebuilt Landmark Will Look



Above is how the historic old Polk street station, recently partly destroyed by fire, will look when it has been remodeled at a cost of $200,000 by the Chicago and Western Indiana. It'll be noticed the tower has lost most of its attractiveness with the tip gone. The sloping roofs also have given way to flat affairs. The original building was designed by Architect Cyrus L. W. Eidlitz in 1883 and was considered one of the finest stations in the world at the time. E. H. Lee, chief engineer of the C. & W. I. is in charge of the remodeling, which will be completed in two months.

FORTY ACRES IN OAK PARK TO BE SUBDIVIDED SOON

Forty acres at the southwest corner of North and Harvey avenues, in Oak Park, have been sold by Mark F. Madden, trustee, to Frank P. Ross for $200,000, subject to $150,000. The property has a frontage of 1,800 feet on North avenue. Joseph Wassell & Co. will subdivide it next spring for high class residences and will do some building themselves. Dwight P. Green of McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson & Fleming was attorney for the buyer.

Head of Decatur Company Buys Winnetka Residence

O. B. Von Linde of Perry Ulrich's office has sold his residence at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Oak street, Winnetka, to Percy B. Sullivan, president of the Standard Manufacturing company of Decatur, who is moving the offices of his concern to the First National Bank building, Chicago, and his family to Winnetka. The house was sold for $47,500. It was formerly owned by Henry Harfst. The lot is 150x175.

Patrick & Moreau announce that they have rounded out three years of business activity by moving to larger quarters at 2627 West 63d, the southeast corner of Talman avenue.

LARGE BUSINESS BLOCK PLANNED FOR EVANSTON

What is claimed will be Evanston's finest business block is planned for the south side of Church street, between Orrington and Sherman. Architect John A. Nyden is drawing plans and work is expected will start on a two story stone structure by March. It will front 200 feet on Sherman, 185 on Orrington, and 185 on Church.

The Church Street Building corporation, composed of Chicago and Evanston men, has leased the site from Northwestern university, through William A. Dyche, business manager, for 100 years from Jan. 2 at a net rental of $2,400,000 for the entire term. The net annual rental is $18,000 for the first fifty years, and $30,000 for the balance. This is the largest ground lease ever made by the university in Evanston. Robert S. Crane of Quinlan & Tyson was the only broker in the deal. Quinlan & Tyson will manage the building.

Representative

Large manufacturer of lumber products and millwork is looking for a connection with responsible, live wire representation in St. Louis, to cover Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, in the sale of lumber, millwork and mill-cut houses.

Manufacturer will provide architectural and engineering plans for the most complete line of houses. Fine photographs of the houses gotten up in the most pleasing style for distribution to prospects, and will assist in financing the prospects in buying.

The CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The World's Greatest Newspaper?

THROUGHOUT the Chicago Territory folks speak familiarly of "The W. G. N." Staunch friends and bitter enemies have disputed the merits of this great journal for seventy-five years. The Tribune is loved, hated, quoted, denounced, revered, hissed, defended, attacked—but never ignored.

Peculiar interest, therefore, attaches to the new book entitled "The W. G. N.," which contains not only a history of the paper, but 200 pages of minute description of how every Tribune department operates. All phases of reportorial, editorial and advertising work are considered in detail; and also all mechanical processes from cutting of spruce logs to the distribution of Tribunes to subscribers. There are more than one hundred illustrations.

PRESSURE HOLDS IN GRAIN MARKET; PRICES GO LOWER

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain markets continue under pressure, with foreign political conditions preventing aggressive buying on the part of the bulls. May wheat dropped to $1.17⅜, a new low on the present downturn, and 9⅜c under the recent top, and closed 1c lower for the day, with deferred deliveries ¼@⅝c lower. Corn was off ⅜@½c, oats ¼@½c, and rye ⅝c. Lard lost 7½@12½c, while ribs were unchanged.

Scattered liquidation and realizing sales was on a good part of the last week, and while there was a moderate rally from the inside figures the undertone was none too strong at the last. For the week wheat showed net losses of 3⅝@4⅛c, corn 1⅛, oats ⅜@⅞c, and rye 3⅝c. Provisions showed moderate activity, and while easing off toward the last closed with lard 15@20c and ribs 5@7½c higher for the week.

Bearish sentiment predominates in wheat, and, while there was good support around $1.17½ for May on resting orders and from shorts, the bulk of the business throughout the day was of a local character. Deferred deliveries are attracting a little more attention from investors.

Hard Winters Wanted.

While export demand at the seaboard was reported as slow, Kansas City reported inquiries there for around 1,000,000 bu, and May in that market has gained 2c on Chicago recently, partly as the result of a marked falling off in interior offerings. No moisture fell overnight in the dry sections of western Kansas.

May corn sold at a fractional discount under the July for the first time, but recovered the loss later. There was a fair commission house trade, with the selling slightly better than the buying. Local traders generally were on the bear side, despite the reports that outside markets outbid Chicago as much as 4c per bu in parts of Illinois last night. Cash prices were slightly firmer than the close of the previous day. Shipping demand was only fair.

Oats held within a moderate range and in the main reflected the action of corn. Shipping demand continues fairly active.

Less Demand for Rye.

While rye showed fair strength early due to reports of large sales to Germany the previous day, there were little indications of further business and with wheat easy a decline was easily attained. The two northwestern markets had 125 cars.

Despite a sharp advance in hog prices provision values were on the downgrade the greater part of the day and closed heavy. Political conditions in Europe and a rather slow cash demand were the depressing influences. Packing at Chicago for the winter season to date is 1,718,000 hogs, against 1,147,000 last year. Deliveries on January contracts were 250,000 lbs lard. Prices follow:

New records

Many companies whose shares are traded on the New York Curb Exchange established new records in production and earnings for the year 1922.

In some cases the market for these stocks has reflected increased earnings. In other cases it has apparently been overlooked. Increased earnings must eventually be reflected in the market price of the shares.

In the January 6th issue of the Investor & Trader, some of these companies and their records are discussed.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

While there was a keen demand for cash wheat at Kansas City, with exporters inquiring for around 1,000,000 bu for shipment to the gulf, the total business at the seaboard and gulf with Europe was not large. No sales to Germany were made overnight.

Chicago handlers sold 60,000 bu wheat, 90,000 bu corn, and 330,000 bu oats to the domestic trade, with 40,000 bu rye to exporters.

Mills were after cash wheat at Chicago, and paid ½c over May for No. 2 hard and May price for No. 2 yellow hard. No sales of red were reported. Receipts 26 cars. Outside markets irregular, 1c higher to 1c lower.

Offerings of cash corn were not large and the basis somewhat firmer as compared with the close on Friday. No. 2 mixed sold at ½c under and yellow at May price to ¼c over while No. 3 grades were 1@1½c under the future. Receipts 345 cars. Outside markets ½c higher to ½c lower.

Demand for cash oats was fair, with No. 2 white May price to ½c under and No. 3 white ¾@1½c under. Receipts 99 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

The feature of the situation in the grain markets is that there is nothing new on which to induce extensive new buying for a long pull at present as leading operators see it. There has been heavy liquidation of late and a nervous irregular movement of values is to be expected with a downward tendency.

A number of local operators are friendly to the buying side of corn on the same basis as for months past. Outside markets are paying more for cash corn than Chicago, yet the arrivals here are larger than at any other market. The demand is not as sharp as it was at the seaboard and export bids are below a working basis.

St. Louis and southern markets are outbidding Chicago for oats. It was said that St. Louis bid 2½c more than Chicago in the latter's territory in Illinois, which is turning the oats to the south. Arrivals here yesterday were only 99 cars and the week's run of 1,528,000 bu decreased 330,000 bu, yet it was 557,000 bu more than a year ago. The primary arrivals dropped 618,000 bu for the week and exceeded last year's by 2,305,000 bu.

William Simons, who was nominated for a director of the Board of Trade on Friday, declines to be a candidate and his name has been scratched off the ticket.

While a winter wheat crop that has a good start is less liable to winter killing, statistical studies made by the department of agriculture indicate that conditions during the fall months do not bear, in general, any material relation to the yield of wheat the following year. In 1917-'18 a widespread drought prevailed during the fall and the Dec. 1 condition was the lowest on record. In the spring, however, favorable weather prevailed and a good yield was harvested. Winter damage to wheat is usually caused either by heaving, smothering, direct effect of low temperatures and by winter drought, but drought is not as frequent as from the other three causes.

A member of the Board of Trade of Chicago made inquiries of a prominent member of the board living in Minneapolis regarding the record of Frank L. Carey who is a candidate for director here, and received the following reply: "I should like to say that I think if he is elected he will make an excellent member of your board of directors. He served as a director of our exchange for several years, was always interested in matters pertaining to its welfare and willing to give generously of his time. He has good judgment and has had broad experience in the grain business."

Chicago Bank Launches Monthly Dividend Plan

An innovation in paying dividends was adopted by the directors of the Garfield Park State Savings bank at their January meeting, where they declared a 60 cent per share dividend for the month of January. This means a 7 1-5 per cent basis and changes payments from quarter to monthly. The Garfield is, so far as is known, the first and only bank in Chicago to pay dividends monthly.

The new West Madison State bank opened its doors to the public yesterday in its new building at 4011 West Madison street. The bank is capitalized at $200,000 and carries a surplus of $40,000. The president is Thomas J. McManus. Henry A. Newberg is vice president and Walter A. Blumthal cashier. The directors are Max Clamitz, J. W. Sixeas, James J. Barrett, George P. Madigan, Ray F. Mudd, T. J. Prodie, A. Rost Jr., Mark Shanks, and Messrs. McManus, Newberg, and Blumthal.

The Reliance State bank elected a new director, Victor S. Johnson, and two assistant cashiers, Henry J. Kehres and Harry E. Koeber. Walter Gradle and Philip V. Bright retired from the directorate.

The Central Manufacturing District bank reports that its earnings in 1922 set a new high record for that institution. They totaled $262,473, as compared with $212,368 earned in 1921. After providing for all reserves and setting aside $36,000 for taxes, the net profits were $166,483. During the year $150,000 was transferred to the surplus account from undivided profits account, making the surplus $400,000 and leaving the undivided profits $126,664 at the close of the year.

MANUFACTURERS, ATTENTION!!!
Time and Money to Invest

A man of proved sales ability of manufactured products, and of executive experience, wants to devote a portion of his time and invest a nominal sum of money in the sales promotion of a medium sized, substantial and reputable local manufacturing business. Must be a commodity of merit—the need of sales assistance must exceed the need of financial aid. Replies should give comprehensive particulars which shall be treated confidentially.

OPTIMISM RINGS IN REPORTS MADE BY STATE BANKS

General satisfactory improvement in the commercial, agricultural, industrial and financial conditions in the ten groups of the Illinois Banker's association during 1922, are reported by chairmen of the various groups to headquarters of the association here.

The general attitude of mind in the farming community is much more optimistic than it was twelve months ago, the general report indicates, while if prices continue to improve as well during 1923, the corn belt farmer will feel that his affairs have started to progress satisfactorily toward normalcy.

"In wholesale lines, hand-to-mouth buying is not so general and larger commitments point to a growing faith in the future," the report continues. "Retailers report a satisfactory Christmas trade, generally increasing sales of staple merchandise, and a slight tendency to liquidation of frozen credits.

Banks Make Big Gain.

"The banks in the majority of agricultural communities have come through the period of farm deflation in excellent condition. Deposits are increasing and borrowings are greatly decreasing, or have been entirely eliminated.

"Building activities have fluctuated among the groups, but generally have been greater in volume and in the amount of investment than in an average year. Sales of real estate, especially farms and farm lands, have been comparatively inactive, with a sluggish movement.

"A continuation of the prevailing prices for live stock and agricultural products may reasonably be expected, with an advance in wheat at harvest time apparently assured. Wages probably will remain fairly constant, with some advantages in decreased cost of fuel and other operation expenses."

Grow Optimistic in England.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—Although 1922 was, generally speaking, a year of severe trade depression in Great Britain, many signs warranting optimism appeared on the horizon during the closing months, says the American Chamber of Commerce in London in its official summary of business and economic conditions in this country.

The review asserts that exports of British goods were higher by £20,000,000 than in 1921, and that their value is still increasing. It is apparent, the summary says, that the adverse balance sheet has been reduced by more than £100,000,000. Coal exports in 1922 nearly trebled in quantity and nearly doubled in value, while exports of cotton goods showed a remarkable increase.

G. S. Bridge, the Hay Man, Starts on World's Tour

George S. Bridge, chairman of the grain and hay show committee of the Chicago Board of Trade, will leave today for a trip around the world. During the journey he will arrange with a number of foreign countries to enter exhibits this year at the International Grain and Hay show, which is made possible by a $10,000 premium list donated by the Board of Trade.

Mr. Bridge will confer with leading agricultural authorities in Havana, Panama, Honolulu, Japan, China, the Philippines, India, Egypt, Holland, Italy, France, and England. He will return next June.

Stream Not Opposed for Board of Trade Election

John J. Stream of Shaffer & Stream has no opposition as head of the ticket at the annual election of the Chicago Board of Trade, which is to be held on Monday. Joseph Simons of J. Simons & Co. is also to be elected vice president. The fight will be on the directory and on the arbitration committee. For directors there are nine candidates for the five positions, who are: Edwin A. Doern, Edward D. McDougal, Siebel C. Harris, Harry S. Klein of Frank A. Miller, George Walter Beaven, Parker M. Paine, Frank L. Carey, and J. Edward Wynne.

Nominating committee is composed of five former presidents: Hiram M. Sager, C. H. Canby, Edward Andrew, Joseph P. Griffin, and John A. Bunnell.

Committee of appeals: H. C. Schaack, H. B. Godfrey, Roland McHenry, Walter Metcalfe, William B. Page.

Committee of arbitration has five vacancies and eight candidates who are: Harry A. Zweig, George E. Thompson, J. M. Crighton, J. C. McCormick, U. R. Denniston, George E. Booth, C. A. Rohde and Philip J. Reddy.

FINANCIAL NOTES

An initial dividend of $1 a share quarterly was declared on the common stock of the Producers and Refiners corporation, payable March 15 to stock of record March 1. The company's earnings for 1922 were the largest in the history of the company. The directors approved acquisition of 51 per cent of the capital stock of the Fensland Oil corporation. Provision has been made to offer to the minority stockholders 35-100 of one share of Producers and Refiners for each share of Fensland, such offering to be made after the authorization of an increase in capital at a special meeting of Producers and Refiners stockholders at Cheyenne, Wyo., on Jan. 15.

Industrial stocks, particularly the speculative favorites, were the hardest hit in yesterday's reaction. Baldwin, which only recently sold above the 140 mark, closed at 133¼ for a net loss of 2¾ points. Studebaker closed at 114½ for a net loss of 1⅞ points. Losses of two points or more were also recorded by American Can, American Car, Consolidated Gas, Woolworth, United Fruit, Postum Cereal, Dupont, and Delaware and Hudson. Steel and oil shares also showed material recessions. United States Steel fell back to 106¼ for a net loss of ¾; Gulf States Steel dropped 2 points; Crucible, 1¼, and Republic 1⅛. Pan-American A and B, Standard Oil of California, California Petroleum, and Houston all showed losses of 1 to nearly 2 points.

Interests closely identified with the management of the American Telephone and Telegraph company estimated that the earnings of the concern for 1922 would show in the neighborhood of $11 a share earned on an average of $600,000,000 outstanding stock, as compared with $11.10 a share earned on an average of $486,477,500 for 1921. It was also computed that only about 5 per cent of the outstanding stock was in brokers' hands at present. The year ended with 248,000 registered shareholders and an average holding of twenty-six shares.

The production of steel ingots in the United States last year is estimated at 33,500,000 gross tons, according to the estimate of one of the leading papers in the steel trade. The production of finished steel is estimated at 24,600,000 tons. In connection with consumption, it is pointed out that there was a somewhat different demand in 1922 than in previous years. The shipbuilding industry, for instance, took less than 1 per cent of last year's output, agricultural consumption 4 per cent, and exports about 7 per cent. These totals are much less than normally expected. On the other hand, the railroads of the country consumed about 22 per cent of the total, buildings and other construction 15 per cent; automobiles 10 per cent; food containers, 4 per cent; and all other uses, 28 per cent.

All signs in both the business and the industrial world point to higher wages and prices in the near future. The movement toward higher prices started in the early part of last year and this was followed by demands for higher wages on the part of labor. Wages advanced only moderately at first, but when the striking coal miners returned to work in the late summer at the peak wages of the after-war boom, demands for increased wages arose in all industries and advances of as much as 20 per cent were granted in many industries. Since then the movement of prices, as shown by the various commodity index numbers, has gone still higher. Where price advances are announced the cause given is higher wages and where higher wages are demanded the cause given is the increase in the cost of living.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Jan. 3, by 257 banks in thirty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,247,327,000, an increase of 28.9 per cent compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 200 banks in twenty-four clearing houses amounted to $1,220,321,000, an increase of 28.4 per cent, compared with the corresponding week of last year.

Lyman N. Hine, president of the American Cotton Oil company, confirmed reports that eight of the company's units in the south would be closed and the divisional headquarters in Atlanta transferred to Memphis, Tenn. Some of the mills already have been shut down, he said, and others would be as soon as possible. The action is attributed to the small supply of cotton seed.

The Ohio Fuel Oil company has declared a dividend of 50c a share, payable Jan. 20 to stock of record Jan. 15. This is the first dividend on the stock since December, 1918, when 50c a share was paid. The Standard Oil Company of California announced a reduction of 50c a barrel in the offered price for 35 degree gravity crude oil at the well. The new price is $1.45. Reductions in the offered prices of fourteen lower gravity crude oils also were announced.

There were 445 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by Bradstreet, compared with 386 in the preceding week, and 509 during the corresponding week last year.

The number of stockholders of the General Motors corporation during the last quarter of 1922 was 65,665, a decrease of about 6,600 compared with the previous quarter.

Construction of a trunk pipe line between Teapot Dome area of the Salt Creek oil fields in Wyoming has been started by the Sinclair Pipe Line company to connect with its eastern terminal at Freeman, Mo.

The Berkshire Cotton Manufacturing company has increased its capital from $2,500,000 to $5,000,000 and declared a stock dividend of 100 per cent to stock of record Dec. 27.

DRY GOODS AND GARMENT NEWS

[Copyright: 1923: Fairchild News Service.]

NEW YORK—The dress and waistmakers' union officially announces a referendum vote of the membership favors abolition of piece work in favor of weekly wages. The matter will be urged upon manufacturers at the earliest possible moment.

PARIS—Dates of additional Paris openings just announced include: Lina Mouton and Henrietta Boudreaux, Jan. 15; Marie-Alys, Jan. 25; Charlotte, Feb. 1; Phillippe et Gaston, Feb. 1 to 5; Lucien Lelong, Feb. 2; Worth, opening advanced to Feb. 6; and Beer and Doucet, Feb. 7.

LONDON—The Yakutsk parcel of furs, for which a New York firm made an unsuccessful bid, is now en route here, according to a soviet house, through which these furs will be sold.

NEW YORK—In spring stout wear showings, most of which have already been made, panels, long, loose sleeves and hip length waistline are maintained everywhere. Styles adaptable to stout women's dress being limited, manufacturers have based an appeal rather on details than on style.

Elgin Motor Car.

On Oct. 12, 1922, a receiver was appointed for the Elgin Motor Car corporation, after an involuntary bankruptcy petition had been filed by three creditors, alleging that the corporation's liabilities were over $1,000,000. Since that time a committee has been formed, which, under the name of "stockholders' protective committee," has been sending out letters to stockholders urging them to contribute $2.50 "or more" for each share held. One of these letters, under the head of "Warning," warns stockholders that failure to send in this contribution will probably result in a total loss of their investment in Elgin stock and in their being "frozen out."

The deposit slip which stockholders are asked to sign and send in with their contribution authorizes the committee "if possible to effect a settlement with creditors of the company and restore the business to the stockholders, or to purchase the property at receiver's sale for the benefit of the stockholders contributing to said protective fund," or to use the funds so contributed "in carrying out any other plan of reorganization or refinancing which may be decided upon by the committee as being for the best interests of the stockholders." In signing this slip the stockholder further confirms and approves (in advance) any action this committee may take in his behalf.

C. S. Rieman, president and general manager of Elgin Motor Car corporation, organized and promoted the company. While Mr. Rieman is not officially on the protective committee, he has written to stockholders a lengthy letter saying that he fully approves the recommendations of the committee and urges them to follow its advice and send in the $2.50 as requested. He says that the receivership is not a part of a plan to "freeze out" the small stockholders. "Nothing could be further from my thoughts." He goes on to tell how in the beginning he organized the Elgin company for the benefit of the small stockholders, so that they might have the same opportunity to secure the same high rates of return as are paid to the owners of big money making corporations. "You bought stock in the Elgin company," he says, "because you believed the idea was sound and would work out in practice. And the plan did work out in a way that proved I was right and that your judgment was sound."

This sounds very well, but we fail to see where the stockholders have profited. The company was incorporated in May, 1915. The capital stock was increased from $1,000,000 to $3,500,000 in June, 1916, and to $5,500,000 in April, 1920. A stock dividend of 10 per cent was voted in June, 1916, and a cash dividend of 5 per cent was paid in June, 1920. That is the only return the stockholder has received on his investment. The stock is $10 par value. It has been selling on the open market below par for years, and has steadily declined, so that it could be bought around $2 a share for months before the receivership. The balance sheet as of May 31, 1921 (the latest we have seen), showed tangible assets of $2,776,927, against which was outstanding $3,341,192 of capital stock. Net tangible assets were $2,031,415, or slightly less than 68 cents for each share of stock outstanding.

We have looked on the Elgin company for years as a rank promotion. It is evident that if the factory and assets are purchased by this committee with the stockholders' contributions the same management will again be in control and there is no reason to believe that it will be any more successful under that management in the future than it was in the past.

OFFICIAL DENIAL IS GIVEN RUMOR OF BIG MERGERS

Irresponsible rumors of two large industrial mergers were officialy denied yesterday. An ancient rumor to the effect that the Standard Oil company of Indiana had arranged to take over the Gulf Oil corporation through an exchange of shares was revived and printed with much detail as an accomplished fact yesterday morning.

"There has been no merger of the Gulf Oil corporation and the Standard Oil company of Indiana, nor is there one in prospect," George S. Davison, president of the Gulf Oil corporation, said at the general offices in Pittsburgh. "We have heard these stories from time to time, but there is no truth in them. I can say that the officers and directors know nothing whatever about a proposed merger."

On the preceding day the report was published with considerable detail that a merger of the Union Carbide and Carbon corporation with the Electric Storage Battery company was imminent, it beign stated the former company practically had completed arrangements to take over the latter concern. This unfounded rumor was officially denied yesterday by Vice President Williams of the Electric Storage Battery company. George M. Reynolds, Chicago financier and a director of the Union Carbide corporation, also said he knew nothing of any such merger.

7% Gold Bonds

Before Investing —Investigate!

It is an accepted fact that investments in well-selected real estate bonds are sound. However, it is to your distinct advantage to choose only the best for your own investment.

Have you investigated the distinctive features of Beak Plan Bonds? These first mortgage real estate gold bonds are secured by absolute first mortgages on well-located, attractive business and apartment properties in Chicago which are completed and occupied.

The fact that these properties are completed and occupied establishes a definite and dependable basis for computing value and income, and Beak Plan Bonds are therefore the safest of first mortgage investments.

Investors generally are familiar with these bonds. If you have neglected to inquire about them, call on us and we will give you a detailed description of our plan and of some of the attractive issues we are now offering. You will be under no obligation in consulting us.

The January investment period is here and delay in investing means loss of interest.

H.O. STONE 1835 FOUNDATION LAID IN 1835

H.O. STONE 1923 1835

88 years ago!

ON THURSDAY NEXT—January 11th—it will be eighty-eight years since H. O. Stone set foot in Chicago—then a mere outpost of civilization.

Merchants returning from the East, where they had bought stocks for their stores and to trade with the Indians, filled the stage on which he rode into the frontier town. The style in which they dressed—the way they threw their money around—convinced Mr. Stone that Chicago held the opportunities for which he was so eagerly seeking.

In eight days he made his first investment in Chicago real estate, then entered a claim on timber land. With the proceeds of the sale of these properties he went into business for himself, thus laying, in 1835, the foundation of H. O. Stone & Co.

BEHIND our First Mortgage Serial Gold Bonds, now yielding 6½ and 7 per cent, is therefore an experience running back to the very beginning of Chicago. Profit by it. Send for our January booklet of these bonds—all secured by finely located, income-earning Chicago buildings. We shall enter your name for a copy of "The Story of the House of Stone"—now on the press—our New Year booklet de luxe that will thrill you with a new and appreciative idea of the early days of Chicago. If interested in saving and safe investment you will find this booklet a real inspiration. Get a first copy—first edition.

EUROPE'S CRISIS DROPS PALL ON STOCK MARKET

The New York Times.

New York, Jan. 6.—[Special.]—An irregularly distributed downward reaction on the stock exchange and a decline in French government bonds made up today the home market's particular week-end comment on the European situation.

Wall street continued, however, to pay special attention to the foreign exchange market, where Thursday's decline was renewed in sterling, francs, lire, and the German mark. French exchange lost all of the previous day's recovery, touching the lowest price of the week, and the mark nearly reached the low record figure, the 1⅛ one hundredths of a cent of Nov. 8. The curious cross-currents in the market were shown by the fact that at Paris securities prices were firm and sterling moved sharply in favor of Paris.

German Inflation Continues.

The weakness of the German mark would have had sufficient explanation in the reparations deadlock, but it must have been helped by publication of the reichsbank's statement for the last week of 1922. The paper currency was increased in that week by 143,185,000,000 marks; a figure which, as recently as last May, represented the total of such currency outstanding.

Somewhat to the surprise of people who have watched the German currency movement, however, this was not a "record." The preceding week's expansion had been 166,700,000,000. It is not apparent why there should have been this slower pace of output when the bank's discounts increased 212,892,000,000 marks in the week of Dec. 30, as against only 142,829,000,000 in the week of Dec. 23. But one can only make guesses when dealing with such a situation.

Bond Market Holds Firm.

Except for a few of the foreign bonds, mostly French and Belgian, the bond market was again firm. The new United States 4¼ per cents went to par again and the fourth Liberty 4¼s reached the highest price since the downward reaction of last autumn.

One statement of passing interest, illustrating the large demands on credit for the year-end settlements, was a decrease of $61,956,000 in the surplus reserve account of the New York clearing house banks, creating a deficiency of $37,012,000. This was wholly due to $67,227,000 reduction in reserve credits at the federal bank, following an increase of $99,000,000 during the four preceding weeks. This showing means only a temporary miscalculation of immediate requirements, and the deficit will be cancelled in a week or two.

·CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS·

Saturday, Jan. 6, 1923.

Day's sales, shares..........25,300 Total, 1923..........235,780
Year ago..........16,000 Previous year..........181,350

Chicago stocks were reactionary in the week-end trading yesterday and the bulk of trading was confined to several issues. Stewart-Warner led in activity and declined a major fraction, while Union Carbide lost a small fraction. Yellow Manufacturing ran counter to the general trend, advancing 9 points to a new high price.

Every Investor Can Still Get 7% With Safety

UNUSUAL conditions provide a limited number of exceptionally high grade and entirely safe bonds—yielding 7%—for those investors who take quick advantage of this opportunity.

Interest rates are rapidly declining. Already the average rate earned by safe bonds is close to 6%.

There is still an opportunity for investors to secure Forman bonds having the same degree of safety and drawing 7% interest. We offer a limited number of such securities.

Full Protection—High Yield

Each Forman Bond is a first lien on improved Chicago Real Estate—the newest and finest apartment buildings and apartment hotels—situated in the most desirable residential sections of the city. In every case the property has a quick market value greatly in excess of the amount of the bond-issue. The net incomes from the properties range from two-and-a-half to five times the annual interest. The bonds range in maturities from two to fifteen years.

Every Forman Bond Has Passed This Test

Naturally, all of these bonds are safeguarded by the same methods of painstaking investigation and conservative valuations that have made Forman Bonds so attractive to thousands of conservative investors in all parts of the country; the same careful selection that has made it possible for us to achieve the unsurpassed record of 37 years without loss to a customer.

Maturities Suitable for Every Investors Needs

If you have money to invest now, allow us to give you particulars of these attractive Forman Bonds. Or if you have bonds maturing at an early date let us exchange them now for Forman Bonds while you still are able to obtain 7%.

Cattle and hog prices advanced the opening week of the new year, while sheep and lambs worked slightly lower. Week's average price of good beef steers gained $1.90 over a year ago, with hogs $1.20 above first week of 1922. Fat lamb average stands $2.40 above a year ago at $13.90.

Saturday's hog trade was highest of the week, the general average gaining 15c over Friday at $8.55, with top light for the day at $9.00 standing 20c above previous session and highest since October. Shippers absorbed two-thirds of the day's receipts, being the principal strengthening factor. The week's shipments totaled 66,700, largest in a year.

Week's receipts of hogs at 227,200 were second largest in a year. The estimated average weight of the arrivals at 235 lbs compared with 234 lbs previous week, 226 lbs a year ago, and 219 lbs for the ten year average of corresponding week since 1912.

Week's Lamb Trade Lower.

Bulk of the week's business in the lamb department reflected 15@25c decline, as compared with previous week, with average price off 20c at $13.90, while top dropped 25c at $15.35. However, the sharpest discount was experienced during the fore part of the week, with values after mid-week regaining most of the decline. Closing lamb prices ruled weak to 15c lower than last week's close, with sheep and yearlings steady and feeding lambs strong to a shade higher. Week's top yearlings, $13.25; wethers, $9.75, and ewes, $8.75, the latter standing highest since May, 1922. Feeding lambs brought $14.60.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 25,000 cattle, 66,000 hogs, and 23,000 sheep, against 12,669 cattle, 46,501 hogs, and 11,275 sheep a week ago, and 27,272 cattle, 68,009 hogs, and 20,081 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 70,000 cattle, 250,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep, against 60,089 cattle, 250,025 hogs, and 109,657 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 55,000 to 66,000. William Garrett marked 55,000; H. H. Moore and J. M. Waters, 58,000; Edward Morris, 60,000; F. W. Waddell, 62,000; W. H. Overman, 62,000; E. S. Waterbury and E. R. Gentry, 63,000; F. R. Burrows, 65,000; and George Chandler, 66,000.

RAILROAD NOTES

Class 1 railroads of the United States earned during the month of November, a net operating income of $78,860,000, according to reports filed with the interstate commerce commission. This compares with a net operating income of $66,884,000 during the corresponding month last year and represents an annual return rate of 4.46 per cent on the tentative value of property invested in transportation. For the eleven months ended Nov. 30, 1922, total earnings of class 1 railroads amounted to $693,134,700, compared with $565,974,000 for the corresponding period last year. On this basis the carriers earned 4.02 per cent on the value of their investment in property.

The Northern Pacific railroad asked the interstate commerce commission today for authority to issue and sell $14,756,000 in 5 per cent refunding and improvement mortgage bonds. During the last eighteen months the application explained, the railroad has paid off approximately $15,000,000 of indebtedness maturing against its subsidiary corporations, and now desires to sell the projected security issues to reimburse its treasury for these expenditures.

Approval was sought by the Illinois Terminal Railroad company, a new organization, for its plan to acquire the properties of the Illinois Terminal company. The application said that the terminal properties were worth $4,000,000 and served the Alton-Wood River industrial district in Madison county, Illinois. The new company proposes to issue $3,700,000 in stock with which it will purchase the holdings of the old one.

Traffic managers of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis report a continued heavy movement of coal, general merchandise shipments have been heavy, shipments of packing house products from the Chicago packers have been large, and there has been a good movement of grain for the time of year. Officials of southern roads find similar conditions to those in the north. There is an increasing movement of perishable stuff from the south to northern markets. Coal tonnage is large, and the movement of manufactured goods of all kinds is increasing. Grain shipments to the gulf are fair.

Cars loaded with revenue freight on American railroads for the week ended Dec. 23 totaled 834,591, an increase over the corresponding week last year and 186,185 over the corresponding week in 1920.

Fashions Beauty Contests

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

BEADS ARE EVERYWHERE.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special Correspondence.)—We stayed away from the popular dance places for two weeks, and when we went back again we exclaimed: "O, la, la!" which is what the French always say under stress—and we were certainly excited. All of the styles and customs seemed to have changed. Two weeks is more than the life of an ordinary dance hall style.

Everybody was wearing her beads, not round her neck, but round her arm! Great loads of them and in different colors—in other words, every bead you had in the house that wasn't serving on a dress was doing active military service on a bracelet. And those who presumably did not have beads of military age fortified their wrists with a bandana handkerchief, tied round as if to relieve a sprain. We had seen this before, but the custom of wearing your necklace round the wrist had shown only sporadically before.

It would almost seem from the displays of the evening that pearls were no longer the only ornaments worn in the way of jewelry. Beads were in all of the wry colors that have been predominating elsewhere, and on the self-same wrist one found them in bright red, purple, and green. Wooden beads seem to take precedence over those in other materials.

The dress shown in the accompanying illustration has drapery drawn up on one hip. The material is crepe done by Rodier in bull fight colors, of a scarlet foundation printed in a wild pattern of green and yellow. A dress like that is the rage of the moment among those that get themselves up to represent the younger set in Paris.

The next offering is in the silhouette I like so much for most of us American women. It is by Poiret—doesn't it look like him? The back is of green velvet embroidered in silver, thus giving an effect of great lightness, both in color and texture, and the front is of black velvet, carrying the same East Indian effect in embroidery traced in silver. The mantle is edged with thick fur.

Nobody knows better than Poiret how to get the contrast between that thing silhouette and shaggy fur standing out from it. There was an enormous upheaval at his place the other day when the head vendeuse who had been there for dear knows how long—nineteen years or something like that—took a fancy to leave, bearing with her the cutter, the fitter, and a few other important members of the staff. This minor change took place right while M. Poiret was in the thick of executing a large order, such as putting on some important show. Confidants of the young woman have mentioned that she had been planning for quite some time to leave, and of all those interested only M. Poiret was in ignorance of the fact.

The dress following carries one of the most fashionable neck shapes for a demi-toilette. It is a line that has always been popular in nightgowns. Perhaps you have crocheted the lace for them in that yoke form that fits low on the shoulders. Perhaps you have noticed that several dresses in illustrations have been made in this way of late.

Another feature of the present offering is that little pelerine in the back. Isn't it curious how they have caught on? One sees them on coats and now on dresses in all sorts of featherly materials to waft out and catch on things. This one is in chantilly lace. Sometimes, as we have noted, the sleeves melt into such a cape effect across the back. But the smarter, newest idea is to have it quite separate, as in this showing and if the dress is for late afternoon or evening, it is more fashionable to have it entirely without sleeves.

Again the beads! One finds them alike as garnishment and jewelry—to match shoe buckles, to match the stocking, to match the little dog one carries under the arm. The favorite is wood and the favorite place for placing them is low round a woman's belt line, so that they hit her in the back at exactly the longitude where the sits down. The net result of this fancy is that two wearings are about as much as a costume will stand before all of the beads have to be replaced.

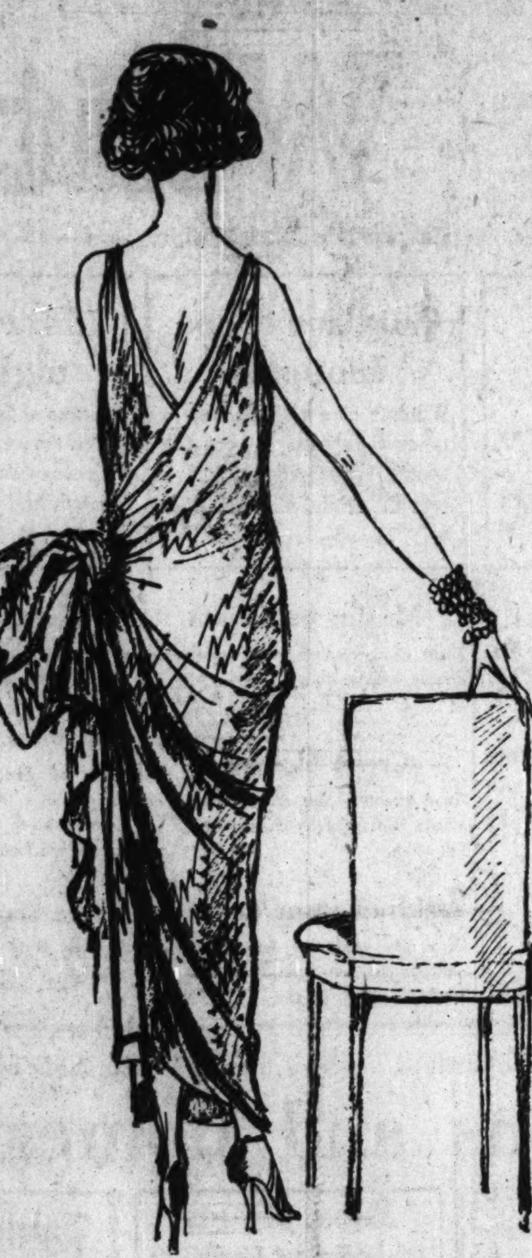
The dress shown herewith carries all of the beading intact, and it makes a charming appearance. It is a tailleur of black kasha, and is embroidered across the wide, standing collar, the bell shaped cuffs, and the tight belt in large white wooden beads. Note the stern, trim simplicity of the narrow untrimmed skirt. The dress is typical of the well dressed French woman whom one sees every morning walking in the Bois and every afternoon on the Champs Elysees.

From under the coat one sees peeping a simple little white crepe de chine blouse with the monogram cut out at the apex of the long V neck line. What could be simpler—what could be in better taste? Your clothes should always look as if they cost less than they really do, as if they had been made with far less strain and trouble than they have really demanded.

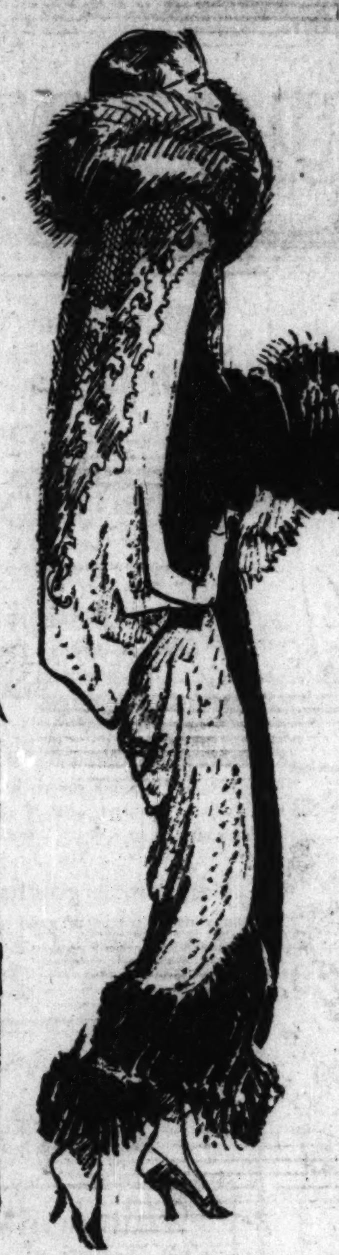
The hat accompanying this toilette is by Rebroux, and replaces the one she made for quite some time in suede. Now it is in soft felt and, although this particular one is in black with a black bow as garnishment, I have seen some in the loveliest of light colors—beige, pale gray, and even white. And they are becoming to us Americans against our clear skins.

This suit and the third dress would costume you, one being suitable for all purposes up to 6 in the evening, and the other carrying you out and beyond, as far into the infinity of night as you care to venture. There isn't any occasion that it is not sufficient for; there isn't any evening so quiet but that its conservative presence would fit unobtrusively in. Its black velvet foundation is fashionable in every season, and its concession to the present lies in its pelerine, its neck line, and ruffle round the bottom of chiffon.

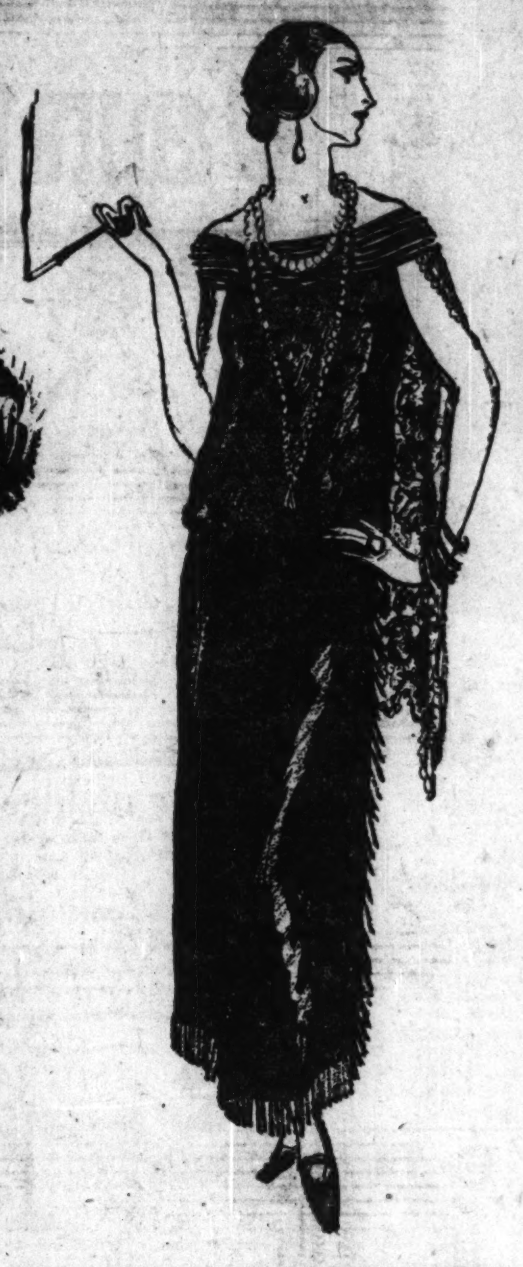
As a final word regarding this matter of beading, I should enjoy all those I had on hand and buy no fresh stock.



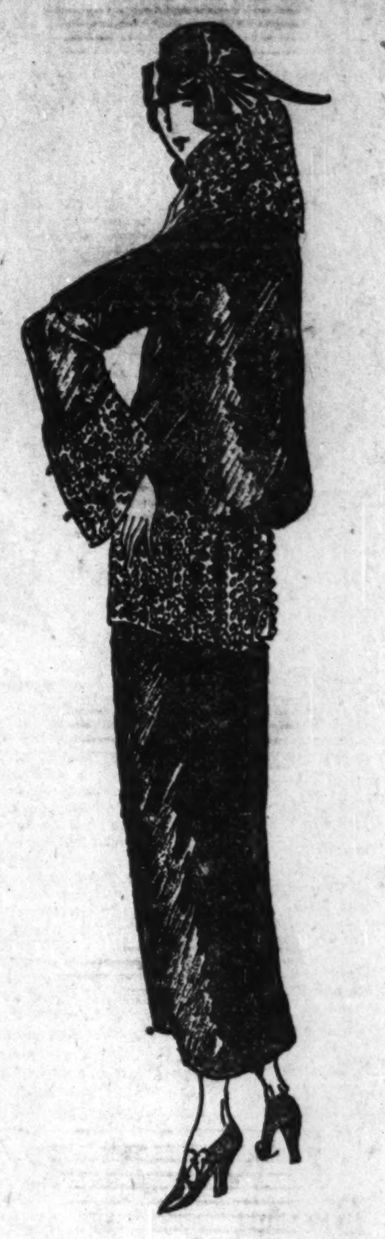
Presenting the last word in dance frocks.



This silhouette seems planned for the American.



Carrying fashionable neck line for a demi-toilet.



White wooden beads distinguish black kashs tailleur.

MISSES' SECTION—THIRD FLOOR

YOUR BIRTHSTONE and WHY

by DORIS BLAKE

THERE is a fanciful belief that each month of the year is under the influence of a precious stone or gem. Do you know the gem that rules your destiny, according to this folklore? The following verses will enlighten you:

JANUARY.

By her who in this month is born,
No gem save garnets should be worn;
They will insure her constancy,
True friendship, and fidelity.

FEBRUARY.

They February born will find
Sincerity and peace of mind,
Freedom from passion and from care,
If they the amethyst will wear.

MARCH.

Who on this world of our their eyes
In March first open, shall be wise,
In days of peril, firm and brave,
And wear a bloodstone to their grave.

APRIL.

She who from April dates her years,
Diamonds should wear, lest bitter tears
For vain repentance flow; this stone
Emblem of innocence is known.

MAY.

Who first beholds the light of day,
On spring's flowery month in May,
And wears an emerald all her life,
Shall be a loved and happy wife.

JUNE.

Who comes with summer to this earth,
And owes to June her day of birth,
With ring of agate on her hand
Can health, wealth, and long life command.

JULY.

The glowing ruby should adorn
Those who in warm July are born;
Then will they be exempt and free
From love's doubts and anxiety.

AUGUST.

Wear a sardonyx, or for thee
No conjugal felicity;
The August born without this stone,
'Tis said must live unloved and lone.

SEPTEMBER.

A maiden born when autumn leaves
Are rustling in September's breeze,
A sapphire on her brow should bind—
'Twill cure diseases of the mind.

OCTOBER.

October's child is born for woe,
And life's vicissitudes must know;
Buy lay an opal on her breast,
And hope will lull these woes to rest.

NOVEMBER.

Who first comes to this world below
With drear November's fog and snow
Should prize the topaz's amber hue—
Emblem of friends and lovers true.

DECEMBER.

If cold December gave you birth—
The month of snow and ice and mirth—
Place on on your hand a turquoise blue,
Success will bless whate'er you do.

From the significance as expressed in the above couplet has grown that delightful custom of exchanging gifts, into which is woven the good luck accompanying the birthstone.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

A NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION.

AS a concluding touch of the New Year spirit, will you join us in the following resolution:

"During 1923, without trouble and without expense to myself, I will turn failure to success for one or more unfortunate individuals or families."

How can this be done without expense, you ask?

The answer is, "With your castoffs." Every family in comfortable circumstances discards furniture and clothing before the articles are worthless utterly. Children in every family, whatever its circumstances, outgrow their clothes—except shoes—before all wear is gone. I believe that if every family, when it says to itself, "This article is no longer useful to us," would then ask, "'Would it be useful to some one else?" thousands of tragedies among the poor and unfortunate could be averted.

New Year's is a time of backward looking and forward looking. This department can look back upon literally hundreds of cases where families have been built up, where children, headed for soul grinding poverty, now are blossoming into useful, loyal citizens, where lives have been saved, even, and suicides averted, by timely help through gifts of "castoffs." It would like to look forward to the time when this practice became general among our people, when every one conserved and used this tremendous power for good instead of throwing it away. In particular, it would like to look forward to a year in which you will have taken this simple and easy step for the common good. May it count on you?

SALLY JOY BROWN.

Here are examples of what castoffs can do:

Cart for Baby.

"I have a cart which my baby has outgrown, as she walks most all the time now. I'd like to pass it on to some mother who hasn't one. If you give my address to any one, have her write me first, so I will be here when she calls. I am sending a big bundle of clothes to the mother whose address you sent me. Best wishes.

"MRS. C. W."

Thank you, Mrs. C. W., for your good wishes and your previous kindness. Some mother will be grateful for the cart you so kindly offer.

Small Girls, Attention!

"My little girl has outgrown her tricycle and I'd like to send it to some child who cannot afford one.

"MRS. D. B."

Won't some little girl be made happy by this gift? Make early application for the donor's address, if you wish to be the lucky one.

Husband Among the Missing.

"Has any of your readers a sewing machine which she would be willing to give to a mother who is unable to buy one? Her husband has not been heard from for two years. She has four small children and the machine would be valuable to her in making clothes and mending old ones.

"M. G. H."

The mother of four children who has to struggle for her existence and theirs these days without the help of her husband carries a heavy burden. Which of us can help to lessen this one?

Unable to Work.

"We didn't have any Christmas, and my two little ones were much disappointed. I have two boys, 2 and 3½. You helped me before my baby came, and I'll never be able to repay you. I am unable to work, as I am being treated for tuberculosis. My husband deserted me two years ago, and since then I have had a hard time getting along. Only for you, Miss Brown, I don't know what I would have done. I need clothing—size 36—and some for my boys. I wish you a happy New Year.

MRS. F."

We wish you a happy New Year, too, and the best of luck. We print your letter, confident that our correspondents will help you soon.

Unprepared for Baby.

"I am soon to become a mother and am wondering if some reader has baby clothes she no longer needs which I may have. My husband has not been working steadily, and I cannot buy things needed.

MRS. G. T."

I sincerely hope, Mrs. G. T., that you will be furnished with the tiny clothes you need. Perhaps some mother whose baby has outgrown infant clothing will send to me for your address.

Pieces to Give.

"We have a box of odds and ends in chintzes and cretonnes, some of good length, for some one of your column who is interested.

C. V. K."

Thank you so much. Requests for this sort of thing reach us frequently.

Santa Passed Them By.

"Having heard of the wonderful work you do, I write to ask if you can help my little nieces, whom Santa Claus forgot, so far as toys went. The little girls, 1½ and 4½, are still expecting him. My sister, who lives with me, was deserted a year ago and through much sickness has had a desperate time. Possibly some little girl would be willing to give these tots her old toys. They also need shoes and clothes. The mother wears size 42. Any help you can render will be more than appreciated.

H. H."

Who wants to play Santa Claus, even though a little late? These tots are still expecting him; let's not disappoint them.

Offers Boys' Books.

"I have about twenty boys' books which I want to give away. Any young boy who wants them may call for them, or I'll take them to him.

"H. M. J."

Good news for some boy, isn't it?

Clothes Will Help.

"I am badly in need of a suit of clothes so that I may seek employment. I have been taking the cure for tuberculosis for the last four years and consequently am not well stocked in clothing. I have just recovered from one of the many flareups of the disease that I often have. I need some shirts, size 15½. I would be able to get employment if I had the things mentioned. Suit size is: Coat, 37 or 38; trousers, 30; waist length, 32 inches.

"E. W."

From One Who Is 84.

"Can you find some one who can give me a strong cane and a pair of old specs? I am 84 and have rheumatism and am at the poor farm. I would appreciate your help and can send for anything offered.

J. H."

When one is 84, one has met disappointment, but we trust J. H. doesn't ask our help in vain.

Magazines Are Offered.

"I subscribe for a number of women's magazines. When finished with them it seems wicked to throw them out. I know you must have some one on your list who would enjoy them.

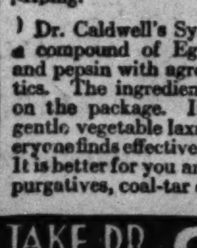
"MRS. A. S. M."

We print your offer with much pleasure. Reading matter never awaits applicants long. Thank you.

Syrup Pepsin Loved By Hosts of Babies

Half a teaspoonful will make a fretful youngster happy and playful

THE mother has her choice of many remedies for her baby's minor ills, but she should be careful which remedy she selects lest she do the child harm. What might be safe for herself may do injury to an infant. You will find that if the little one cries and doesn't want to play that its bowels are constipated. First look carefully to the diet and give the child one-half teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You will then see results in a few hours. You will not have to force it on babies or children: they actually ask for it, it is so pleasant-tasting and free from griping.



Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. The ingredients are stated on the package. It is a mild, gentle vegetable laxative that everyone finds effective and pleasant. It is better for you and yours than purgatives, coal-tar drugs, or salt waters and powders, which may concentrate the blood and dry up the skin; or mercurial calomel, which may salivate and loosen the teeth.

Use a safe laxative like Syrup Pepsin, and especially for the children, for invalids, growing girls, nursing mothers, elderly people, and persons recently operated upon who need bowel action with the least strain. Mrs. Lillian Brenington of Woodruff, S. C., always gives her children Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and Mrs. A. E. Blondin of Muskegon, Mich., will not have any other laxative in her home. Your druggist will supply you, and it only costs a cent a dose. Try it in constipation, colic, biliousness, flatulency, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

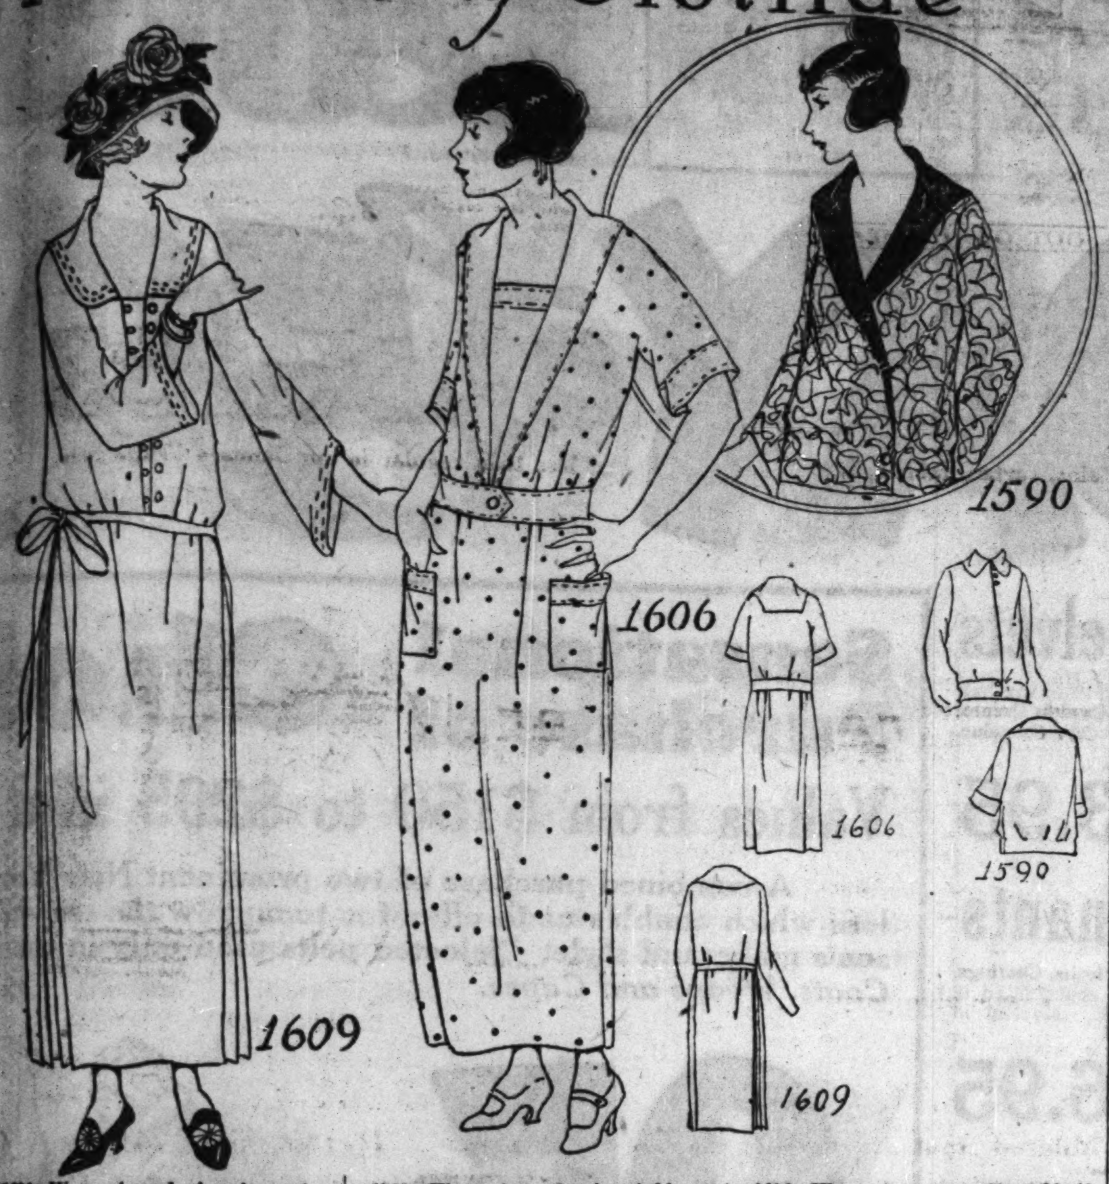
Patterns by Clotilde



1609—Woman's and misses' one piece dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 40 inch material.

1590—Woman's and misses' blouse. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2 yards of 40 inch material.

1606—Woman's apron. Sizes 36, 40, 44, and 48 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅛ yards of 36 inch material, with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

How to Use the Patterns

SOME one of the new dress woolens, if not too heavy, would make up beautifully by pattern No. 1609, which lends itself equally well to satin, taffeta, or crepe. The question of material in a design of this kind naturally depends largely on whether the dress is intended especially for street wear under a coat or for more dressy wear.

The pattern is cut in two pieces—front and back—and, of course, there are sleeves, collar, vest, and sash.

At the sides the skirt is cut straight out, as well as slashed in for a short way, and this straight part is laid in plaits and brought back so that the line of the skirt is unbroken. It is becoming and graceful, and if the plaits are perfectly laid and as perfectly pressed, the straight silhouette so much in evidence at present will not be disturbed.

The sleeves may be long and close fitting—a dart up the outside from wrist to elbow being perforated on the pattern; or they may have the fashionable flare.

Brown is one of the favorite colors this season, and, if becoming, would make a good choice of color for this dress. The vest could be one of the tan shades, the sleeves faced with tan and the collar of tan, embroidered in brown, and with small brown buttons each side of the vest.

If the sash is made of the dress material, it would be effective and unusual made in the following manner: Cut strips 1⅛ inches wide. Cut the lining from the tan, in strips 1⅜ inches wide. Lay the right side of the lining on the right side of the material—baste along one of the long edges and stitch on the machine—stitching as close to the edge as possible, so it will ravel out later. Then turn the lining to the wrong side, letting it show on the side just stitched like an eighth inch binding. Baste down near the edge on the wrong side, so as to hold well in place. Now cut a half inch wide length of the lining and baste and stitch to the other side of the sash, exactly as the first. Turn this to the wrong side and baste down. Then press the sash carefully, and after that turn in the edge of the lining so it just covers the stitching on the wrong side of the narrow strip, and blind hem in place.

Pattern No. 1590 is for one of those popular blouses that have been seen so much lately. They are generally made of Paisley printed crepe, blistered fabric, or matelesse. They are worn with skirts of a solid color—in satin or silk—and these skirts are often plaited. The blouse is made so it may be left open or buttoned to the neck. It laps by in the closing, so that the closing at the waist line comes at the left side of the front.

The lower edge is gathered and joined to fitted bands, and the sleeves may be full length and set into bands or left flaring or cut short and finished with cuffs. The blouse is not difficult to make, and will be a welcome addition to many a wardrobe.

Pattern No. 1606 is for one of those slip-on aprons or house dresses, and is cut with a front and back, and short kimono sleeves seamed on the shoulders. There is a vest made separately and tacked to the right side of the front, fastening under the collar on the left side.

The large collar is cut with a seam in the middle of the back, and as may be seen from the picture, extends to the waist line in the front, where it is met by the straight belt that is intended to be buttoned in the front. Patch pockets complete this attractive design.

If you care to put the work on the dress, it can be made quite pretty by setting the sleeve seams on top of the arm together with a piping of a contrasting color. This piping may also be used at the edge of the collar, bottom of pocket facings, upper edge of sleeve facings or cuffs, top of the vest, and both edges of the belt.

Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Go West, Young Man.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man, 22, and in love with a girl two years my junior. Though we are not engaged and cannot be, the opportunity has come for me to go west and make something of myself. She objects strenuously to it. As I love this girl dearly, I am puzzled. PUZZLED."

I'd go west, young man, if your future success depends upon it. The girl will become resigned and respect you more for taking a firm stand, which eventually will recur to her greater fortune. The mails are prompt and you may go on with your courtship until you are in a position to ask her to marry you. But opportunity is something not to be trifled with, you know.

He Needs Burden.

"Dear Miss Blake: Several months ago I was married to a young man a few years my senior. He married me under false pretenses, in regard to finances. I found out a few weeks later he had nothing.

"I love him dearly, and have forgiven him his lies and I have given him a chance to prove good.

"Am I right in offering to support myself, to give him a better chance to make good? ANXIOUS."

If you want to make a real man out of him, burden him with the responsibility and don't try to relieve him by supporting yourself. Your real test of him is to let him do the supporting, and you help at home as economically as you can. There's something about the male critter which requires that he be made responsible in order to bring out the good in him. Maybe that's why they call him the stronger one.

When Merle was asked where she got her pretty brown eyes, she quickly answered, "I got them at the born place." F. L. B.

Alice was writing a letter to Santa Claus.

Suddenly she looked up and said, "Mother, Santa Claus must be an awfully smart man 'cause he can read my letters when I can't even read them myself." L. S.

Esther is devoted to her baby sister. She is a fiery little miss, and I delight in teasing her.

I remarked that the baby was awfully slow to talk.

"She talks baby words now, but after a while she'll say big girl words," said Esther. R. C.

Donald and Ruth's mamma was to entertain a cousin whom she loved dearly.

Knowing she could depend upon the children's word if she were successful in exacting a promise from them as to their good behavior while her cousin visited at her home, she said: "Now, children, will you promise me you'll behave well while Sylvia is here?"

Pausing a few minutes before replying, Donald looked earnestly at mother, then asked: "Well, how long is she going to stay?" M. E. W.

Ellsworth came in from the back yard, where he had evidently been in a scrap. His hair stood on end, his clothes were torn, and his face was a sight.

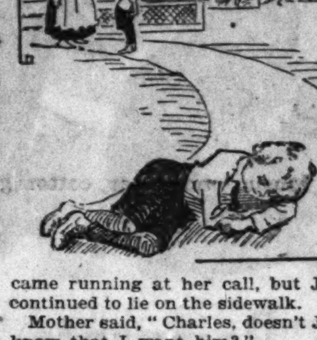
Mother said: "Why, I can't believe this is my child. Can it really be?"

"Course it's me," answered Ellsworth. "Can't you tell by my shape and voice?" J. R.

Helene was puzzled over the proper manner in which to express congratulations to her aunt on her marriage.

She sought her mother and asked: "Mamma, what shall I say to Aunt Clara and Uncle Charles—that I wish them many more happy marriages?" A. R.

Daddy had been to Kansas City and explained at length the trip, most of which had been made in a sleeper. Charles and Junior were much impressed and when a few mornings later mother went to find them, Charles came running at her call, but Junior continued to lie on the sidewalk.



Mother said, "Charles, doesn't Junior know that I want him?"

Charles answered, "Yes, mother, he knows, but he can't come, because we are playing going to Kansas City, and Junior is the sleeper." H. W. S.

At the first snowfall Molly rushed in from school with: "O, mother, I want a sled for Christmas, 'cause it's going to be a sled winter." M. G. G.

Margaret had been trained not to cry.

One day she fell and hurt herself badly. She fought bravely to keep the tears back, but finally sobbed out, "The—crying wants—to come." M. R.

Bessie was having dolly dressed, and when it came to the hat, the little maid called for feathers, refusing to be satisfied with flowers.

"But they don't wear feathers now, my dear," said mamma.

"I can't help that, mamma; the thinks inside of me isn't like the thinks inside of other folks." J. C. K.

Bobby's older brother had obtained a job raking a neighbor's yard.

Bobby watched for awhile, and thinking brother might divide his earnings with him if he helped, he said: "Don't you want me to help you, Jim? Two men can do it juicker'n one." C. P.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

MOTHER LOVE AND INTUITION.

My college chum received this letter on her eighteenth birthday. Romantic and at the height of an infatuation, she had decided to forego college and elope. I had argued in vain. Imagine my surprise and delight to be awakened the following morning by Madeline. She gave no reason—just said she had changed her plans. Yesterday, after four years of college, she gave me this letter, which she had received on the night she planned to run away:

DEAREST LITTLE DAUGHTER: Tonight I am alone, thinking, as I do every year at this time, of this hour eighteen years ago. Then faintly, as from a far land, I heard your father say, "A tiny girl."

Since then life has been full and sweet, each day more so because of you. You were such a wee sweetheart, and you are so little and dear now. I never seem able to tell you what is in my heart. Your dainty self puts me less at ease than if you were different. If I say things you little dreamed of my saying, remember they are said with your devoted mother's love.

Dearest, you are so much a part of me, I have always been able to know your thoughts. I know tonight my daughter is planning as the finale to her dinner dance an elopement with her sweetheart. To stop you would break your heart and kill that fresh sense of romance which I love to see in your lovely eyes. I cannot advise. For eighteen years, dear, we have loved, cherished, and guided you. Now you must go according to your own decision. But our love is with you, and will always understand. I do not say we shall be heartbroken if you do this and give up college. So long as we see you happy, we can never be sorrowful. Those you love we will love. Whatever you do, you are ours, now and forever, to love and cherish.

With this letter I am sending the Chinese lacquer box you have always admired. It is yours. I believe it will be your Aladdin's lamp, for in it are my treasures of your eighteen years: the joy letters at your birth, your tiny baby dress, your baby record book, a discarded doll's dress—all reminders of those years of happiness in having you. As the years pass you may find understanding from these mementoes to help you over difficult places.

Our love to our eldest daughter; understanding to the tiny pink bud of eighteen years ago. MOTHER.

Here's a Real Beauty Maker

Pimples, Blotches, Blackheads, Boils, Muddiness and Redness Disappear When You Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

If your ambition is to have the loveliest of complexions, here is a real beauty secret: Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers. It is no secret, however, to thousands of pretty girls all over the U. S. who have relied upon these wonder wafers to keep their complexion perfectly beautiful instead of wasting time with cosmetics. These wafers go directly after those embarrassing pimples, blackheads and other such blemishes. It is not a roundabout way. You get results every minute. You are sure of it in a few hours. They clear the blood, they drive from the system the impurities that cause pimples. The calcium goes to the skin, acts as a tonic, stimulates the tiny nerves, pores, and blood vessels to renewed activity, and lo! before you realize it, the skin is peachy, firm, clear and the picture of a sweet, rosy complexion. Get a 60 cent box today of Stuart's Calcium Wafers in any drug store and you will have a real beauty maker to clear your skin of pimples, redness, roughness and such destroyers of beauty.

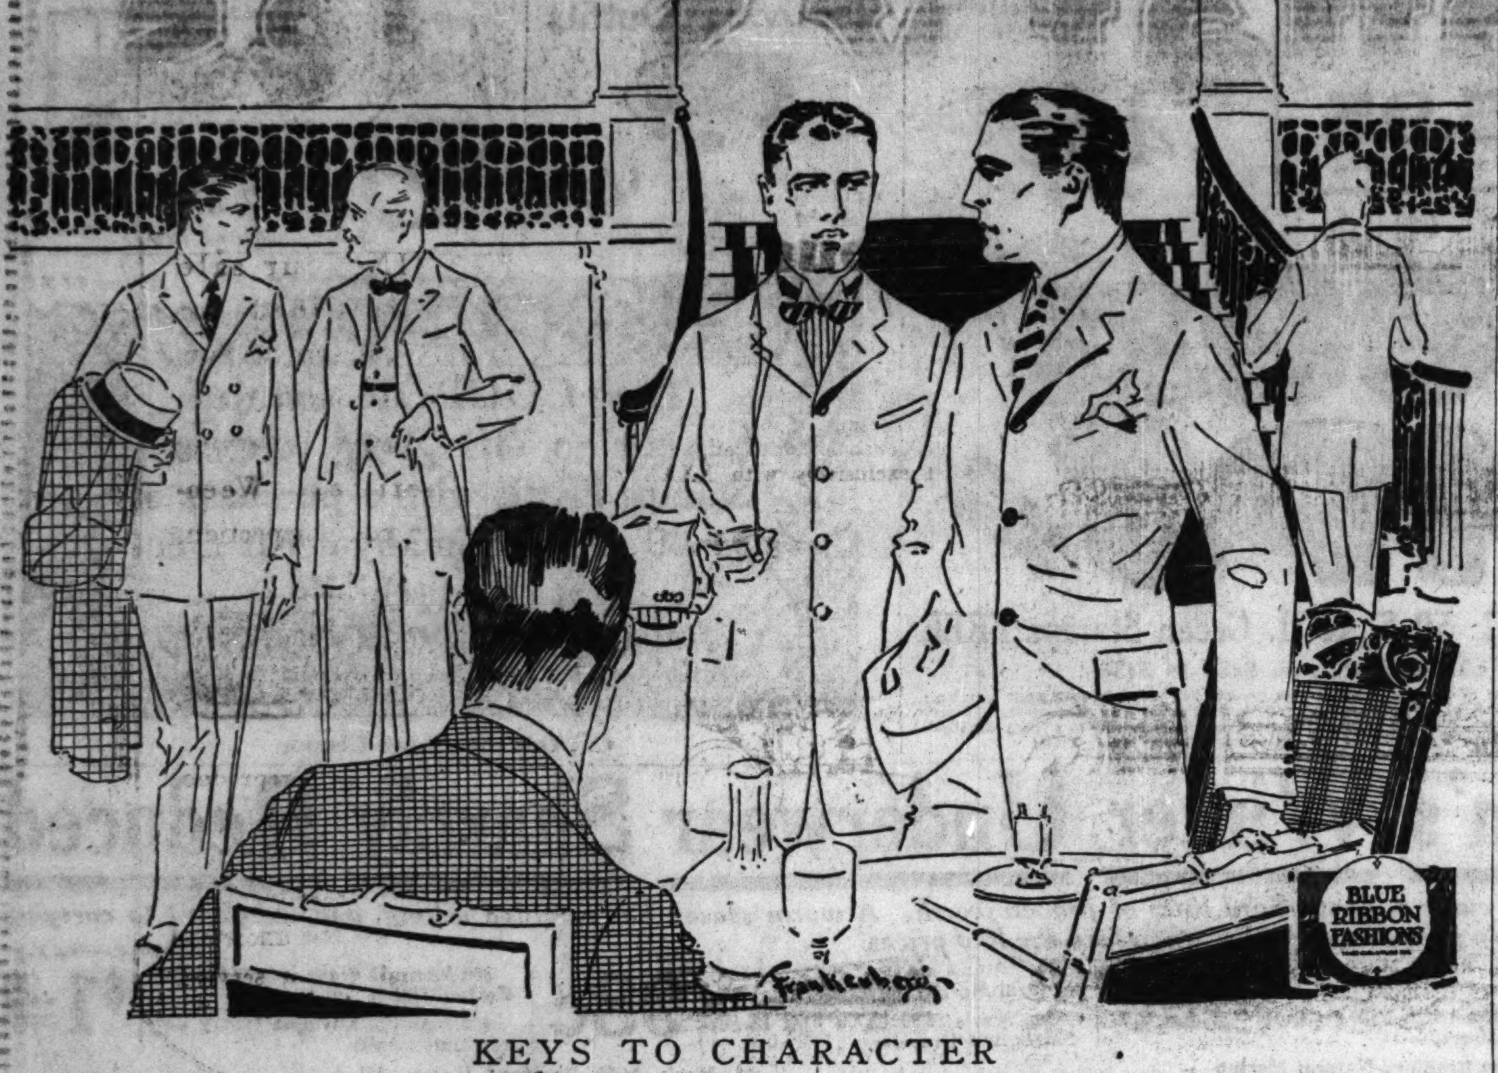
STATE STREET — JACKSON — TO VAN BUREN

MEN'S FASHIONS



KEYS TO CHARACTER

By A. T. Gallico.

This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

This department appears every Tuesday and Friday in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The scene is a business man's restaurant at the luncheon hour. The object is to observe what the business man goes to work in and to comment upon the success and failure of the various attires from the point of view of attractiveness. Since a man wears his business clothes the greater part of his waking hours, and that means, in this country, his sack suit, unless he is a head waiter or a diplomat, this part of his wardrobe is the most important of all.

A man cannot afford to say, "Well, I am just going to the office, and so it doesn't matter what I put on." It cannot be said too often that a man's clothes are the key to his character.

It is during the business day that his character is most under observation. This does not mean that a man need be a Beau Brummel or be obliged to spend half his income on his clothes to be a success in business. The chief points are neatness, good taste, which mean an avoidance of the spectacular, and an interesting plan in dress.

When I see a man who has obviously used some imagination in his costume, who has attempted to avoid the commonplace, and yet has not gone out of his way to be eccentric, I have the feeling that he is an interesting person and that, although he does not devote too much time to his wardrobe, he takes pride in his personal appearance.

For instance, at the table next to mine in the restaurant I picked out for this especial dissertation there were three men. One of them I immediately put down in my mind as a careful dresser, the second moderately successful in his dress, and the third as distinctly uninteresting.

The first man was well dressed because of a judicious use of colors in pleasing harmony. Less carefully done, the effect might have been loud. His suit was dark gray, of conservative cut. He wore a white shirt with narrow pink stripes. Against this was a four in hand tie of medium sized blue polka dots on a gray background. His collar was stiff white. A couple of inches of shirt cuff were visible, giving a finished look.

The second man wore a silk shirt of a pastel shade of green, with a self collar, with which he had matched a black and white striped four in hand. This combination, so far, was attractive. But the suit was brown—a jarring note. The answer to this was either a gray, black, or blue suit. For although the shirt was all right with the suit and with the cravat the latter was bad with the suit, as the black and brown combination detracted from the charm of the whole.

The third man looked as though his alarm clock had failed to go off that morning and that he had thrown on the first shirt, tie, and suit he had laid hands on. Everything separately was in good taste, but just didn't belong together. A greenish brown mixture suit was combined with a white shirt with a black pencil stripe. The tie was a blue and brown brocade effect.

To begin with, the shirt was a bad companion for the suit, because of the mixing of the brown and the black, and although the tie was a pretty good one for the suit it was a bad match for the shirt, both because of the color and the pattern. Brocaded and figured cravats do not mix as well with striped shirts as striped or plain colored neckwear.

Had this third man worn a gray or blue suit with his black and white striped shirt and a black and white striped tie, he would have been well dressed in a subdued way, like a man who sat a few tables away. His combination of gray suit, shirt of extremely narrow black and white stripes, and cravat of wider black and white stripes, although not especially cheerful, was at least possessed of a scheme This kind of shirt, by the way, is a good suggestion for the man who does not want too large a laundry bill. It keeps clean longer than a wider stripe, which has more white.

The man sitting across from the last mentioned person was the type of dresser who believes in color rather than a severe black and white combination. On a grayish blue silk shirt he wore a brighter blue figured cravat His suit was light gray. All would have been extremely well except that he was too thin for the cut of his suit. He was probably the thinnest man in the restaurant, and his suit was so snug fitting that his figure was accentuated. A looser sack coat would have filled him out.

Here and there was a hatrack for those who escaped the hat check boy. Assuming that the hat directly on top of each overcoat was the one that went with it, I took note of the combinations. Shades of gray were harmonized, and browns and tans. There were a number of blue coats topped by brown hats, with occasionally a black derby. The derbies were outnumbered by the soft hats. Several derbies with brown fuzzy overcoats caught my eye. This is not a good effect, both because the black and brown are insipid together and because a derby is not favored by the well dressed man as a companion to the bulky greatcoat. It is more in order with a conventional type of coat on the Chesterfield order.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Never Less than Major.

My nicest compliment accompanied congress' last cut in the number of officers in the army. During the war I was commissioned as a major; one of the cuts made me a captain, and the last a first lieutenant. Shortly after changing my bars, one of my sergeants, who had served in the same regiment with me overseas, came in to make his report. He addressed me as major and I reminded him that I was only a lieutenant now. He said, "Major, I don't care what all the politicians in Washington decide, you will never be less than major in my estimation."

Pluck in Her Smile.

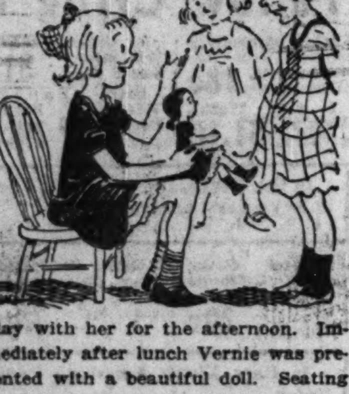
Financial losses and other trials made life hard to bear. I was forced to take charge of a store and keep house for my baby. While waiting on one of my customers, I received my loveliest compliment.

This woman said, "Do you know your customers admire you a great deal? We see the tears in your eyes, but there's always a smile on your lips. That's pluck and it's a fine thing to be plucky."

Z. S.

Pretty as Dolly.

It was the birthday of one of my little nieces, so several other little people were invited over to the house to play with her for the afternoon. Immediately after lunch Vernie was presented with a beautiful doll. Seating the doll on her knee, she said to the admiring children around her, "My auntie's so nice! I think she is just as pretty as my dolly, and she is lots and lots nicer."



C. V. B.

Nothing to Fear.

In second year high school my sister had the same instructor I had had. When he criticized her work for the first time he said: "I shall never be afraid to criticize Miss S——, because her sister always took correction so sweetly."

C. S.

For Father, Too.

Mine was paid me by a friend, who goes through life seeing only the good in people. She said, "What excellent taste you used when you selected your mother!"

B. A. R.

Had to Have Her.

There was a school club being organized and there were to be only nine girls in the club. One of the girls already a member came up to me and said, "O, you are to be in our club. We couldn't get along without you." I thought that this was a great honor.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

THE KITCHEN.

THERE is a distinct trend nowadays back to a kitchen that is not only life size but man size, and withal hospitable to the men of the family. It may even, if means are ample, be of royal size, like some of the old kitchens so beautifully described in real literature, as the resort of the high and mighty of their day.

A kitchen may be a complete little world of far more infinite purposes than any other room in the house, and besides this a pleasant place to be in. In discussing with an architect's wife their own kitchen, remodeled to be like one her husband had built in a new house and called "model" with some reason, I said, "But there is no place for a chair in it." She replied that she was going to have the drawers under one of the windows removed to make a place for a chair. As for the mere social need of a chair, she told of it when she said: "The boys always come right out to the kitchen when they come in to see what is going on." They are big football playing boys.

The most unsociable man I ever knew loved to sit in the kitchen of any home where he was a guest if it was a sociable place, and he was interested in every operation in it. He was one enormously interested in plain human facts of every type, and a great number of these are certainly linked up with food and its preparations.

Utilizing Wall Space.

The model kitchen in the architect's home is wonderful in the number of closets it contains. If I remember rightly there are sixteen. A number of the shallow ones might be called wall insets. It is wonderful what may be done by utilizing just the depth of wall between rooms to make a kitchen convenient with closets like that called the medicine cabinet, built into the bathroom, and in the kitchen carried to the ceiling to provide ample storeroom.

In that kitchen there is a cool corner for the ice box, with cool and deep closets for vegetables and fruits. Near the dining room door there is a closet for the small pieces of glass like cups and tumblers and other items that cannot be stacked like plates, but must have a sort of floor (shelf) space or a hanging place for the cups. But the sink is in the middle of the floor and though it has drain boards of marble, it somehow spoils the room for me.

My idea of the place for a sink—I give it freely, for I have been asked not a few times to give my idea of a model kitchen—is under or before a window. I have seen such a sink in the merest leanto of a kitchen and it made me love the room. The outlook was charming. A young college woman had by rearranging changed an inconvenient little space somewhat like a shed into a room as charming as some similar places in old monasteries.

Window Over the Sink.

One window for the sink and another to sit by, to pick over beans and to do all such work, from the side of which should extend brackets for pots of parsley, platters of the quick growing mustard and cress, the borage bottle, and other green things that do so much to make a kitchen wholesome and bright, are, to my mind, ideal, and three would not be objectionable.

Mrs. Alice Ames Winter, a graduate of Wellesley college, has an article in the Ladies' Home Journal for last August entitled "How I Planned My Kitchen," which is most interesting, although the one illustration given cannot do it justice. Of the window over the sink she says it looks "right over the hollyhocks and the larkspurs of the garden, the sight of which can mitigate the one monotonous and dreary feature of kitchen life—namely, the ever recurrent washing of dishes."

Radiator Warms Dishes.

Another item in this article is suggestive, although what is said of both the kitchen and pantry sinks is all of value. This is: "One small device that has proved successful was the placing of the radiator that heats the kitchen on the wall above the right hand drip board and running down it the rod on which kitchen towels hang, thus drying them quickly."

I am not sure I should like that, but I have seen in one most pleasant kitchen a radiator that was almost like a series of three shelves, a wonderful place on which to keep dishes warm, a place for clothes just ironed if they needed to be dried a little further, etc. Can anything be much more hateful than coffee served in cold cups, toast on cold plates, and all that? With such a radiator these dishes could be placed in it the night before to facilitate a swift preparation of a satisfactory breakfast. As to drying towels, what a privilege it is to dry them out of doors!

Moved to Verse.

Within the last few years no end of articles have been written about the kitchen, and just recently some charming verse. An opera singer has described her kitchen, with a marvel at its resources. A man has written of a kitchen which was so built that the floor was absolutely free of table legs and larger solids. There is such a wealth of suggestion in all this and in what has been prepared by government agencies to help the farmer's wife to save steps, and her back, as to produce discontent with what so many of us seem to have to put up with that we hardly know what to do.

For my own part, there is one thing I would have that I think no one that I have heard of seems to care for to an equal extent. It is a long counter, high enough to work over in preparing all dishes for table service, for holding soiled dishes for which there is never enough room on the dripping boards of the sink if as many as three courses are served, and, above all, to give space enough while you stand before it so that you feel that you have elbow room. It should be at least twice as long as the counter on any kitchen cabinet, and higher. Not one thing should have a permanent storage space on it. The builders of our modern kitchens do not realize how much storage room a kitchen needs if we are to have a permanent place for everything and everything in its place.

There is one rather ever present thing in the modern city kitchen that causes thousands of women a mild or acute despair. It is hardly pleasanter to talk about the insect that will infest beds, given a chance, but the cockroach makes fifty chances for itself where the other vermin makes one. I have had lately a number of complaints about this endlessly troublesome and impolite thing to mention.

The men hired to care for buildings come in and cover us with a hateful and dirty dust which soon loses its virtue, and before they make their rounds again the prolific cockroach has made a happy hunting ground of our kitchen and we dare not leave it for five minutes if any food is there cooling or for any reason exposed. As long as one cockroach remains we must fight and root him out often from the strangest of nooks. He will climb the stove splasher while you are cooking, and if he can get an overhead perch where he is uncomfortable or ambitious he will drop down, regardless of where he may hit. If you have a seeing eye it is continually incited to murder.

Death to Pests.

You may buy powder and pastes, but there is only one sure thing that will clear him out, destroy his progeny, and prevent his return. It is a proprietary preparation whose active ingredient is phosphorus, or what is perhaps the same sort of thing as that described by Jessup Whitehead in "The Steward's Handbook" (1899), under the heading: "Phosphorus Paste for Roaches": "The following recipe for the destruction of roaches in bakehouses, etc., is efficacious: Mix one dram of phosphorus with two ounces of water in a stone jar; set this in hot water until the phosphorus is melted, then pour into a quart or half gallon pan containing one-fourth pound melted lard. Stir up quickly, and put in one-half pound of fine sugar and one-half pound of flour made into a stiff paste. Make the paste into small balls about the size of small English walnuts, put them about wherever you find the cockroaches, and fill up all cracks and holes with the paste. They will eat it and die by hundreds."

Remember, this is poison! If only a few cockroaches are to be seen in a kitchen it is undoubtedly more sensible to buy the proprietary article and not have the trouble of mixing this wasteful quantity. The space around water pipes may be small, but a bug can get through it; therefore put the paste there especially.

It is impossible for a kitchen to be a cozy place if it is infested with any sort of vermin. If there is a place to which mice can retreat, open it up if you can. It is astonishing how they will stay away if their retiring place is taken away from them. That retiring place may be over a built-in ice box in a hole gathering and holding musty dirt, and so objectionable for these two reasons.

Most Interesting Room of All.

There are problems and problems in kitchens, but we can go at enthusiastically solving them if we will. A woman once said to me at the end of some lectures I had given: "I used to go out in my kitchen and wish it would bust up. Now. . . ." Well, she had an idea that it could be made the most interesting place in the house, the one most alive with three times a day interest.

If a man who finds life a bore can be once introduced actively into the kitchen he will take a new interest in life. There is more than one proof that the cultivated men of the world are reviving that ancient pastime for gentlemen, the "cooking spree."

Under the head "Chicken a la D'Escars" there is a description of such a spree in one of a great chef's books. It reads: "The Duc d'Escars was one of half a dozen nobles whom Louis XV. associated with himself in a series of cooking sprees, when they prepared their own grand suppers, each member carrying out his own part."

A kitchen enthusiast can find a thousand defenses for the kitchen as the most important room in the house, one whose functions are the most imperative. It is not a servile room, as too many people think, though it must be admitted that for people with low ideals of eating it can be a most dreary and unsocial place.

Making Frictionless Home.

A satisfactory kitchen is a prerequisite to the merest physical comforts of the house, and in an emergency has been known to be as essential to the family or individual as the life raft to the drowning man. Isolation from all the indispensable facilities of the kitchen is worse than exile to a woman who understands the resources of a kitchen and how to make the most of them. When a kitchen is inaccessible a woman is likely to waste effort and secure but poor substitutes for what she might so easily have through its service. The mere charms of its possibilities, if recognized, are irresistible.

A perfectly functioning kitchen is the stable social foundation of a happy and frictionless home from which each member may go out to a life of activity with great health, and great capacity for an efficient life. Such citizens of the republic waste no energy of their own nor none of other people's in overcoming physical handicaps. Upon food, properly prepared in the food room, depends every human activity from breathing to pursuits personal, national, industrial, or social.

Beauty Answers by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. MERRY—YOU ARE A MERRY little soul, due for a long life and happy one. "What is a scalp without adornment? A tree without its leafy branches?" you inquire. I'll be the goat. What is it? The tree doesn't worry, and out come the leaves just the same. If the head doesn't worry, out will come its radiance more glorious than before, mayhap? With a little home brewed applications of common sense. Use the brush on it as you never have before; night and morning; count the strokes, and make them a hundred even. That is the best massage on earth for hair. If yours is shedding more than normally, apply a tonic with the finger tips, and massage it carefully into the scalp at night. I have an excellent formula for the tonic, in printed form, also more advice on care of the hair. If you desire these, send stamped envelope.

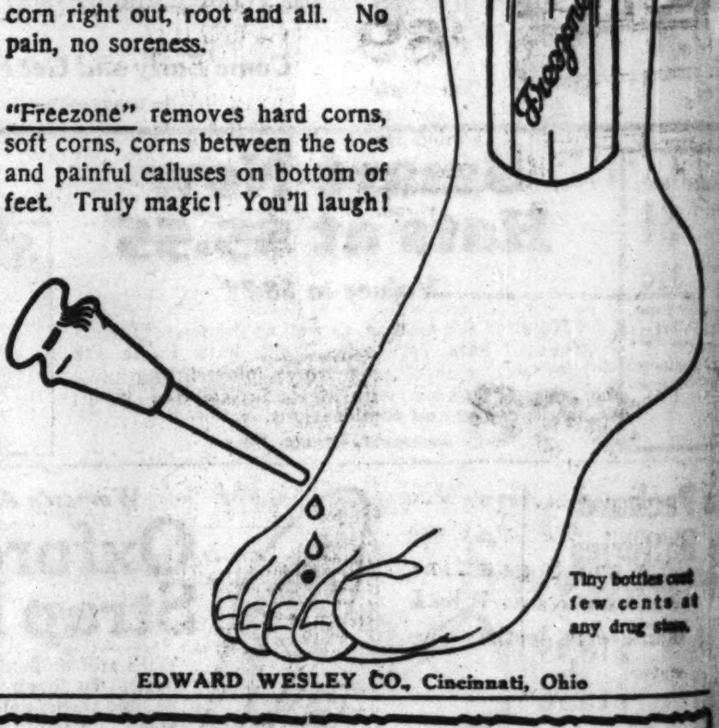
I. R.: EXCESSIVELY OILY HAIR generally results from general health disturbances, in which event constitutional treatment must be given. But in a great many cases, local measures are enough. The following is a good tonic and should be well rubbed into the scalp: Resorcin, 40 grains; water, 1½ ounces. Witch hazel and alcohol are astringents and help to reduce the pores to normal size. Shampooing the hair at least once a week is necessary in cases of extremely oily hair.

GLORIA: LEMON JUICE ADDED to the last rinse water gives a golden tint to blonde hair.



Corns

Lift Right Off with Fingers

Doesn't hurt a bit! A drop of "Freezone" on a sore, touchy corn stops that corn from hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn right out, root and all. No pain, no soreness.

"Freezone" removes hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes and painful calluses on bottom of feet. Truly magic! You'll laugh!

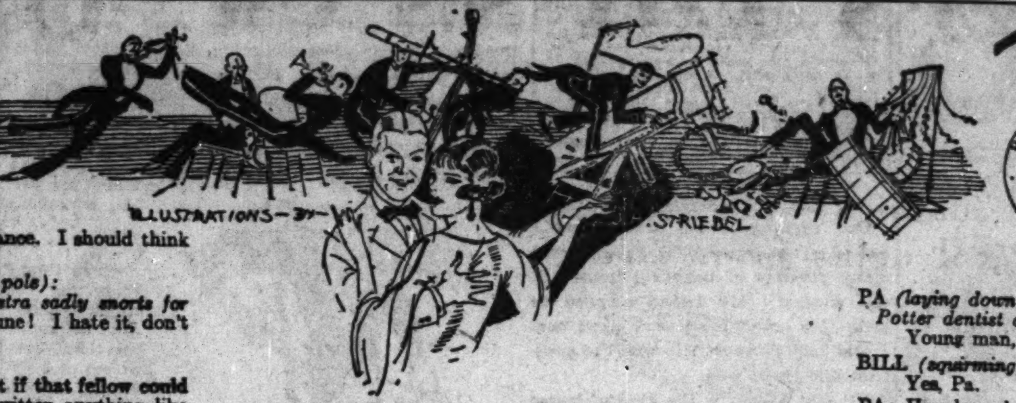
THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy



PROLOGUE.

To an outsider, there would seem to be something furtive and altogether too secretive about Bill Potter's social activities . . . to the Potters, however, this phenomenon presents different aspects as viewed by different members of the family. . . . Mamie, for instance, is a bit contemptuous of Bill's various conquests. . . . To her, they are all pretty much alike, except that some are dumber than others. . . . To Ma, the problem of keeping Bill in nights is almost as simple in its outlines as keeping the cat out nights, the only difference being that the cat occasionally, responding to that cosmic urge, will go out of its own volition, whereas Bill will never stay in if he can help it. . . . To Pa, it presents a problem for spasmodic exhibitions of the stern parent rôle, followed by long periods of passive bewilderment. . . . As for Bill, "Aw, gee whiz! You'd think I was a baby or somep'n. . . . They make me sick. . . . Ain't a fellow got a right to live his own life or nothin'?"

Scene I.

(Bill Potter has taken the latest object of his affections, Anabelle McLuckie, to Joyland, that huge arena where young couples wrestle rhythmically as ten earnest epileptics fill the evening air with assorted union snorts and wheezes. . . . Anabelle is a telephone operator, one of those keen misses who can always get your number except when on duty . . . naturally, she has seen through Bill's pretensions long ago, but Bill doesn't know it yet, and never will if she can help it.)

BILL (dexterously steering clear of one of those mad dashing couples for whom dancing consists of making as many laps around the hall as possible before the music stops):
Heads up! Where do you think you're goin'? (Under his breath.) Big stiffs!

ANABELLE (admiringly):
My! but you talk right up to 'em, don't you?

BILL (louder—the mad dashers are now banking the turn at the end of the hall, so Bill can speak freely):
Yes. Big stiffs! They must be tired of life. I'd kick him in the shins, only these are my new shoes.

(The trap drummer suddenly goes crazy and strikes at everything within reach, with a deafening result.)

BILL (thrilled):
Attaboy! That's what I call dance music.

(The mania spreads to the saxophonist—presumably, the drummer bit him.)

ANABELLE (as saxophonist pants his way up three scales and then dives off head first, landing up on the end of his register with a low moan):
Gee! that's swell! There's something about saxophone music that——

BILL (exuberantly):
Me, too. When I hear them saxophones moan it makes me feel like—like—well, like——

ANABELLE (with sympathetic interest):
Same with me, too. Isn't it funny it should affect us both that way?

(Not funny—fundamental.)

BILL (as the orchestra suddenly gets together on "Home, Sweet Home"):
Gee! I didn't know it was so late. Gosh, you're a stepper.

ANABELLE (softly):
O, no; you're the one that can dance. I should think you'd get tired dancing with me.

BILL (taking all the line and half the pole):
I should say not! (As the orchestra sadly snorts for home, sweet home.) Darn that tune! I hate it, don't you?

ANABELLE (dutifully):
I can't stand it. (Brightly.) I bet if that fellow could hear music like this, he'd never written anything like that.

BILL (with more sense than sentiment):
If he was alive today, he'd never write it. Can you imagine a guy living in a flat writin' about home, sweet home?

(Anabelle cannot imagine it; and small wonder: it would tax a livelier imagination:

'Mid kitchenette apartments and duplex flats
Though we may roam,
Be it even an October lease with a thirty day clause,
There's no place like home.

Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
Be it ever so in-a-door,
There's no place like home.)

Scene II.

(There is a fortune awaiting some inventor who will perfect a front door that will close noiselessly after midnight . . . he could get a fortune from Bill Potter's royalties alone.)

PA (stirring restlessly):
What's that?

MA (who knows what it is):
I don't know. Never mind.

PA (aroused):
Is that that kid comin' home late again? What time is it, anyway?

MA (soothingly):
O, I don't know. It isn't late.

PA (groping under pillow for his radium faced wrist watch . . . focuses on dial with amazed unbelief):
Two o'clock! Say, I'm goin' to talk to that young——

MA (protectively):
Now, now, Pa, don't say anything tonight. Talk to him in the morning. (Affectionately.) He's tired now.

"Well, well, enter the young Rajah!"

PA (belligerently):
He's tired? Say, why the hell shouldn't he be tired? Out all night like this, and then comin' in and wakin' me up. I'll—I'll——

MA: Now, now, Pa. Don't get excited and spoil your sleep. Just leave it go until morning, and you can talk to him at the breakfast table.

PA (secretly glad to postpone the ordeal, sinks back on pillow and mumbles to it):
He's got to stop this sort of thing. I'll—I'll——

MA (soothingly):

Pa: "Two o'clock! Say, I'm goin' to talk to that young——"

Now, Pa, there, there!

PA (subsiding, sleepily):
I'll—I'll—morning—breakfast—cut it out, young man—sick and tired—two o'clock. (Asleep.) Kweeeeeeee skurrrrrrrrrrr!

Scene III.

(It is breakfast time, and Ma has had the usual trouble gathering them all together before everything is cold . . . they are all there finally except Bill, who has rolled over and sneaked three additional naps since Ma first called him . . . he may now be seen coming in jauntily but with secret misgivings, having overheard part of Ma and Pa's conversation last night.)

MAMIE (sarcastically):
Well, well, enter the young Rajah! What time did you get in last night, Valentino?

BILL (glaring at her and trying to seat himself as inconspicuously as possible):
None o' your darn business.

MAMIE:
If I was out as late as you every night, I'd get a paper route or a milk wagon and make some money on my way home.

BILL (flaring):
You and Red don't break no speed records gettin' home nights, and then you hang around in the hall until the neighbors think you're burglars and start callin' the police.

MA (with an apprehensive glance at Pa, who is beginning to coal up):
Now, children, stop the wrangling.

PA (laying down some of Ma's hurried toast, to which the Potter dentist owes his prosperity):
Young man, I want to have a talk with you.

BILL (squirming):
Yes, Pa.

PA: How long do you think I'm goin' to stand your coming in here all hours of the night? What do you think I'm running here—sort of a hotel, or a community center, or something?

BILL (eager to "yes" anything and escape the coming storm):
Yes, Pa.

PA: What!

BILL (rattled):
Er—er—no, Pa.

PA: I'm goin' to put a stop to this. You're goin' to stop runnin' the street nights. You're goin' to be home and in bed by ten o'clock every night.

BILL:
But gee whiz! Pa, you treat me like I was a baby or somep'n.

PA (angrily):
Well, you're a long ways from being a man yet. And until you are, and have a roof of your own, you'll do as I say.

MA (to Bill):
Pa's right. You should be in bed every night by nine o'clock. One hour of sleep before midnight is worth three after, and, besides, you'll ruin your health.

BILL:
Aw, my health—I got more health than anything else. I'd trade a little health for a little fun any day.

PA (pounding on table with knife):
None of your lip, young man! You're goin' to start keepin' regular hours in this house, and you're goin' to start tonight.

BILL (aghast):
But Pa, I got a date tonight to go to a swell hop.

PA: You've got a date to stay home and hop in a swell bed.

BILL:
But I can't, Pa, tonight. Let me stay out tonight, and I——

PA: Did you hear what I said? You'll stay in tonight.

BILL:
But Pa, listen. I——

PA (furiously):
No; you listen! If you're not in bed by ten o'clock tonight, you and I are going to the mat. I mean it, now. I'm not going to have any more of this monkey business.

BILL (rebelliously):
Gee! none of the other fellows are cooped up in the house like me. I don't see why I can't go out if I behave myself. It's a darn outrage, that's what it is!

PA (glaring):
It is, is it? Outrage, huh? I'll "outrage" you, if I catch you comin' in at two o'clock in the morning again.

BILL (hopelessly):
But, Pa, listen. I gotta tonight. I just gotta!

PA: None o' your lip!

BILL (wailing):
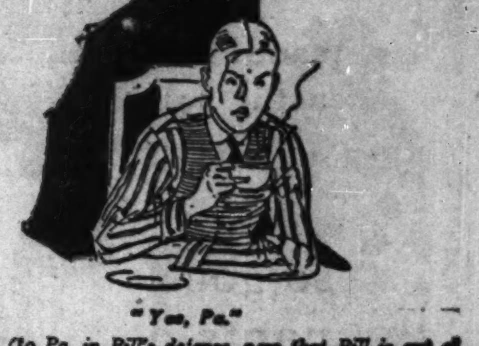
Aw, gee whiz!

(Telephone rings, and Bill rushes out to the hall to answer it.)



"Yes, Pa."

MAMIE (to Pa, in Bill's defense, now that Bill is out of hearing):
I wouldn't be so hard on the poor kid.

PA (asserting himself proudly):
Who's doing this?

BILL (on the telephone in the hall):
But listen, Anabelle, gee whiz! he kicked up an awful fuss . . . no, don't do that . . . gee whiz! can't you understand I'm not tryin' to get out of it . . . all right, all right, then, I'll risk it, but . . . maybe I can sneak in, but he'll be terribly sore. All right, I'll pick you up at the house at nine . . . all right, I gotta hang up now . . . good-by.

PA (to Ma, rising decisively):
You watch how I handle this—I'll stop this running around all hours of the night. You'll see.

MA: Now, don't be too harsh, Pa. You wasn't such an angel when you was Bill's age.

(Mamie meanwhile has slipped out to Bill, who is gazing dejectedly at telephone.)

BILL (to Mamie):
I promised Anabelle to take her to that dance, and she says if I don't take her she knows somebody else who will.

MAMIE (looking around carefully):
What are you going to do?

BILL:
I'm goin' to take her. What do you think of that?

MAMIE:
Attaboy! Never weaken. The first hundred girls are the hardest. But I hope Pa won't catch you comin' in late tonight.

BILL (earnestly):
So do I.

(So do we.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

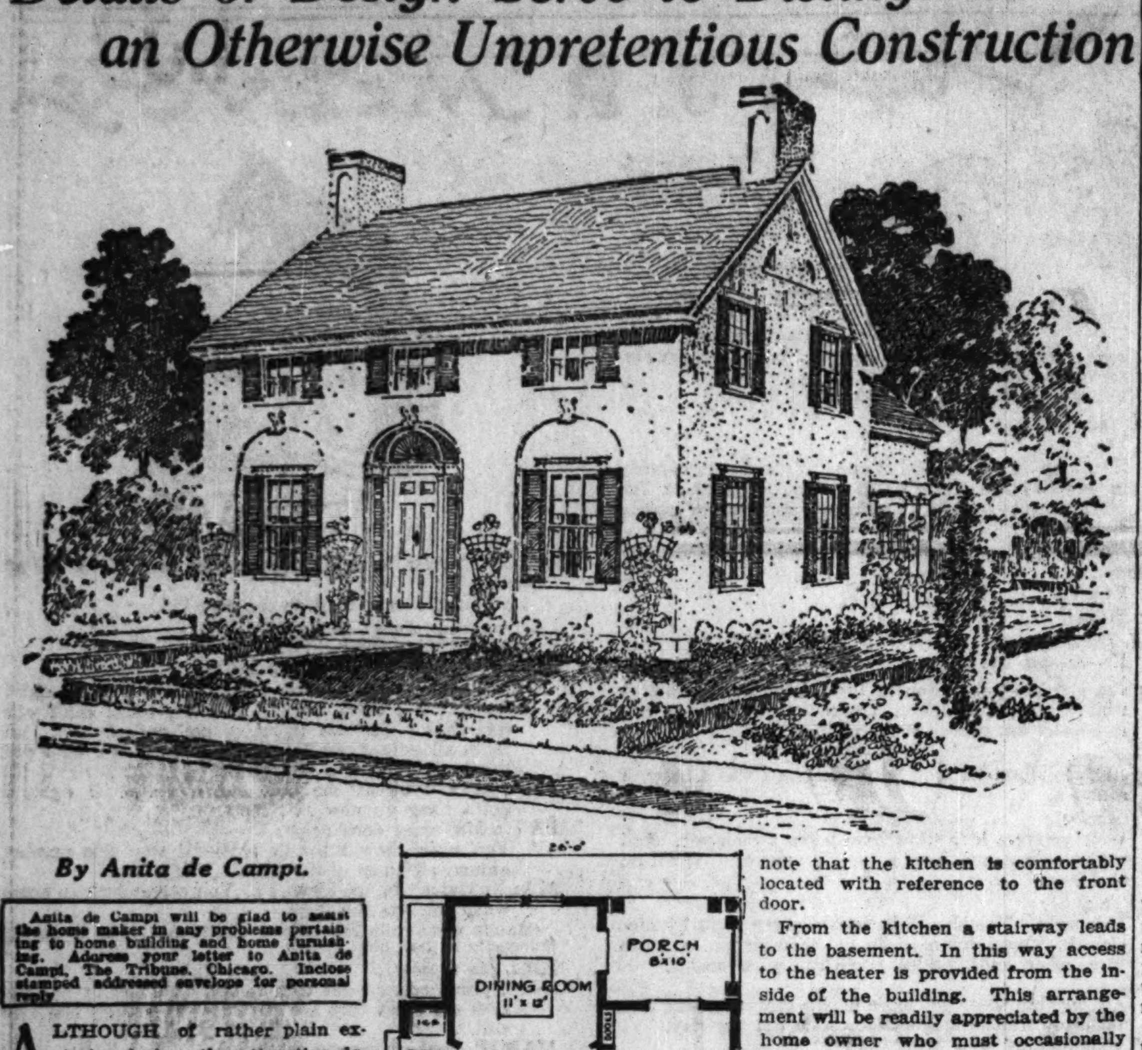
Details of Design Serve to Distinguish an Otherwise Unpretentious Construction



By Anita de Campi.

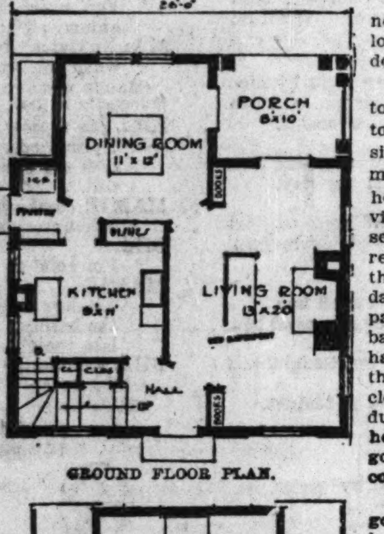
Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

ALTHOUGH of rather plain exterior design, the attractive details of the front entrance, the decorative window blinds, and the stucco covered chimneys give an air of distinction to the house illustrated today. The use of stucco in home construction is particularly justified in designs such as this, because it offers a most excellent background against which details of design may be pleasingly contrasted.

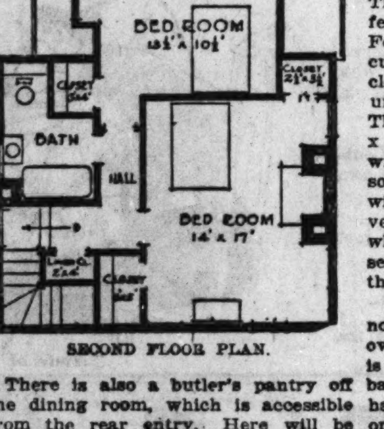
Of special interest is the use of a number of trellises and the lattice at the rear porch, all of which form a satisfactory background for the support and distribution of foliage around the building.

On entering the small reception hall, one finds to the left a convenient clothes closet at the foot of the stairs leading to the second floor. To the right, there is a spacious living room, 13x20 feet, with a massive brick fireplace as the central feature. The arrangement of this room provides also for two convenient, built-in bookcases. There is ample wall space, against which the customary living room furniture may be placed. The living room opens out on to a rear porch which commands a view of the garden, and is also directly connected to the 11x12 foot dining room. The latter is well lighted by windows on two sides and a French door opening on to the rear porch.

Of interest to the housewife is the convenient location of a built-in cabinet, accessible both from the dining room and the kitchen. In the servantless household this is particularly useful, in that hot dishes may be placed in the cabinet from the kitchen side, and be ready for serving on the table by opening the glass doors on the dining room side of the cabinet. This feature makes it unnecessary for the hostess to leave her guests during a meal.



GROUND FLOOR PLAN.



SECOND FLOOR PLAN.

There is also a butler's pantry off the dining room, which is accessible from the rear entry. Here will be found a place for the refrigerator, which may be iced conveniently. There is space for shelving in the pantry, so that it may be used for a cold room, if so desired.

The kitchen is large and has ample space for a dropleaf table, which may be used for culinary purposes, as well as for the family breakfast table. There is a handy broom closet for the tidy housewife. It is interesting to note that the kitchen is comfortably located with reference to the front door.

From the kitchen a stairway leads to the basement. In this way access to the heater is provided from the inside of the building. This arrangement will be readily appreciated by the home owner who must occasionally visit the furnace room. There is a separate exit from the basement at the rear for the removal of ashes and for the use of the laundress on sunny days. Unfortunately, the architect has partitioned only a small part of the basement for laundry purposes, and has given an unusually large space to the furnace room, which is not enclosed. It might be better to build dust tight partitions enclosing the heater room, and in that way insure good drying space for the wash on cold, winter days.

On the second floor, there are two good sized, well lighted bedrooms, a bath room, and ample closet space. The larger bedroom, which is 14 x 17 feet, has a well proportioned fireplace. Four windows insure comfort to the occupants. It also has two separate clothes closets, a convenience which, unfortunately, most bedrooms lack. The other bedroom is 13 feet 6 inches x 10 feet 6 inches in size, and has three windows, one of which is placed in a sort of alcove, with a cleverly devised window seat. Both bedrooms are conveniently accessible to the bath room, which is at the head of the stairs. A separate linen closet is also found at this point.

The exterior may be stuccoed economically on metal lath and plaster over wood studs. If the wood frame is securely braced and the metal lath backplastered, the resulting wall will have the necessary attributes of economy of construction, permanency of stucco, warmth, and low cost of upkeep—all of which are desirable in every home. Stucco can also be economically applied on concrete blocks or tile. An attractive color scheme for this exterior is light gray stucco, with white window trims, green blinds, and variegated slate or stained shingle roof. Architects Haven and Hoyt of Boston, Mass., are the designers of this home.

VARIED ACTIVITIES OF WOMEN

Miss Kameko Kawamoto, a social worker in the service of the Tokio municipal government, has applied for membership in the newly organized Kakushin club, she being the first woman to apply for membership in a political organization.

A Chinese woman who has arrived at Saigon, in French Indo-China, claims to be the oldest person in the world. At the age of 131 she traveled from Haiphong, the chief seaport of Tongking to Saigon, which place she had expressed a wish to visit before dying.

That diving may be looked upon as a profession for women is demonstrated by Miss Margaret Naylor, Great Britain's woman diver, who is searching in Hobermory bay, Scotland, for treasure left by a ship of the Spanish Armada. A dive of ten fathoms is nothing to Miss Naylor.

More than three times as many business women failed in 1921 as in 1920 in England.

Having their photograph engraved on their notepaper is the latest fad among Paris society women.

Larger numbers of women than men are leaving for farms in search of more lucrative fields of endeavor.

A new association headed by a Buddhist nun has been formed to spread culture among women of Japan.

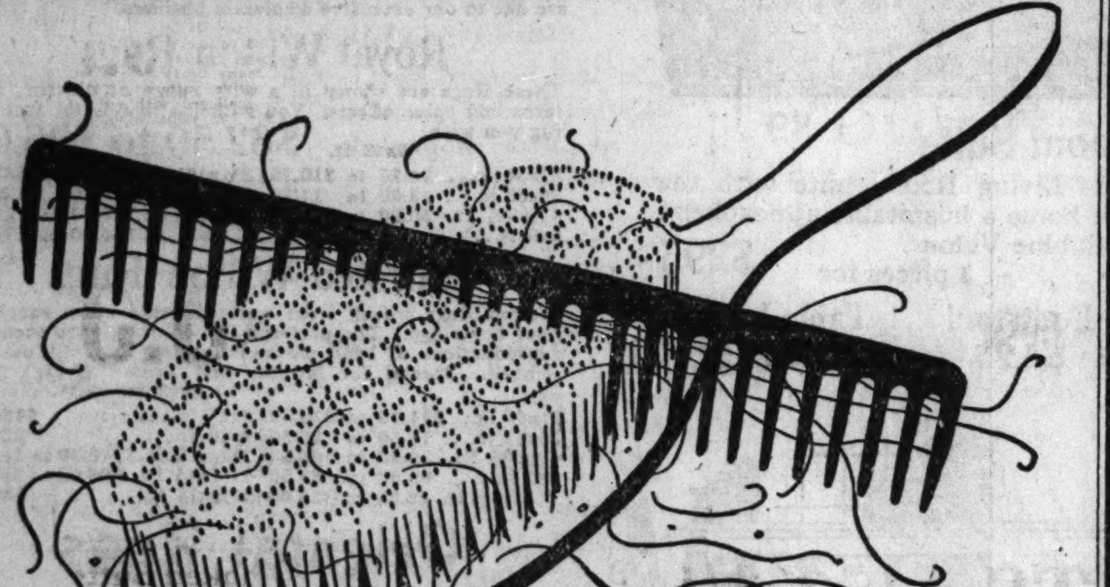
The queen of the Belgians has prepared a special album containing a complete set of Belgian postage stamps, to be presented to Queen Helena of Italy, who is an ardent philatelist and possesses a magnificent collection.

At the age of 99 years, Mrs. Arena Thompson of Alabama claims to be the oldest woman political campaigner in the country.

The former Miss Eloise L. Breese of New York, now Countess of Ancaster, has been elected a justice of the peace in England.

The legal dress prescribed for women attorneys in England includes the ordinary barrister's wig and the orthodox gown over a dress of dark material, which is high in the neck and hangs below the robe.

Mrs. Annie L. Swynnerton, the British painter of children, does much of her work by electric light.



Dandruff-Falling Hair!

Quick! A 35c bottle of delightful "Danderine" will Save Any Man or Woman's Hair—See Dandruff Go!

Don't lose another hair! Don't tolerate destructive dandruff. A little Danderine now will save your hair; thicken and strengthen it; double its beauty. Falling hair never stops by itself! Dandruff multiplies until it forms a crusty scale, destroying the hair, roots and all, resulting in baldness.

Your druggist will tell you that "Danderine" is the largest selling hair saver in the world because it corrects and tones sick, ailing hair every time. Use one bottle of Danderine, then if you find a single falling hair or a particle of dandruff, you can have your money back.

HOW DID HE PROPOSE?

Do you remember—of course you do—how your husband proposed to you? Where and how did it happen? Was he scared to death and weren't you on the verge of nervous prostration, too? For. Of course, you knew he was going to do it—or didn't you? Perhaps he isn't your husband, but one of the fellows you had to "turn down." How about that? Tell us about it? This goes double, for we want to hear from the men, too. A dollar for every letter printed. Address, Proposal Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

One of the Lucky Ones.

One evening a boy friend and I passed a real estate office. There were many pictures of beautiful houses in the window. My friend stopped to look. He asked me how I liked one. I told him I thought it was the prettiest one there was.

He said, "That is the kind of house I am going to get my wife."

I told him that the girl would be lucky. He asked me if I would like my husband to buy me one when I married. I said I would. He walked into the office and asked about the house.

I followed him and asked him what he was doing. He told me he was buying the house for me. He bought it and so I am the lucky girl. E. M.

Quite by Accident.

I had been going with Bob for two years and knew he never went with another girl, although he had many girl as well as boy friends. For two months he had been telling me how much he cared for me.

It was one night in early summer. We were riding along a beautiful country road. He drew me close and kissed me and said, "Sweetheart, will you——" just then another car came whirling along and he was interrupted.

Thinking I knew what he was about to say, I said, "Of course, I will, darling—as though I could ever marry another man."

In about two weeks I received my diamond ring. We have been married two years now and just the other night he asked me if I remembered the night he proposed.

I did, and he said, "I had been trying for a long time to gather courage enough to ask you to marry me, but what I was really going to ask you that night was if you'd go to the prom with me or not."

We both had a hearty laugh. C. F. S.

Believe It or Not.

The most thrilling proposal I ever received was from an old timer who lived not many miles from my Montana homestead, where I have spent seven months out of twelve the last years. I knew my project was looked upon with great misgiving by the neighbors about, but nevertheless I was knocked speechless when this much patched, toothless, disheveled, albeit good hearted, old codger dismounted at my door one morning, and with a business like manner addressed me thus:

"There's no use beating 'bout the bush—you came out here to get a man, and I'm in need of a housekeeper. I took to you the minute I seed you, and, well, I ain't too modest to admit that you have allus showed a preference for me. I have asked Bilious Bill to run us into town [it was only sixty-five miles distant] in his flivver, which he'll do any time suits you. When do you want to go?"

Believe it or not—I'm still a spinster. C. B.

Finally Convinced Her.

I was keeping company with a young man who lived out of town and mother often invited him over for Sunday dinner. When it came time for the second helping he always refused. I knew he did this more for manner's sake and that down in his heart he really cared for more, so I always insisted on his eating more. One day mother wasn't feeling well, so she refused to eat dinner and that left us to eat alone.

When I insisted on his having another piece of meat, he looked up at me and said, "I wish I could always have a girl like you to look out for me."

I laughed and took it in a joking way, but before the day was over he convinced me that he meant it, and made me promise that I would take the responsibility. A. E. E.

Right in Public.

Even though it is twenty-two years since my husband proposed, I have never ceased to wonder why he chose such a public place in which to ask me that question. It was in a crowded street car. We were returning to my home after having been downtown viewing a parade. I had promised my little nephew I would take him along to see the parade and was holding him on my lap, and I felt glad to think his little form helped to conceal my flaming face and agitation for fear some one was listening in on our conversation. COVERLETS FOR BABY.

CREPE DE CHINE has been such a well liked material for so long and has been and is used for so many things it will not be a surprise to see it made up into lovely coverlets and pillow slips for the baby's use.

One of these sets would be lovely for a baby for next spring, to use in the carriage, or indoors for the baby's daytime naps through the colder months.

One of the delicate blue or pink shades, or white if one prefers choosing a rather heavy quality, will be the thing.

The coverlet is made the usual size and is well filled with several layers of cotton batting, the kind that comes in sheets.

A two inch wide picoted ruffle is stitched in between the upper and under sections, making an attractive finish all around, and on the upper side of the coverlid there are three rows of quarter inch wide bias folds set on. These folds have a half inch wide space between, and the outer one is one inch from the edge.

Instead of these folds turning at the corners they extend beyond the edge, and are finished in loops one inch long. The effect is wonderfully pretty.

Nestling inside the folds in one corner, there should be a lovely silk flower or small nosegay.

The pillow cover is made just the same as the coverlid, and the picture shows you clearly how they should look when finished.

Of course, the hardest part of the work will be in cutting and making the folds. They must be accurately marked ou the material, cut carefully, and the work done slowly enough to keep even.

When they are finished and pressed, ready to be put on the coverlid, they should be pinned at intervals, measuring carefully, to keep an even distance from the edge and each other. They should be blind stitched, and it will not do to be in a hurry with the work, for unless done quite perfectly it will not be satisfactory

The Queerest Boss I Ever Had

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the laughs he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that reduced you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible and send it to the Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Afraid to Go Home.

My queerest employer was original, if somewhat erratic.

When he became excited, he would pull buttons off his coat. I kept a supply of needles and thread in my desk to repair the damages wrought by overwrought nerves. I understand he did not get off so easily when his bad habit overtook him in his home.

One noon he left to meet a relative who was to arrive at the union station. As the train was an hour late, he became tired and nervous. At 2 o'clock he rushed into the office shouting at me to get a needle and thread. He had on a new suit and dare not go home with the buttons off, so had pleaded urgent business and sent the relative home in a taxi.

He had promised his wife to spend the afternoon at home, but could not show up with the buttons of his new suit in his pocket. N. M.

Broke All Records.

My queerest proposal came from a chap who was known to be a woman hater. I met him under most unusual circumstances. His best friend, Herbert, had met me at a party and a short time later he enlisted for service in the great war. Herb was to leave for duty shortly, so he asked the girl who had given the party to have me at her home so that he could meet me again before he left for service. He also told her that, to make the party complete, he would bring along his pal, Alvin, who was a woman hater.

I went to this girl's house as requested and one hour after I met Alvin he broke all records by proposing to me. I told him that he did not mean it, but this did not seem to quench his ardor, for he continued to make intense proposals to me for fully six months.

But 'twas not to be, so maybe he will not forget but will name his first daughter after me. H. G. R.

Gave a Little Help.

John was a big fellow, rather shy and it was hard for him to express his thoughts. For months I knew he was trying to get up courage enough to propose.

Jim was traveling and once a month he was in town and had asked me several times. He was turned down, but came back undismayed. I received a letter from Jim saying he would be at home Thanksgiving and expected me to say "Yes" when he saw me.

That night I had Jim's letter on the table where John could see it. Of course it was mentioned and when he asked what Jim had to say, I told him the truth and added that I cared more for some one else, so Jim's answer would be "No."

It did not take one minute for him to take me in his arms and tell me what I had been waiting to hear. But to this day I have never regretted the little help I gave. A. J. B.

Just Like a Clock.

His chief delight in life seemed to be in religiously observing his daily program of activities, everything being done at precisely the same time each day. At exactly 9 o'clock each morning he entered the office, and at 5 in the afternoon his desk in closing clicked with the stroke of the clock.

It was a common belief in the office that the elevator boys looked at their watches upon his arrival—not to see if he were on time, but to find if their watches were correct.

One morning, due to traffic delays, it was ten minutes past 9 when he stepped into the office. He quickly mounted a chair and pushed the hands of the clock back to the figure 9. That evening at 5 he moved the hands ten minutes ahead. B. P. L.

Mad Over System.

He believed in system. I do, too, but not to the extent he did.

Every letter that went out had to be recorded on a large sheet of paper which was fastened to a table. That is, the date it was received, the date answered, who sent it, and the name of the person answering. This was part of the stenographer's duty—and you can imagine the time wasted, for I have never once seen him refer to this sheet. He always called for the correspondence itself.

When the janitor washed the windows, he had to mark on a card the date this duty was performed. Everything else in the office was systemized accordingly. A. A.

MOTHER! BREAK CHILD'S COLD WITH "CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP"

Hurry! Move Little Bowels with this Harmless Laxative

Whatever else you give your child to relieve a bad cold, sore throat or congestion, be sure to first open the little one's bowels with "California Fig Syrup" to get rid of the poisons and waste which are causing the cold and congestion. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works the constipation poison, sour bile and waste right out.

Even if you call your family physician, he will praise you for having given "California Fig Syrup" as the laxative, because it never fails, never cramps or overacts, and even sick children love its pleasant taste.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, Chicago Tribune. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscript returned.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Once Is Enough.

The other day when I was changing classes for English, I entered the classroom before any one else, and so hastily picked up a piece of chalk to sketch the professor, who was a cross old man of about 65.

Well, I became so industrious I forgot where I was. I had just finished and written the professor's name below, when I stood up to survey it.

To my horror I backed into one who proved to be the professor. He was standing and glaring at me out of a sharp eye.

Well, any way, I hope it doesn't happen again. J. G.

Breaking In.

When we married my husband was connected with a university. I was invited to join the woman's faculty club, which was an organization for social purposes.

At the first meeting I attended I was compelled to leave early and had gone for my wraps and was waiting near the top of the stairs for a soloist to finish singing.

In stepping down one step on the old fashioned winding stair, which came to nothing on my side, my feet slipped, and I found myself in a sitting position at the feet of the singer in the large reception hall. H. A. C.

Never So Astonished.

I was busy one day when there came a rap at the door. Hastily I dried my hands, and went to answer, only to find my wee daughter with a basket on her arm, playing she was the vegetable man. I instructed her that mother was busy and that she must come to the back door, and went back to my work.

Presently there was another rap at the front door—daughter again. I assured her that I would punish her if it happened again. I had just got started on my task when there came a loud knocking at the front door.

"Go away from that door," I called.

The knocking continued. I jerked the door open, saying, "I am going to paddle you."

A stranger smiled at me and said, "I'm rather large—don't know whether you can do it or not." L. G.

When She Looked Up.

Perhaps some of you have become expert strap hangers. I did, while attending university, as I had an hour's ride twice a day, and employed the time profitably in study. I became so skilled I could maintain my balance without the aid of a strap and read, too, undisturbed by noises about me.

One Sunday I went to church. I was elated to find there the nicest girl I knew. However, she was oblivious to my presence, and remained so until the trouble. The minister announced a hymn and said that while we were singing the collection would be taken up.

I got my contribution ready, and then launched into song, thinking most of the time, however, of my charming neighbor. Eventually the usher made known his presence by shoving a basket before me. Mechanically, I dropped in my bit and demanded, in a firm tone, "Transfer, please." A. M.

Incriminating.

Every time my wife and I go out she gives me her box of face powder and puff to put in my pocket, as she has no pocket in her coat.

When we came home after our stroll one day I forgot to return them.

The next day while going to work I pulled out my handkerchief and with it came the box of face powder and puff. The powder spilled on the floor in the car. You can imagine how embarrassed I was. W. P.

How Miss Jackson secured a better position—

I met her coming home one night on the car.

"What makes you so happy, Mary?" I asked. "Why, you seem like an altogether different girl."

Mary smiled. "I really believe that I am. For once in my life I am gloriously happy with my work.

"One year ago I was just one of a dozen girls in the office. I did one thing one day and another the next. I didn't seem to be getting anywhere. I was drifting.

"Then one day I got interested in a book on filing. It was a revelation. I had never realized before that filing is such an important part of business.

"I wanted to learn more about it, so I wrote to Miss Anna M. Lavender, the principal of the Illinois School of Filing.

"Two or three days before I finished the course, Miss Anna M. Lavender came to me and said she already had a position for me. It is a real position, too."

Mary stopped a minute to arrange her new and very becoming hat. Then she asked me if I had ever read the book called "Finding a profession instead of a job."

I said I had not.

Mary wrote the address of the Illinois School of Filing on a piece of paper and handed it to me.

"Write for it today," she said earnestly, "and see if it doesn't appeal to you. Or, if you get a chance, drop in to see Miss Anna M. Lavender personally at 116 So. Michigan Ave. She will be glad to tell you about the work and its opportunities."

Home study course also given. Write for details.

Vermont's finest maples contribute to this syrup

IS IT ANY wonder that in Mayflower Syrup the maple flavor is incomparably rich? In Vermont, Nature produces the finest Maple sap, and Mayflower Syrup is made right in the heart of the Vermont maple district. The fullest flavored product from the surrounding maple groves goes into it.

You probably know, too, that the quality of the syrup depends as much upon the care with which it is prepared as upon the excellence of the maple. It is a great advantage, therefore, to be able to employ men who all their lives have studied the art of maple sugar making.

These men are keen maple critics. Only a sufficient quantity of refined granulated sugar is added to round out the flavor of Mayflower Syrup and give it a more syrupy consistency. The rich maple flavor is guarded carefully.

Until you try Mayflower Syrup you have no idea of the thrill it adds to a breakfast to have a real Vermont maple-flavored syrup on your pancakes. Buy a can or a bottle today. It is put up by pints, quarts, etc., because a pint gives you a considerably greater quantity than a pound. A pint, of course, is one-eighth of a gallon, while a pound is only one-eleventh. To be sure of getting full measure, buy Mayflower.

Once you have tasted Mayflower Syrup you'll be glad to know that it's also sold in half-gallon, gallon and five gallon cans, hermetically sealed, so that the full maple flavor will be retained. Your grocer has it—or can get it for you.

PERHAPS you have thought it no longer possible to procure pure maple sap syrup, or maple sugar. It is rarely to be found, but if you ask for the Green Mountain Boy Brand you'll get the real old-fashioned kind — entirely the product of Vermont maples.

Soft maple sugar is also put up in cans under this name and a wonderful delicacy called Maple Sugar Cream, made exclusively by the Welch Bros. Maple Co. It is in the form of a smooth paste, with the "grain," which is characteristic of maple sugar, removed—perfect for fillings, icings and candy.

GOOD morning!

When I started out I had an idea I was going to name ten pictures, and call it a day. But as I went back over the files, so many creditable productions rose up and shook their fists at , I changed my mind and said:

"Well, I'll give you honorable mention, ANY-W, even if there ISN'T space to go into ecstasies r how good you were!" which is how come the g and imposing list at the head of the column.

FLORENCE REED, who did splendid work in "The Black Panther's Cub." [White Photo.]

Remember "THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB," m Swinburne's "Faustine"? Florence Reed was that. It wasn't such a pretty story, but Miss ed in three rôles kept your interest sipping every nute. It seemed impossible that she could be so ive, and so evil; so young and so old. She was nderful!

"MY BOY"—Jackie Coogan! Nuff sed!

"JANE EYRE" was the screen adaptation of e novel, and clung tenaciously to the spirit of the ry. The picture was beautifully staged and stumed, and the acting was good.

"FOREVER"—"Peter Ibbetson" with Wallace id and Elsie Ferguson enacting the leading rôles. n exquisite screen offering.

"FOOLISH WIVES" was horrible, but splendidly done. A study in evil.

"ORPHANS OF THE STORM" was Griffith's screen version of "The Two Orphans." It made a hit.

ILLIAN AND DOROTHY GISH as Henriette and Louise.

"TURN TO THE RIGHT," taken from the play, adjusted itself nicely to the demands of the screen. It was skillfully handled, offering moments that made you want to go to church and others that made you yearn for a green pasture where you could kick up your heels like a colt.

"THE RULING PASSION"—George Arliss. Nuff sed.

"A STAGE ROMANCE"—William Farnum in the sort of picture he needs. (From the play by Dumas.)

"THE SILENT CALL"—Strongheart, the wonder police dog, making some of our human actors look like the house after the party's over.

"THE BACHELOR DADDY" was a tender bit, displaying Thomas Meighan mothering five orphans. Grownups liked it as well as the kiddies.

"ONE CLEAR CALL" presented a moral, sugar coated, with Henry Walthall doing the same good work he did in ye olden days.

"GAS, OIL, AND WATER" revived the Charles Ray fans, who had grown

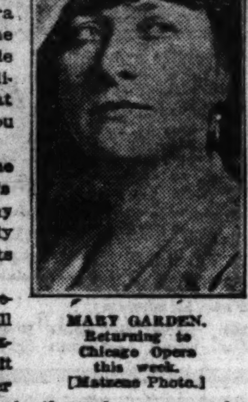
Some Chicago Opera Patrons Ask Pointed Questions on Repertoire

By Edward Moore.

QUITE a few letters addressed to this department have come in during the last week, nearly all bearing on one point—namely: the concentrated interest of the Chicago Opera upon Italian works, to the practical exclusion of all others. The proposed repetition of "The Girl of the Golden West" would seem to have aroused a widespread groan of dismay. Its announcement was taken down later, but not in time to prevent the dismay.



MARY GARDEN. Returning to Chicago Opera this week. [Matzene Photo.]

One letter says: "We subscribers did not put our money down to hear practically nothing but Italian opera and Italian artists." Another inquires: "Don't you think the management of the Civic Opera company might give us more enjoyable opera for next Saturday's matinée than 'The Girl of the Golden West'? The audience will be largely made up of ladies and young people just ending the holidays, and there is certainly some other opera that would be better suited for the occasion. Don't you think so?"

A third shows less patience. "Why does the Chicago Opera insist upon foisting this, the world's worst opera, upon subscribers, anyway? It was my misfortune to sit through this opera when its only performance so far this season (and may it be its last) was given, I being a Tuesday subscriber."

"The Girl of the Golden West" has been removed—let us be optimistic, and hope that it will not come back. An answer to the questions expressed and implied, why it was taken off, why it was put on in the first place, why a good many other things have and had not happened, can be made only through a more or less critical discussion of the company's policy. With malice toward none, with charity toward all, therefore let it be done.

Putting Theory Into Practice.

The Chicago Civic Opera company—one of my letters insinuates that the word "civic" was inserted into the title to avoid the war tax—was organized with the idea of cutting down expenses on the one side and giving the public what it wants on the other, at least of giving the public what the Chicago Civic Opera company thought it wanted. This was sound doctrine, unassailable from any point of view. The opera company probably will not pay its own way for some years to come; certainly the chances of showing a profit are remote in the extreme. But it ought to come as near paying its own way as is humanly possible, and the only way it can do this is to please and keep on pleasing the majority of its patrons.

SIGRID ONEGIN, Metropolitan contralto in recital here Friday.

In practice the theory worked out something in this manner:

This season's répertoire was put together as a result of careful scrutiny of what had happened to the Chicago Opera association, this company's predecessor. Operas that showed a healthy reaction at the box office and did not cost too much to mount were retained, unpopular and costly operas were rejected.

But considering operatic affairs on a strictly financial basis also has its elements of weakness. One finds the prevalent comment about the Auditorium to be "See what a fine box office statement we have," instead of "See what a fine performance we are giving to justify a fine box office statement."

One imagines that as this year's répertoire was based upon last year's prosperous evenings, next season's will depend on what has paid well this year. The only trouble is that operatic fashions change from year to year, and on that system the répertoire will diminish until nothing is left.

"The Girl of the Golden West" is a case in point. It may have been

Barrymore As Juliet Has Her Best Moments in the Balcony Scene

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—To confess the truth and get it over with—for it is not a pleasant truth to confess—Ethel Barrymore's first performance as Juliet was a little pathetic. We, for one, spent the evening lamenting the fact that, in a burst of enthusiasm, she had put aside her contemplated production of "As You Like It" (in which we are willing to wager she would have been a glorious Rosalind) to stage the love tragedy.

ETHEL BARRYMORE. She is playing Juliet for the first time in her career.

There have been many mature Juliets—gifted grandmothers, or actresses of an age to be grandmothers, who have still been able to appear impetuously youthful as the impassioned Capulet. But mostly they have been small women with a certain ingenuousness that has saved them. Miss Barrymore's Juliet is as beautiful as an expectant madonna and as subdued and earnest as a supplicating sister of charity. But she still is full of figure and knowing of countenance. This Romeo person could not, by any reasonable stretch of the imagination, have been her first and only love.

To our surprise, she was loveliest and most effective in the balcony scene. We had expected the potion scene, or the death scene in the tomb, would mark the peak of her performance. But in both of these scenes she was guarded and uncertain. Her will to take the potion and carry through the adventure with simulated death was more strongly indicated than the play of her imagination upon the possible consequences.

And in the death scene she was so subdued and undramatic, apparently because of a desire not to stress the tragedy artificially, that she missed entirely the opportunities the scene affords. Her balcony scene, on the other hand, though measurably unimpassioned, was sincerely and beautifully read, and with fine feeling. Her scenes with the nurse and with the friar were simply played, and with no attempt at the childishness so many Juliets employ, loving the comedy contrasts.

It was, to sum up its virtues, a Juliet of which Miss Barrymore has no reason ever to feel ashamed, though she doubtless had cause the day following to regret she had not played it a dozen years ago.

Morris Best in Duel Scene.

The Romeo of McKay Morris also suffers from the low and melancholy key in which the performance is pitched. His best scene is that of the duel with Benvolio, ended as a most exciting contest with the daggers, in true Italian fashion. He is of a figure and an age to match this Barrymore Juliet, and his reading commands a certain eloquence.

Basil Sydney is the Mercutio. His Montague adherent is an amiable fellow with a keen sense of Mercutio's wit, but low pitched in key and lacking fire. The first night audience approved of him most heartily. It is told of John Barrymore that he has always shied at the rôle of Romeo because he believed Mercutio to be much the better part.

The Robert Edmund Jones setting is somber, skillfully lighted, and excessively plain. Three set arches are stretched across the middle stage, and these serve, with the addition of an interchangeable wall for the middle arch, for exteriors and interiors and also for the streets of Verona and the shore front at Mantua. We are asked to accept a yellow silk curtain for both the wall before the Capulet garden and Friar Laurence's cell. Frankly, we are not quite that imaginative—but the arrangement serves.

Of the eight new plays that came to Broadway on Christmas night, five

Bennett Starts Lone Fight for Theatrical "Day Off"

By Sheppard Butler.

SINGLE-HANDED, but believing in the righteousness of his cause, Richard Bennett has determined to act upon his conviction that the people of the theater, like the rest of the working world, are entitled to a six-day week. He will give no performance of "He Who Gets Slapped" at the Playhouse tomorrow night. Nor will he play hereafter on Monday evenings while he is in Chicago.

MARILYN MILLER in the blithe and tuneful "Sally," due tomorrow at the Colonial. [White Photo.]

This he resolved to do on a recent day when a discussion of the matter prompted an editorial in THE TRIBUNE advocating a "day off" for actors. Since Sunday performances are the custom in Chicago, and are usually well attended, it was proposed that Monday or Tuesday performances might be omitted instead. Patronage, ordinarily, is not so good on these evenings, and closing a theater at such a time would involve a minimum of inconvenience to the public and monetary loss to the managers.

The idea, of course, was that an agreement might be reached among the playhouses generally. But Bennett went a step farther—a long step farther. "I'll start it," he said. "Perhaps some others will join me, but no matter. The only way to do a thing is to do it. I won't play Monday nights."

He told his managers, but they were dubious and declined to believe that he meant it. Other players approached on the subject were timorous. Clearly, it was to be a lone fight, but Bennett stuck to his guns. He would, he said, give an extra matinée on Friday, to balance the omission of the Monday performance, but he would not play seven nights a week. And so it has been arranged.

"I don't care how many matinées they give," he said, "but I claim the right to one night a week of relaxation. Even an actor is entitled to that. I don't know whether anything will come of this or not, but somebody must do something, if the idea is to be implanted in people's minds, and I may as well be the one."

Chicago Playhouses and the Seven-Day Week.

Many of the players are notoriously disinclined to come to Chicago, and not the least of the reasons is that they must appear continuously here, with no intervals of rest. New York has no regular Sunday performances, nor have many of the other large cities. So firmly is this custom established that actors newly in Chicago sometimes are mysteriously missing on Sunday nights, only to explain afterward that they hadn't the faintest idea their presence was required.

Now and then a star declines to play on Sundays in cities where Sunday performances are permitted, but such instances are rare. Playgoers like Sunday performances, and flock to them where they are given. Not only are the large audiences profitable to the managers; they are welcome also to the players. Applause is meat and drink to the folk behind the footlights, and the sympathetic thrill of a crowded house goes a long way toward lightening such burdens as they may have to bear. Few actors hope or want to have Sunday off in Chicago. Hence the Monday idea.

Bennett's acceptance of it is characteristic of him. He is one of the insurgents. Setting out to put his belief into practice without regard for what any one else may do seems a picturesque and valorous venture. That it is not

The New Plays

OPENING TONIGHT.

"Captain Applejack" [Harris].—A lusty comedy by Walter Hackett, former Chicagoan, dealing amusingly with pirates, hidden treasure, and divers abandoned villainies. Wallace Eddinger plays the hero of the tale and Miss Mary Nash is the adventuress. The remainder of the cast includes Phoebe Foster, Hamilton Revelle, Helehe Lackaye, Horace Pollock, and many others.

EDDIE CANTOR in "Make It Snappy."

"Make It Snappy" [Apollo].—The effervescent Eddie Cantor in a new and variegated pageant of song and dance. Among the assisting performers are Lillian Fitzgerald, Lew Hearn, Joe Opp, Helen Carrington, Muriel De Forest, and Tot Qualters. There is also a Cleveland Bronner ballet.

OPENING TOMOROW NIGHT.

"The Wheel of Life" [Blackstone].—Miss Elsie Ferguson in her new play—an importation from London, where it was known as "The Wheel." James Bernard Fagan is the author, and the scene is India. The cast includes Fisher White, Frederick Worlock, Eric Cowley, C. T. Davis, Irby Marshall, and George Thorpe.

"Sally" [Colonial].—Mr. Ziegfeld's long-awaited musical comedy, a recordbreaker for popularity wherever it has been shown. Miss Marilyn Miller and Leon Errol still have the leading roles, and others involved in the proceedings are Walter Catlett, Dolores, Irving Fisher, Geneva Mitchell, Frank Kingdon, Alfred James, and Phil Ryley.

"Zeno" [Great Northern].—A mystery melodrama dealing with spiritualism and written by Joseph F. Rinn, identified by his press agent as an eminent authority on psychical research. There is what sounds like a good cast, including Effie Shannon, George Nash, James Crane, George Probert, Ned Sparks, and Helen Gill.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The Torch Bearers" [Powers', Jan. 22.]—A satire, by George Kelly, on amateur actors and the "little theater" movement.

"The Dice of the Gods" [Cort, Jan. 29.]—Mrs. Fiske in a new play by Lillian Barrett.

"The Last Warning" [Blackstone, Feb. 5.]—A hair raising tale of murder and kindred excitements, by Thomas F. Fallon.

Vaudeville Wit

Garfield and Smith:

"I went into a restaurant last year and they served sugar in salary envelopes."

"Well, it will be some time before anybody begins serving salaries in sugar barrels."

"Did you notice all the new one dollar bills in circulation?"

"Yes, but they don't seem to accomplish much more than the old ones did."

"I hear you have an actor employed on your farm."

"Yes, and he's a mighty good actor, too. He's such a good actor that I thought he was really working the first week he was on the farm."

"My ancestors were people with brains."

"Too bad you were disinherited."

"What do you mean by telling Mabel that I'm a fool?"

"Well, I'm sorry—was it a secret?"

"Don't you admire the man who says the right thing at the right time?"

"Yes, particularly when I'm thirsty."

"Who was that neglected looking little boy with dirt all over his face?"

"He is the child of the noted astronomer who lives down the street."

"Well, he should go home and tell his father that he doesn't need his telescope if he wants to see spots on the son."

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Musicians Club of Women to Give Benefit Concert

By Kate Webber.

ONE of the most interesting of midwinter musical affairs will take place on the afternoon of Monday, Jan. 22, at 2:30 o'clock at the Blackstone theater, when the Musicians' Club of Women, formerly the Amateur Musical club of Chicago, will give an artists' recital for the benefit of its extension fund. Carol Robinson, pianist; Eva Gordon Horavesky, contralto, with Alma Birmingham at the piano, will give the program.

The advantage of the extension department, which has grown within a short time into one of the forces of the organization, is primarily that exceptionally gifted young artists are, through its aid, admitted to the club; young people who, without the help of the extension department, could not afford to become members. Thus material and talent which would otherwise be diverted to other organizations or lost altogether is made useful to the club and to the artists benefitted.

Also, by forming various combinations of instrument and voice in little troupes, which give concerts under the club's direction, members become acquainted and interested in one another's work.

The final good result is that many associate members have become attracted to the club by the work of the extension department, having seen the work that is done in institutions in which they are interested.

The report of the chairman, Mrs. Edna M. Trego, shows that during the last year more than thirty concerts were given to auditors numbering approximately 3,000, thus furnishing eighty-eight engagements to the young members, who receive remuneration for each evening's program. A percentage of members' dues, together with proceeds from concerts and donations, provides the fund wherewith these artists are paid.

At the Home for Incurables, where music, more than any other medium, helps to sustain the morale of the patients, monthly concerts have been given, also at the Industrial Home for the Blind. Some of these affairs are sponsored by families in memory of those who were former members of the club. Among the other places where the efforts of the Musicians' Club of Women have helped wonderfully are the Presbyterian and Drexel hospitals, the University of Chicago settlement, the central branch Y. W. C. A., the women's clubs at Fellowship house and Neighborhood house, the Bethlehem crèche, the Juvenile Detention home, and many community houses.

Much of the success of the concerts is due to the understanding and sympathetic spirit of the artists, who give of their best and whose enthusiasm is reflected in the appreciation shown and the pleasure it gives the hearers.

A paragraph from Mrs. Trego's report stresses the tremendous good being done by women's clubs, whose members go into various settlements, organizing and sponsoring the clubs and classes, and with which it is a pleasure to meet. "One realizes," she says, "that within the sphere of these influences anarchy and bolshevism cannot flourish." This appreciation of the extension work of many women's organizations is a gratifying statement for women who work constantly to bring understanding and light to the many who need it.

Miss Mary Peck Thomson is president of the Musicians Club of Women; Mrs. Louis Edwin Burr and Mrs. Hyde W. Perce, vice presidents; Mrs. Keturah Bears Holmes, secretary; Miss Margaret McArthur, assistant secretary; Miss Kate P. Richards, treasurer.

MRS. THOMAS P. CASEY.

The quadrennial convention of the Woman's Benefit Association for the State of Illinois will hold its sessions at the Palmer house tomorrow, with delegates in attendance from every local organization in the state. Mrs. Minnie Keppinger, great commander of Illinois, will be the presiding officer. The convention, in addition to its regular duties, will elect delegates to represent Illinois at the international convention to be held at Los Angeles and San Francisco in May and June, when the association's thirtieth anniversary will be celebrated. During this time the Woman's Benefit association has attained a membership of 300,000 extending into every state of the Union and the provinces of Canada and including 20,000 junior members.

The First district, Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, of which Mrs. Thomas P. Casey is president, will hold an open meeting tomorrow at the Hotel La Salle, with the Chicago Culture club as hostess. The morning session will be devoted to reports and to a brief talk by Wesley H. Westbrook. Following luncheon there will be a musical program, in addition to speeches by Mrs. Edward S. Bailey and Mrs. Thomas Starr Harper.

MRS. EDNA M. TREGO.
[Melvin Sykes photo.]

Mrs. Edna M. Trego is chairman of the extension department of the Musicians' Club of Women, which will give a concert on Jan. 22 at the Blackstone theater. Other members of Mrs. Trego's committee are Mrs. George B. Carpenter, Mrs. Joseph N. Eisendrath, Mrs. Keturah B. Holmes, and Mrs. C. A. Whyland.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The opening meeting of the Sunday "open door" will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the parlors of the Chicago Woman's club. Miss Marjorie Winslow and Miss Helen Hamilton will give the program. At the business meeting on Wednesday at 2 o'clock in Recital hall the following reports will be given: Finance, membership, legislation, building, treasurer's semi-annual report, council of social agencies, Woman's Trades Union league, women in industry, and revisions. The luncheon study class of the education and philosophy department will meet tomorrow at 12 o'clock; subject, "Fundamental Presuppositions of the Medieval Mind." At 2:30 tomorrow Dr. Ferdinand Schevill will address the afternoon lecture class on "Greek and Medieval Contributions to Modern Social Attitudes." At 1 o'clock tomorrow the French class will meet at luncheon, with Mme. Maria Claessens as the guest. At 2 o'clock a program will be given by M. Joseph Quillien. Tuesday the board of managers will meet at 10 o'clock. On Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the literary study class will meet in Recital hall to hear Miss Grace E. Cody speak on aspects of prose style. At the same hour Wednesday the home and public welfare department will hold a business meeting in the northeast parlor. At 11:15 o'clock Robert Hieronymous will address the meeting on "Some Aspects of Community Life." On Thursday at 11 o'clock the class in public speaking will meet. On Saturday at 11 o'clock the January meeting of the American speech committee will be held in the northeast parlor. Gerald McDowell will speak on "The English of Our United States"; Miss Lucy Silke on "The Future Poster in Propaganda," and delegates will give one minute reports on "How Our Club or School Celebrated Better American Speech Week."

The board of directors and chairmen of committees of the Woman's City club will meet tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. There also will be a meeting at 11 o'clock of the Recreation committee. NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

One at a Time Is Best Way to Spend Holidays

By Mme. X.

THERE is one thing for which we may be truly thankful for the next few years; there will be no more two or three day holidays. When Christmas and New Year's come on either Saturday, Sunday, or Monday it means a prolonged period of junketing and merry making, which usually leaves its devotees exhausted and panting. As the Fourth of July fell on a Tuesday last summer it enabled many to take a four day outing. This added to the responsibilities of the housekeeper, on whom the chief burden of these extended celebrations falls heaviest. Next Christmas and New Year's fall on Tuesdays, Fourth of July and Memorial day on Wednesday and Washington's birthday on Thursday, so there will be simply the one day jollification which will not find the cupboard stripped of food and ice before the feast is over, nor will it tax the resources of the homemaker as has been the case for the last three years.

It is not that this column dislikes holidays; it is simply that an excess of them undoes the good of each one by a let up from routine. Too much freedom from work and too much junketing are as bad for the soul as too much rich food and too much idling are bad for the body. The fatigue of labor is a much more endurable condition than the fatigue of pleasure. So here's to a well occupied and fruitful 1923!

Within the Reach of All.

My well meant diatribe last Sunday on the subject of manners as a timely consideration for the coming year met with much commendation from the older element in the community, but, strange to say, up to now no one of the younger set has thanked me for giving him or her the secret of success in life, nor greeted my remarks with enthusiasm.

If the youths and maidens of today only knew what an advantage to their future careers, in whatever walk of life they may find themselves, it would be to be armed with unfailing, spontaneous good manners, they would first thank me for giving them the secret of success and then go to work to acquire this equipment. It would be a far more profitable investment than wealth or any of the other things that are within the reach of everybody. It is not, however, a substitute for ability, but married to ability the two are bound to carry their possessor to the top by a quicker, smoother road than would either alone.

Try it, O, young man on the threshold of life and young woman with your way to make!

Talk of the Opera.

Have you been going to the opera lately? If so, you must have noticed the increasing size of the audiences and their growing enthusiasm. The visits of Mme. Galli-Curci, the world's greatest coloratura soprano, and Feodore Chaliapin, the greatest living operatic artist, contributed considerably to this access of vogue.

We are not yet sufficiently musical to care for opera per se, as do the Italians, French, and Germans. They like stars, but do not insist on them as an indispensable adjunct to their operas. We Americans do, and we pay far more attention to the singer of renown than to the composition and its interpretation by conductor, chorus, and other factors in opera production.

I am afraid this comes from the fact that we are not innately an artistic or really music loving nation. We are too apt to judge things and people by their money value. An opera artist who receives many thousands of dollars a performance must, according to our way of thinking, be a desirable person to see and hear. Well, we shall in the course of time become better educated and, perhaps, even get a measure of culture, though a good education does not at all imply the latter.

There has been some comment on the fact that we have had no French operas this season. The management explains this as being due to the exorbitant charges made by the French owners of rights to modern operatic compositions. It would cost, they say, 2,000 each performance just to pay the publishers for the privilege of presenting these operas. This is, of course, prohibitive, and as long as these prices continue so long will French pieces be absent from our stage.

It would seem to be worth the consideration of the French government to take measures to make it possible to have these examples of Gallic culture put within the reach of a public they are so anxious to reach. It is the culture of France that we admire and wish to preserve, not their political ideas nor their point of view as to the relative position of France and the rest of the world.

MRS. STANLEY JACKSON.
[Lewis-Smith studio.]

MRS. HAROLD EUGENE MARKS.

Three brides of the new year were Mrs. Stanley Jackson, Mrs. Sterling Skillman Sanford, and Mrs. Harold Eugene Marks. The wedding of Miss Caroline Willits, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ward W. Willits of Highland Park, to Stanley Jackson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur S. Jackson of 70 Scott street, took place on New Year's day at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon at Trinity church, Highland Park, the Rev. Peter Wolcott officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Jackson sailed yesterday for a two months' trip abroad.

The marriage of Miss Gertrude Blanette Sollitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Sollitt of 3995 Ellis avenue, to Harold Eugene Marks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Marks of Los Angeles, took place on Monday evening at the residence of the bride's parents. The Rev. William C. Covert officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Marks will be at home after Feb. 10 at 2301 Hollyridge avenue, Hollywood, Cal.

The Civic Opera company on Friday, Jan. 19, is giving a gala performances at which its 2,200 guarantors and the 700 members of the Friends of Opera will be its guests. A "beau geste" on the part of the departing company!

We Blush with Pleasure.

It is an interesting fact that our opera company is not going to New York this winter, but to Boston. A musical minded Bostonian (and in Boston is still to be found our best brand of American culture), Mr. Sohier Welch, came here last week to arrange for a visit from our Civic Opera company. At the close of their season here, if present arrangements are carried out, our artists will go east with the scenery necessary to produce our best operas. This is quite an innovation. Mr. Welch is also negotiating to have our symphony orchestra visit Boston.

Besides being a lover of music, Mr. Welch is a member of one of the old families of that shrine of old families. He has two cousins here, Mrs. William P. Martin and Mrs. Allen Haines. They gave a reception for him the afternoon of New Year's day and that evening he was host at a gay dinner dance at the Drake.

There are few things that give more balm to a Chicago heart than to have a dyed in the wool Bostonian look with favor on our young, vigorous, still ungainly city. Though we talk "big," we are still diffident and uncertain of the impression we produce on those from older, riper civilizations; therefore, we blush with pleasure at the praise and approbation of so typical a Bostonian as the amiable and agreeable Mr. Welch.

Twice Told Tales.

Apropos of matters social as well as musical, the family mansion at 675 Rush street, so long the headquarters of the Chicago Medicis, is being furnished up and set in order for the coming of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick, who, if they kept their schedule, sailed for New York last Thursday. They are, however, expected to stay here only about a week, their principal stopping place while in this country being New York.

Naturally the arrival of such a conspicuous couple is the theme of much conversation among people who know them and among the still larger circle that has no personal acquaintance with them. The heart affairs of the fiery Capulets and Montagues, the romances of the unhappy Riminis, Paolo and Francesca, have become embodied in poetry and drama, but when they were taking place it is safe to say they were just as much the talk of the town as those famous affairs of today that provide so much material for the daily papers.

MRS. STERLING SKILLMAN SANFORD.
[Koehne photo.]

Miss Marcelline Hemingway, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Hemingway of 600 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park, became the bride of Sterling Skillman Sanford of Detroit, Mich., on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock at the First Congregational church of Oak Park, the Rev. William E. Barton reading the service. Mr. and Mrs. Sanford will live in Detroit.

The people of Verona and Rimini probably asked each other, "What are you going to do about them? Are you going to take sides? Do you think we ought to ask them to the church sociable? O me! O my! What a terrible affair it all is!"

We read about these long ago romances and tragedies with dispassionate interest. Just so those who come after us will consider their successors of today—that is, they will if they remember them at all. That is a good thought to cherish; the impermanence of these so passionately considered contemporary matters.

So perhaps some poet of the future or some playwright may take the "Causes célèbres" of the present generation in Chicago, the domestic tragedies which have filled the newspapers of continents and hemispheres for many months, and weave out of them great epics or famous dramas. Only, I hope, the poet will not be an Edgar Lee Masters, nor the playwright a Zoë Atkins. It would take a Shakespeare or a Dante to give the majesty of irresistible fate to our twice told tales and to lift them from the sordid, clinging draperies of gossip and tattle.

Thinning of the Ranks.

Already society is discussing the inevitable scattering of the clans which begins in January and by February thins the ranks to a noticeable degree. There is always a group of Chicagoans who betake themselves to southern California for the late winter and early spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson are soon going to their lovely Spanish château on the heights overlooking sea and mountains in the lovely Montecito valley. El Cerrito, they call it, meaning "Little Hill."

On the summit of this same hill—the Ryerson place nestles on the southern slope of it—is the Italian villa of the two brothers, David and Thomas Jones, to which they, with Miss Gwethalyn Jones, betake themselves likewise late this month. From this terrace on the tip of the steep little mountain one can see off in every direction, the purple mountain range of Santa Teresa to the north and east, the flowery settlements on the slopes of this stern barrier stretching down to the glittering Pacific, whose mile long billows break on the vast crescent of the shore line, the group of distant islands looking like visions in a dream.

Other Chicagoans who are habitués of Santa Barbara are Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Carr, who have made it a practice for many years to spend two or three months there. The Robert G. McGanns, who have one of the most attractive places in the Montecito valley, are not opening it this year, however. Their daughter, Miss Grace McGann, an only child, is attending Foxcroft, the well known school in Virginia, and her parents do not like to put so many miles between them and their offspring.

East, West, North, and South.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell have for many years made their spring residence at Pasadena, and in this are influenced by the fact that their married daughter, Mrs. Robert Hunter, lives there with her husband and children. The Mitchell place is set in a typical and delightful California garden and has a fine view of surrounding mountains.

Not all the world, however, is going to California. In a few weeks Mrs. C. M. Ely is sailing for Bermuda, where she has already spent two seasons. She will return to Chicago in time to go to her summer home in the northern confines of Lake Forest, where she occupies two enchanting cottages on either side of an imposing gateway. These were always intended merely as a temporary residence until such time as building conditions would make it possible to erect the main house set well within the confines of the place. This she hopes to do next summer. Others going to Bermuda are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, who will leave here Feb. 14 for a stay of several weeks in those wind swept isles in midocean, where the simple life can be enjoyed in surroundings both healthful and delightful. This sounds like an ad, but is merely toying with the English language.

Mrs. Coleman is always one of the most active and energetic of Chicago's social leaders, but this year has been more so than usual. She is one of the most hospitable of hostesses and always gives a series of delightful dinners and Sunday luncheons at her home in Rush street.

Roving in Fancy.

That neighborhood is the Grammercy park of Chicago, the—we can't call them old, but we can term them elderly—elderly houses there having a character all their own, a quality that no modern houses seem able to acquire. No period rooms, no Louis Quinze or empire furnishings can touch in charm the interiors of those elderly houses. The architects of half a century ago had an unconscious sense of proportion and dealt with their problems in a simple, unpretentious way that has bequeathed to this generation homes with more comfort and real charm than any that the highly educated and sophisticated architects of this age produce.

This is not inaended as a "slam" at the extremely gifted men who are today doing so much to embellish Chicago with houses, apartment buildings, and other forms of habitations. They build to suit the times, as did their predecessors. But the people the latter built for occasionally spent evenings at home reading books, and for them the designer produced cozy sitting rooms and habitable libraries, not for show but for constant service with delicious easy chairs, easily accessible lights, large open fireplaces, furniture not too new or good for use, soft rugs and carpets not too choice for youthful and active feet.

But I am roving in fancy to a bygone day. The houses in Chicago's Grammercy park are much more elegant and luxurious than they were in the days gone by, and yet keep the air of dignity and ripe culture imparted by the passing, the marriages, births, and deaths of several generations.

Sailing for France.

To return to the roving members of the social world, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney are sailing for France a little later in the month. They will take with them their second daughter, Mrs. Henry Stimson Jr. of Rye, N. Y., who will spend two months with them in southern France. Mr. and Mrs. Day McBirney are sailing in the other direction even before their relatives go abroad, as they will depart for China and Japan in a fortnight. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick will soon betake themselves and their three sons to Florida, where at Miami they will join Mrs. McCormick's parents, the Charles Deerings, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Danielson, her sister and brother-in-law.

The R. T. Cranes Jr. are going with their children to their winter home at Jekyl island later this month. By February there will be many vacant places in the social ranks, but, as I have before remarked in this column, Chicago society seems to stagger along pretty comfortably no matter who or how many of its supposed leaders abandon it to its own devices, though it misses them when they go, and welcomes them back with demonstrative affection.

Encouraging the Drama.

Social life here is not all given up to opera, balls, bridge, and raising money for charities. There are many groups of people who are interested in developing various of the new ideas in the world. Those who study and encourage the drama have for many years, both here and in Europe, experimented in making a place for that phase of this ancient and important art which makes its appeal chiefly to the high caste Brahmins, those who like subtle plays produced for a few enlightened souls in congenial surroundings.

There have been little theaters started in most of the principal capitals on this and the other side of the Atlantic. In Chicago the movement took shape nearly a generation ago, when the then Mrs. Harold McCormick, Arthur Aldis, Arthur Bissell, and others founded what its promoters called the Playhouse in Van Buren street. It is still a playhouse and is known as the Central theater. Allan Pollock is giving interesting répertorie pieces there now.

Crystal Herne was its principal star in this original company and Donald Robertson its impresario. Its life was not long, though its aim was high. Perhaps the cynic will see in this cause and effect. It was followed in time by such well known ventures as the Little theater in the Fine Arts building (with Maurice Browne and his wife at the helm), the Aldis players at Lake Forest, the many excellent productions of the members of the Arts club, and last year the North Shore players arrived on the scene.

From the beginning Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Aldis have been enthusiastic advocates and supporters of the underlying idea, which is that there is an audience for plays that are literature and of merit in themselves and not mere vehicles for actors and actresses. And they were more or less in one these various ventures in some capacity. Mrs. Aldis has been in turn both an actress, a trainer of others, and a writer of plays.

In still further pursuit of this idea she has written a play called "The Will of the People," which is to be produced at the Studebaker theater on Jan. 22 and which will be played by professionals and well known Chicago amateurs. Among the latter are Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. Laird Bell, Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Mrs. Richard Barnitz, Mrs. John Root, Miss Frances Taft, Gerald Frank, Chauncey Blair, Ralph Clarkson, Stuart Bailey, Barrie Byrne, and Walter Frazier. Reginald Carrington, a member of the cast of "So This Is London," is directing the training of the amateur troupe. Miss Alice Gerstenberg, Mrs. Richard Barnitz, and Charles McNear are officers of the Playwrights' Theater organization. The project sounds interesting and ambitious. Let's see what comes of it.

Arts Club Reception.

Drama, literature, music, art—Chicago's "beau monde" is interested in all of these accompaniments to higher civilization. On next Wednesday the Arts club will give a reception at its rooms, 610 South Michigan avenue, to open an exhibit of more than usual interest, a collection of paintings by Miss Martha Walters, which she calls the "Ellis Island Group." It is a series of studies of types to be found there.

She is considered by many to be the first American woman artist of the day. She is certainly a striking personality if her canvases express her. This exhibit has been shown in Paris and London, but up to now nowhere in America, which is quite a feather in the Arts club's cap. It will go later to New York.

Mrs. Walter Brewster, who is at the head of the reception committee, will have assisting her that afternoon Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mrs. J. N. Eisendrath, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. Marguerite Kreutzberg, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, and Mrs. Helga Dean. The reception hours are from 3 to 6.

Mrs. John A. Carpenter and Miss Alice Roullier, who direct the artistic course of the Arts club, deserve much credit for their work in this direction, as they steadfastly keep their standard high and aim to make the club a forum for all that is modern and new.

All Is Gloom.

There is one thing that those who leave Chicago this winter will miss; one thing that we produce here in larger, thicker quantities than ever before, one thing that is an abiding presence, and that is smoke. We breathe it; we are lined with it; we are soaked in it, and everything we touch is tainted with it as never before. The quality of the unconsumed carbon now pouring from thousands of chimneys is of a vileness not to be described.

The city smoke department seems to have gone into a heavy stupor. From my lofty window whence I get a wide view of roof tops I can count over a hundred smoke stacks at a time emitting thick, viscous, black vomit, which spreads out and slowly descends to cover us, our clothes, our belongings, our souls, as well as our miserable bodies.

I can imagine St. Peter's recognizing the disembodied who knock at his door this winter from Chicago and saying, "I'm sorry, old chap, but it wouldn't do to let you go in there. They'd think you'd come from—well, you know a mere "press-agent stunt" is sufficiently indicated by the fact that his managers are not with him. He proposes, if necessary, to go it alone.

Bennett Starts Lone Battle for Actors' Holiday

He does things like that. Few who have seen, in recent days, his fine impersonation of the clown in "He Who Gets Slapped" know that he has been "acting from the hospital." A painful and virulent infection of the knee sent him there, and there he is still, except when the time for a performance arrives. Then he is driven to the theater with a nurse, who watches him while he plays and whisks him back to the hospital when his work is done. He missed a few performances, but not many, and he is now on the road to recovery.

$2.50 Per—An Outrage!

The announcement of the management of the Illinois theater and of the Elsie Janis-Montgomery and Stone show that $2.50 would be charged for every seat on the first floor of the theater during the engagement of the attraction is the cause of much conversation and speculation among persons engaged in the theatrical business.

If the plan is carried through, it will mark Chicago's introduction to London prices at the playhouses—"Orchestra stalls, 10 shillings." It is a schedule to which few theatrical managers have been able to reconcile Broadway But if the town does not resent this increase in the high cost of being amused, the new schedule will almost surely be adopted by other managers.

Therefore the result of the experiment at the Illinois will be observed with keen interest. The attitude generally is, "Can they get away with it?" . . . The deferred resentment of a public that at last grows weary of extortion. . . extraordinary prices.

. . . .

No, you are not dreaming. The above lines were written by my neighbor, Mr. James O'Donnell Bennett, and published on Aug. 24, 1913. Verily, the world do move. What did you pay for your seats on New Year's eve?

Gossip of Plays and Players.

Mrs. Fiske is newly appointed to occupy the Cort when "Thank-U" departs. She will arrive on Jan. 29, bringing the play by Lillian Barrett to which she has been giving trial performances among the one-night stands for several weeks. This was known first as "Paddy," and then as "The Last Card." Now the title has again been changed, this time to "The Dice of the Gods."

Miss Jane Cowl, they say, is having only fair luck at the box offices during her preliminary tour in "Romeo and Juliet." And what the critics said in New York about Miss Ethel Barrymore's Juliet! Mr. Mantle, elsewhere in this section, is measurably kind, but some of the other reviewers were not. "In almost every respect," said one, "she [Miss Barrymore] was temperamentally, physically, and artistically unsuited to a character in the bloom of virginal springtime. There was not one flash of spontaneity, one note of true passion, one gleam of poetic inspiration or fire." Somebody seems to have blundered.

Al Jolson departed last night, taking with him an unbelievable number of dollars as the proceeds of his Chicago visit. His sponsors think, but are not sure, that he established a new local record for profits during his stay at the Apollo.

"Shuffle Along," the lively all-colored show at the Olympic, will visit few if any other American cities after leaving Chicago. Various bookings in the middle west have been canceled, and the company will embark in the spring for its London venture, perhaps immediately after the Chicago engagement.

"Diana Comes to Town," with which Mr. Woods is reëntering the musical field, is listed as a possible Chicago arrival in the near future.

IN "ZENO"

MISS EFFIE SHANNON.
[White photo.]

This skillful player heads the cast which brings to the Great Northern the new mystery play oddly named "Zeno." Miss Shannon was last seen in Chicago in Owen Davis' good but sadly neglected drama, "The Detour."

A second company is rehearsing Channing Pollock's "The Fool," now current in New York, and will take the play to Boston. Whether or not a third company will be organized for Chicago is said to depend on the success of the Boston venture.

Much concern is being expressed among the theatrical wiseacres over the fact that "The First Year" is not doing as well in Chicago as was expected. This is, indeed, strange, for it is a "sure fire" play if there ever was one. It ran in New York for a year and seven months; here, after nine weeks, they are beginning to worry about it. On the other hand, "Thank-U," which had only 300 performances in New York, has been here for twenty weeks and is to remain three weeks longer.

The Drama League of America has designated the seven days beginning Jan. 21 as "national drama week." Arrangements are being made to launch a "go to the theater week" in the commercial playhouses and to direct the attention of clubs, schools, churches, and libraries in a variety of programs to the subject of the drama. Among the sponsors of the movement are Winthrop Ames, George Arliss, David Belasco, John Drew, Arthur Hopkins, Charles Rann Kennedy, Henry Miller, Eugene O'Neill, Augustus Thomas, and Francis Wilson.

Mme. Nazimova's return to the stage will take place next week in Buffalo. "Dagmar" is the play, Ferencz Herczog the author, and Louis K. Anspacher the adaptor. Charles Bryant, Mme. Nazimova's husband and manager, will be her leading man.

Louis Mann has joined George Sidney as his co-star in Aaron Hoffman's frequently recast comedy, "Give and Take." Augustin Duncan tried the part Mann is to have, but gave it up. Miss Vivian Tobin has the leading feminine rôle.

Edward Knoblock has written a play about Edgar Allan Poe. "The Divine Spark" is its title, and it is to be produced presently with Lowell Sherman, advanced to stardom, in the rôle of the poet. Sherman, an actor of fine resource, was last seen here as the picturesque Stranger in "The Tavern."

Joseph Schildkraut is leaving "Liliom," but the play is not to end its career. Its tour, which seems prosperous, will be continued with one Charles Ellis in the title rôle. California will see it soon.

Tony Sarg's delightful Marionettes will come to the Playhouse on the afternoon of Jan. 22, 23 and 25. "Don Quixote," a new production, and "Rip Van Winkle" are the plays to be given.

A new entertainment, "Fables of 1923," will continue the cycle of revues at the Marigold tomorrow night. Dainty Marie, Josephine Taylor, Danny Sheehan, Beth Berrie, and Frank Libuse are the chief performers.

Ethel Barrymore as Juliet Is Best in Balcony Scene

proved unusually good and none of them disappointing. Which is something of a record.

The Equity players, financed and sponsored by members of the Equity Actors' association, swung into their true stride as an organization representing the beginnings of a national theater with the production of an American "Divorçons"—a witty divorce comedy called "Why Not?" It was written by Jesse Lynch Williams, who some seasons back won the Pulitzer prize with his "Why Marry?" voted the best American play of its season. We are glad of this, being keenly hopeful for the future of this enterprise.

"Why Not?" somewhat fantastically, but with a lot of shrewd native sanity, presents the problem of two couples who meet after each has been comfortably, if not happily, married for fifteen years.

One couple, Leonard, a poet, and Mary, his too practical wife, have taken positions as butler and maid in a country house, in order that their 12 year old daughter may have the advantage of the country air.

To their surprise and chagrin they find themselves working for William and Evadne, who were respectively their youthful sweethearts. Leonard had not married Evadne because she was rich. William had lost Mary because they quarreled over woman's suffrage.

All four admit frankly that they have made a mistake, and it occurs to them that there is a perfectly reasonable way of correcting it. Let the women divorce their husbands, and marry their truer mates.

This is accomplished to an accompaniment of a brilliantly written discussion of existing divorce laws. After which the husbands find it difficult to live without their respective offspring. Leonard wants his little daughter and Bill simply can't get any joy out of life without his growing son.

Clandestinely the fathers scheme meetings with the children, and the children enter heartily into the conspiracy. Yet both husbands and wives admit they are happier than before, and none has any desire to go back to the old arrangement.

The solution brings all four parents to an agreement to live together in the same house. "Why not?"

The play is perfectly cast, with Jane Grey, Tom Powers, Margaret Mower, and Warburton Gamble playing the parents.

Margaret Lawrence Scores Again.

"Secrets," which is another of the new plays, is a sentimental melodrama affording Margaret Lawrence a chance to give further proof that she is one of the outstanding actresses of this generation. It is one of those "Milestones" affairs, covering successive generations.

Miss Lawrence is first a devoted wife of 80, refusing to be sent away from her husband's sick bed just because her practical children insist she is more of a hindrance than a help to him. He is "her man," says she. She never has failed him and she never will.

The episode following flashes back to the early romance of the couple, when they eloped from England to Wyoming because her father would not let her marry a "mere clerk" in his employ.

The second episode carries them through an exciting pistol fight in defense of their cabin home in Wyoming, the devoted wife skilfully potting a ruthless avenger who is about to shoot her husband.

The third episode advances the couple to the middle years when the husband is politically a power in England and given to philandering. Here the conflict is between the talebearers who would separate the two. The husband confesses that he has not always been as good a man as he should have been, and the wife admits that, though she has known his "secrets" all along, her love has successfully stood the strain.

ADVENTURESS

MISS MARY NASH.
[White photo.]

She comes to the Harris tonight to act a dark and bodeful adventuress in Walter Hackett's comedy of "Captain Applejack." Wallace Eddinger, as the hero, foils her in the end, but he has quite a time of it.

The epilogue shows the little old lady still dozing before the fire. She had dreamed the episodes of the middle acts. And now word comes that the sick man has rallied. The doctors think it may have been the loyal wife's faith that has brought him through. The two parts are beautifully played by Miss Lawrence and Tom Nesbitt, the English actor you may remember in "Mary Rose."

Musical Plays Pleasing.

We also have two excellent musical plays. One is "The Clinging Vine," with Peggy Wood the heroine. She is a business girl in Omaha when we meet her, nervous, efficient, and practical. She comes east on a business trip and is induced by her grandmother to try the experiment of becoming a "clinging vine" (men are so suspicious of smart women) in order to win herself masculine attention during her visit, and, it may be, a husband and a home.

So Peggy simpers prettily. She tells the men they are so "perfectly wonderful" she just can't resist them. Incidentally she beats them handily in a business deal and earns so much money for her sweetheart, who is poor, that he feels justified in proposing. A pleasant, sane little story, brightly written by Zelda Sears and fitted with some attractive tunes by Harold Levey, a promising protégé of Victor Herbert's.

Heroine a Cinderella.

The other is "Glory," a companion piece to "Irene." Both these plays were written by James Montgomery, and "Glory" is quite as good as "Irene," if somewhat less novel in setting. The heroine is a small town Cinderella, wooed by an upstanding city millionaire, and the comedy a good grade of small town hokum. Patti Harrold, daughter of Orville Harrold, the tenor, and one of the numerous "Irenes," does nicely with the prima donna's rôle.

We also have Fay Bainter in "The Lady Cristilinda" (christened "The Painted Lady"), and Leo Ditrichstein in "The Egotist" (called in Chicago, "Under False Pretenses"). But more of these another time.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE DAILY THRILL.

I know a thrill that cannot fail,
It comes to me with every mail
Escorting little new-born hopes
That flirt with me through envelopes
And titillate my spinal string
With ecstasy and everything.

I greet the mail with quivers gay
And wonder in my childish way
Are all these script and typed addresses
The carapaces of caresses?
Or are they epitaphs on tombs
Enfolding dire and dolorous dooms?

And then with nervous hands I pry
And with a darting, eager eye
I rummage through this argosy
Of daily mail addressed to me
To find as always ardor chilled,
Unfounded fears, hopes unfulfilled.

Advertisements, pleas for cash,
Circulars of pep and pash,
Bills, receipts, and queer requests
From all the standard brands of pests.
To know a thrill that could not fail
A man should never open mail.

ANNOUNCE BEGINNING TOMORROW

THE ANNUAL SALE OF THEIR REGULAR STOCK

At Reductions Ranging From 10% to 50%

Their is a certain nicety of detail—a certain definiteness of quality, correctness and good taste that one instinctively associates with Jaeger.

Jaeger topcoats, hose, sweaters, etc. exist because they are the finest expressions of modern wool craftsmanship.

At the regular price the things procurable at Jaeger's set the standard for quality as well as value—at these reduced prices our Annual Event is lifted far above the level of commonplace "sales."

This unusual sale comes but once a year, offering to those who appreciate the better things a singular opportunity to effect worth-while savings.

The sale is of our entire regular stock without reserve and without exception—for but two weeks—hence an early selection is suggested.

For Men — Women — Children

Opera Patrons Question Choice of Repertoire

that the Chicago Civic Opera company had convictions as to the artistic values of this piece, but last season's box office statement was favorable. The tiger of finance was much more to be feared than the lady of art, so they opened what they supposed was the right door—and then found, to their pained dismay, that the lady and the tiger had changed places. As the company operates on a narrow margin of safety, it was supposed that "The Girl" would have to go back into the list of the week just closed, since there was nothing to take its place. But "La Juive" became popular on its justly famous "Chicago premiere," another justly famous "Chicago premiere" of "La Forza del Destino" could therefore be deferred, and with a sigh of relief "The Girl" was taken off, not the least forceful section of the sigh emanating from the audience.

Due to Ravinia.

Another letter, not in protest, but in comment, enriches the incoming mail. It comes from one who classifies as both a daily reader of THE TRIBUNE through the ages and an inveterate among the city's opera goers, and he desires to say something about not fewer than three of the season's great woman singers of the Chicago Opera. Because what he says is right and because the beginning of the season's ninth week is as good a time as any, the editor collaborates with him in getting the points into print.

The trio of singers is made up of Claudio Muzio, Edith Mason, and Ina Bourskaya, each of whom has been the subject of high praise in this newspaper in the last eight weeks. That none of the three was a stranger to this public when she joined the forces in the Auditorium is one of my correspondent's just points. All three have been eminent singers in the Ravinia opera, wherewith they effected their respective bows in this mid-region.

Miss Muzio, who has had four rôles since joining the Chicago Opera, sang twelve at least in the summer of 1918 in Ravinia, where Mr. Eckstein coaxed her into the French répertoire. Manon and Marguerite were among her French rôles, and her Italian répertoire there included all the parts she has so far had in the Auditorium.

Miss Mason's list at Ravinia was at least as long as Muzio's, and included Mimi, one of the lovely soprano's rôles of this season in Congress street.

Miss Bourskaya's Ravinia debut is too recent a memory to call for rehearsing now. Mr. Eckstein took her for the north shore while the plaudits of her Russian compatriots in the Olympic theater were still ringing in her pitch true ears.

Neither of the great winter time opera houses, the Auditorium and the Metropolitan, is unaware of what Ravinia and its growing répertoire has done for some of the best singers of the day. June and Ravinia are a long way in the future, but our correspondent is in season, and is hereby thanked.

Return of Garden.

Mary Garden's return and Amelita Galli-Curci's departure will overlap this week. Miss Garden will reappear as Fiora in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" on Wednesday night, a rôle which she sang here earlier in the season, and in which Giulio Crimi, Georges Baklanoff, and Virgilio Lazzari will surround her; also as Tosca in Puccini's opera of the same name on Friday night, another rôle of hers of former seasons, with Crimi and Cesare Formichi.

Mme. Galli-Curci is up for three more appearances: "Rigoletto" this afternoon with Tito Schipa and Formichi; "Manon" Tuesday night with Schipa and Edouard Cotreuil, and "La Traviata" on Saturday afternoon with Schipa and Giacomo Rimini. "Lakme" and "Romeo and Juliet," both of which were vaguely predicted in the beginning of the season, will not be given at all.

Two new performances for the week are announced. "Martha," which has been an important performance at Ravinia, but has not been sung at the Auditorium for quite a number of years, is due on Thursday night. Edith Mason, Ina Bourskaya, Schipa, and Rimini will constitute the singers of the quartet, and Richard Hageman, who made the opera important at Ravinia, will conduct.

The one attempt of the Chicago company at a new American opera will take place Saturday night. It is "The Snow Bird," by Theodore Stearns. Mary McCormic, Charles Marshall, Edouard Cotreuil, Milo Luka, and José Mojica will sing it, and Giorgio Polacco will conduct. There was talk several weeks ago about a ballet in the course of the work, but none is announced on the advance notices. Miss McCormic and Mr. Marshall will not end their duties here, but will appear later in the evening in "Pagliacci," with Formichi and Oliviero as other singers and Pietro Cimini as conductor.

Outlook for the Week.

With the passing of the holidays, concerts become more numerous and more interesting. In one day, the present one, there is news of a song recital by Elena Gerhardt, mezzo-soprano and lieder singer extraordinary; another by Leone Kruse, dramatic soprano; a piano recital by Alfred Cortot; a chamber music program by the Flonzaley quartet, and an all-American program by the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra. On Tuesday morning there will be a joint recital by Anne Roselle, soprano of the Metropolitan and last summer of the Ravinia companies, and Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, who make more and better music with two pianos than has been known in this generation.

On Friday afternoon and Saturday night Maria Ivogun, coloratura soprano, will sing with the Chicago Symphony orchestra such numbers as Mozart's "L'Amero saro costante," Handel's "Sweet Bird," and the "Bell Song" from Delibes' "Lakme," while Mr. Stock and the orchestra play Brahms' Third Symphony, Schenck's "In a Withered Garden," and Strauss' "Don Juan." On Friday night Sigrid Onegin, a contralto who would seem to be one of the best bets of the present Metropolitan season, will give a song recital. These, in connection with the opera, make something of an outlook for the week.

Manuscripts in Judgment.

When Balaban & Katz closed their contest for the best American symphonic composition at midnight on the last day of 1922, it was found that eighty-nine manuscripts had been entered. As the competition was carried on with scrupulous care to keep the identity of all contestants secret, no composers' names can be known until after the $1,000 award has been made, but postmarks on the covers of the manuscripts indicate that twenty-nine states of the union are represented.

Preliminary examination of the manuscripts is now being made by Nathaniel Finston, conductor of the Chicago Theater Symphony orchestra, and Adolf Weidig. Final judgment will be made by Mr. Finston, Mr. Weidig, Felix Borowski, Richard Hageman, the associate musical director of the Chicago Opera, and the music critics of the Chicago daily newspapers.

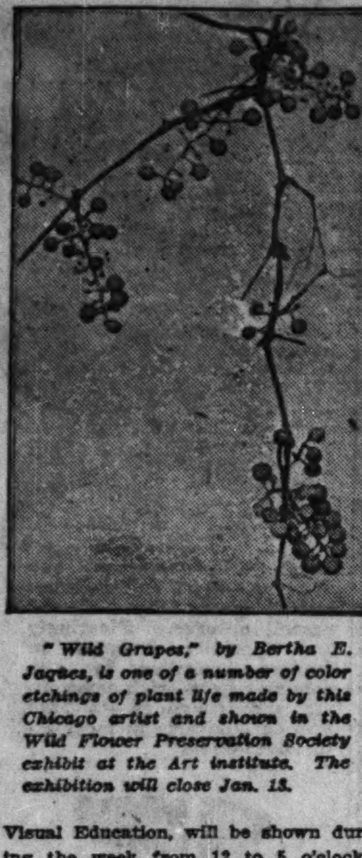
ART AND ARTISTS

Lithographs and Etchings on View at Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.



"Wild Grapes," by Bertha E. Jaques, is one of a number of color etchings of plant life made by this Chicago artist and shown in the Wild Flower Preservation Society exhibit at the Art institute. The exhibition will close Jan. 13.

ANOTHER interesting group of prints, that of French lithographs by the artists Daumie and Gavarni, is scheduled to en age the attention of visitors to th rint room of the Art institute, begin ing today. The prints are unusua nd command admiration as well as in rest. The French nation, if any, un rstands the subtleties of line work nd the force of black and white, gra nd brown, to a completeness of per ection.

In addition to the lithographs ther hung also, perhaps in a mood of con ast, a group of etchings by the pain Forain, whose exhibit in the Arts ub gallery, at the end of the east ing on the second floor of the museum, holds the place of honor with e sculpture by Bourdelle in the move ent to introduce modern foreign art sts to the conservative atmosphere of e institute.

Both lithographs and etchings will re ain on view until the first of Febru y.

The wild flower exhibition in Gun ulus hall draws each day crowds of tentive visitors. Children are not in e minority. The lessons taught in is pleasant way will bear fruit in the onths to come, if the remarks that ac mpany the showing of the various ctures and slides are any criterion of e states of mind wrought in the spec tors. The feature of the moving pic re is proving a wonderful addition to e more tranquil exhibits of drawing d photograph.

Another week of fascinating talks s been outlined by the society.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock in the hibition rooms Orpheus M. Schantz the Audubon society will talk on the rds of this region. Edward F. Hulz rg will imitate the bird calls.

Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in llerton hall Dr. Henry C. Cowles of e University of Chicago and national esident of the Wild Flower Preserva on society will speak on "Forests and rest Policies in Illinois."

Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in llerton hall Dr. V. A. Latham of the inois Microscopical society will lec re on "Plant Life and Other Re urces of the Microscope."

Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in llerton hall William Beebe, the au or of "Jungle Peace" and "The dge of the Jungle," will tell of some his experiences in his South Amer an laboratory.

The motion films of plant and animal e, contributed by the Society for Visual Education, will be shown during the week from 12 to 5 o'clock, daily. The lectures are all illustrated with either still life or motion pictures.

As this is the concluding week of the exhibit, special stress should be laid upon the importance of it for the perpetuation of our countrysides. Flowers, grass, trees, shrubs, birds, and butterflies, as well as those insects that crawl and the fish that swim our streams and lakes in the company of the hard backed tribes of snail and turtle, need protection, not exploitation. They need verbal, not physical, admiration. Stop, look—but do not touch—if you would save the charm of country life to future generations.

Classes in interior decorating, in the museum instruction department of the Art institute, have proved so popular that a new class has been formed. It starts tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The same hour of meeting will be continued throughout the term.

An increase in the collection of objects of art in the decorative arts department of the institute has been made possible by the gift of $25,000 to this department by Mrs. Emily C. Chadbourne of Chicago. Only the income from this fund will be used to purchase works of art.

Mrs. Chadbourne has also given the museum forty-five works of art, among which is the original plaster bust by Jean Baptiste Carpeaux called "La Chinoise." This is a portion of the figure of "Asia," which is one of a group of four, representing Europe, Africa, Asia, and America, making up part of the "Fountain of the Observatory" in the Luxembourg gardens in Paris.

A schedule of dates for the lectures to be given under the auspices of the Association of Arts and Industries, has been announced. The lectures will be held in the clubroom of the Art institute at 4 o'clock for four successive Sundays, beginning today.

This afternoon Charles S. Peterson will speak on "Printing"; Jan. 14, "Furniture," by Lionel Robertson, is the topic; Jan. 21, Elizabeth Wells Robertson will talk on "Artcraft Needlework"; Paul Chalfin will lecture on "Interior Decoration" Jan. 28.

These lectures are free to all those interested.

Word has come from a Chicago artist, Will Hollingsworth, that he has taken a studio in Paris where he will be hard at work until spring. The autumn salon showed one portrait and four water colors from his brush, the result of a summer of painting spent in England.

Frederic M. Grant writes that he expects to spend two years or so painting in southern Italy. He is settled for the winter in Rome, but Capri claimed his devotion during the fall months.

The Art institute alumni sketch class was resumed yesterday afternoon at 1 o'clock in the institute.

The Chicago Artists' exhibition will open the first of next month at the institute.

An interesting book, "Art in Industry," by Charles E. Richards, has just found its way to our desk. It is the report of an industrial art survey conducted under the auspices of the National Society of Vocational Education and the department of education of New York state.

Under the auspices of the American Art association there is soon to be held a sale of the art treasures of the late famous tenor, Caruso. First, Lillian Russell comes under the hammer, and then the grand opera star. Such is the irony of death. The collection formed by Caruso is an extensive one and covers a wide field. There are many Limoges enamels and Renaissance bronzes, a group of antique glass dating from 2000 B. C. to the fifth century A. D., much rare pottery, and an important collection of rare American coins. A number of elaborate costumes worn by the singer is also included.

Mrs. Caruso plans to donate her share of the proceeds from the sale of the tenor's theatrical effects to the "Caruso Foundation" fund.

RARE FRENCH AND ITALIAN ART AND REAL LACES AT GRANT'S ART GALLERIES.

Pietro Cattadori, the well known connoisseur of Venice, Italy, has consigned to Grant's Art Galleries, 32 and 34 So. Wabash avenue, to be sold at public auction, his important collection of antique Italian and French Furniture and Works of Art; Flemish and Aubusson Tapestries, Brocades, Velvets, Damasks, Embroideries, Ecclesiastical Robes, Needlework covering, etc.

To this collection has been added from his lace factory on the Grand Canal, Venice, Italy, a choice collection of Real Laces and Table Linens, including table linens, luncheon sets, bedspreads, tea cloths, centerpieces, banquet cloths, etc.; also Burano laces from the school of H. M. Queen Margherita of Italy.

This collection is undoubtedly the finest which has ever been offered the Chicago public under the auctioneer's hammer, and it is a rare opportunity for Chicagoans to secure works of art at their own price.

Sales days are from Jan. 8 to Jan. 13, inclusive, at 2 in the afternoon.—Adv.

RADIO

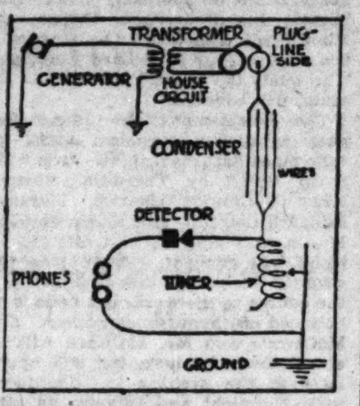
LIGHT SOCKET AERIALS.

THERE are several devices on the market for converting an ordinary electric light socket into a radio aerial. All of them are essentially condensers, and use that portion of the line for the reception of ether waves that happen to be high above the ground.

Some people say these aerials work well; others as stoutly assert they do not work at all. If the line circuit in the house is long, reception will be good. If the house is small and the line short, reception will certainly be poor. Socket aerials are mainly good for apartment houses, where the lines are long and outside wires are forbidden.

You can make an indoor aerial of this type, if you wish. Select four strands of covered wire, each about three feet in length. Tie each pair together, and see that both pairs are insulated. Let one side go to the line side of the light wire and the other to the radio set. Lay out the four in parallel, and bind them together with tape.

You now have a condenser in your aerial circuit. No current from the line flows if you have done the job right, and such an aerial is safe to use.



Plan of a light socket aerial.

Avail yourself of the privilege of a "charge account" with LOFTIS. You'll find it a great convenience.

where. Do go and clean up a little!"

And the poor wight from Chicago would have to say, "I've washed as hard as I can. This is what won't come off."

Miss Tunnicliffe, what are you doing to lessen this curse? Where is your committee, and how is it functioning?

PAIN GONE! RUB SORE, RHEUMATIC ACHING JOINTS

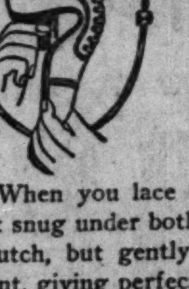
Stop "dosing" rheumatism.

It's pain only. St. Jacobs Oil will stop any pain, and not one rheumatism case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating St. Jacobs Oil right on the tender spot, and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain and distress. St. Jacobs Oil is a harmless rheumatism liniment which never disappoints, and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache and neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a small trial bottle of old-time, honest St. Jacobs Oil from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

St. Jacob Oil Co., New York City

What a Difference Cantilever Shoes Make



EVERYONE should enjoy the supreme comfort that Cantilever Shoes give. These modern fashionable shoes fit like a soft glove. The stiff shanks of ordinary shoes will not comform to the undercurve of your foot, or flex with your arch in walking. Cantilevers do both.

When you lace Cantilevers, the flexible shanks fit right snug under both arches and support them, not like a crutch, but gently and completely, without any restraint, giving perfect circulation and freedom.

Stop wearing tight shoes that weaken the muscles and ligaments of your feet. Be fitted to a pair tomorrow and keep your feet young and your spirits buoyant.

FUTURE EVENTS

Though credit for the support of musical affairs in a community is given usually to women and women's clubs, among the most enthusiastic supporters of the series of concerts by the Flonzaley quartet is a group of men including Charles H. Hamill, William H. Rehm, Horace S. Oakley, Max Adler, Homer H. Cooper, Samuel Dauchy, Herbert Delafield, Parke E. Simmons, John J. Glessner, Frederick T. Haskell, Edwin L. Lobdell, B. E. Page, Arthur Bissell, Victor Yarros, H. N. Wade, and Charles Yeomans. The second concert of the series will be given this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Blackstone theater.

The scholarship and free lecture fund of the Woman's National Farm and Garden association will receive the proceeds from the sale of boxes and main floor seats for a recital to be given this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Orchestra hall by Alfred Cortot, pianist.

Assisting at a tea to be given this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Cordon by Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Pebbles, Miss Ellen Bosler, and Richard A. Bosler will be Mrs. Clarence Hough, Mrs. Alfred L. Benson, Mrs. John W. Leslie, Mrs. Edgar Lee Masters, Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter, Miss Mary Bartelme, and Miss Florence Brigham.

Mrs. E. S. Adams and Miss Julie R. Adams will begin their winter series of talks on current events this week. Tomorrow the first talk will be given at the Parkway hotel at 10:20 o'clock; Tuesday Mrs. William G. Hibbard will open her house for the Winnetka class at 10:45 o'clock; Wednesday the talks at Evanston will start at the North Shore hotel at 10:30 o'clock, and Thursday there will be a meeting of the south side class at the residence of Mrs. Frank H. Connor, 5645 Woodlawn avenue. The general subject for the week will be "International Conferences."

Tomorrow the French salon of the Chicago Woman's club will have as a guest Mme. Maria Claessens of the Chicago Civic Opera company. Dr. Cyrille Vermeren will talk on Belgium and Miss Olga Menn will sing a group of French songs.

Miss Grace Dixon of 70 Scott street will give a tea tomorrow from 4 to 6 o'clock for Mrs. Fletcher Goodwill of New York.

The fifth and last of the Kinsolving musical evenings for this season will be given on Tuesday at 11 o'clock at the Blackstone, the artists being Guy Maier and Lee Pattison, pianists, and Anne Roselle, soprano of the Metropolitan, Scotti, and Ravinia opera companies. Among those who will have guests are Mrs. Mason Bross, Mrs. Louis Eckstein, Mrs. Sangston Hettler, Mrs. Perkins Bass, Mrs. Charles E. Dox, and Mrs. Albert E. Leight.

Mrs. Julius Rosenwald will be hostess to the members of the Chicago Jewish committee for Palestinian welfare at her residence, 4901 Ellis avenue, on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Rosenwald will give an informal talk, and Mrs. Albert Stein will give personal impressions of Palestine. There will be a musical program also.

Mrs. Borden, Mrs. McKinlock, Mrs. Palmer, and Mrs. Swift also will have box parties the next night at the benefit performance of "Sally" at the Colonial theater for the Association of Housekeeping Centers. Others who have boxes are Alfred L. Baker, Stanley Barrows, Benjamin L. Behr, Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy, Richard Fitzgerald, Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. John J. Mitchell Jr., Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson, Montefiori Stein, Charles Sift, and Mrs. Charles H. Morse.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman S. Florsheim of 5490 South Shore drive will give a reception next Sunday afternoon for their niece, Miss Marie Louise Johnson, whose engagement to Louis Kaufman of Cincinnati was announced recently.

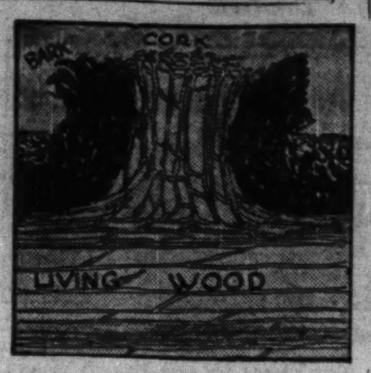
Through the MICROSCOPE

Breathing piles in wood.

THEY BREATHE IN WINTER.



HOW do plants breathe when their leaves are shed? They must have air, you know, for life goes on, even at temperatures below freezing. Plants that lose their leaves at the approach of winter have an ingenious device to secure air. Look at the stems of a smooth sumac or a cherry tree and you will see how it is done. Living wood lies directly beneath the bark. The large corky cells of the bark, which are secreted by the wood, prevent all ingress and egress of water. But here and there the green tissue sends up columns of lenticel cells through the bark. These open into the air and form osmotic pipes whereby the protoplasm below can always get a breath of air.

At many points along the twigs you will notice elongated spongy strips, the lenticels. On young twigs these lenticels are round, but on older stems they are much drawn out, and lie at right angles to the axis of the cylinder. In the microscope their structure and function become apparent.

Best Pictures of 1922 from the Fans' Viewpoint

Dear Mae: "The Prisoner of Zenda" was the best 1922 contribution of the cinema, n'est-ce pas? Mais oui! And most of us are thankful for one director who has confidence that our intelligence will stand a little realism now and then. The continual line of fairy tale endings gives me mental indigestion, especially when such an ending is tacked on a classic.

"The Eternal Flame" might have been a wonderful picture, but of course they had to improve on Balzac and incidentally ruin the lady's character.

I liked "Blood and Sand," "When Knighthood Was in Flower," "Under Two Flags," "Rags to Riches," "Oliver Twist," and "The Count of Monte Cristo"—which you can't see until they get ready to send it to Chicago unless you happen to be in New York in the meantime.

Anyway, we have the best critic. Guess we can be exclusive, too.

Yours, faithfully, MAI B. No. 2.

Dear Miss Tinée: I wish to add my bit to your list of the best pictures for the last year. The one which gave me most pleasure in every way I can safely say was "Tol'able David." A perfect gem, don't you think? One could find no fault with it in any respect. MRS. A.

Dear Miss Tinée: Of all the pictures I saw during the last year, "Robin Hood," "The Storm," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The Crossroads of New York," "Pay Day," "Nanook of the North," "Ebb Tide," and "Brawn of the North" pleased me more than any others. "Ebb Tide" could hardly be called a masterpiece; but it was pleasing to me because it was a fine sea picture, and because of the excellent work done by the leading members of the cast. Miss Logan is, in my humble opinion, the fastest coming player in pictures; and if she does not soon achieve stardom, I shall be sadly disappointed. Sincerely, JAY DEE CEE.

Dear Miss Tinée: Of the innumerable pictures I saw in 1922 those that impressed me most were: "The Great Moment," "One Clear Call," and "Skin Deep." The casts and direction were well balanced for the stories these pictures unfolded. Many fans will agree with me that the work of Milton Sills in these three pictures was superlative.

W. R. S.

Dear Mae: The best picture that I saw was "Manslaughter." I think it the best picture I have ever seen with the exception of "The Miracle Man."

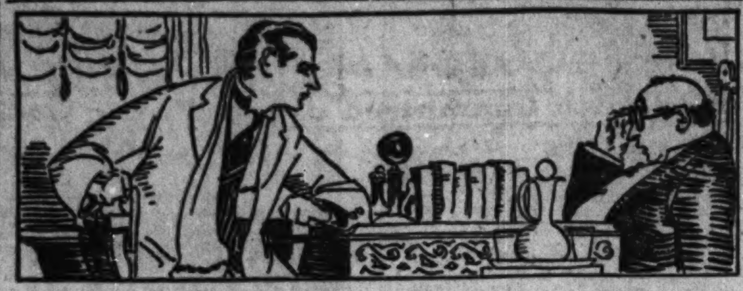
A STAR AT LARGE



Giltwater's face unmarred, but pocketbook battered.

INSTALLMENT XVI.

[Unless thoroughly appreciated every installment threatens to be the last.]

By Mae Tinée.

Mr. Giltwater had an appointment with James Gentry for 9 o'clock. He was at his office however at 8 with his glasses on, determined not to remove them if he had to charter the police department to help him remain immune from punishment. He didn't know whether or not his star desired physical combat as reprisal for the performances of the night before, but he suspected so.

For one hour he fidgeted. He looked out of the window. He jumped when a blind creaked. He tried to smoke, and found it made him nervous. He walked the floor and rehearsed imaginary dialogues in which he pacified an irate husband by offering large increases in salary.

Promptly at 9, James Gentry appeared. He was a little pale, but the periwinkle blue eyes were steady and unfathomable.

"Well, well, Gentry," blustered Giltwater, "fine time t' get me up. W—w—wh—can I do for you? How's Gladys?"

"I don't know how she is," replied the bridegroom. "I took her home and told her maid to take care of her. Then I went to the James' for a few hours' sleep."

"Fine, my boy! Y'r lookin' f—fine."

"Feeling fine," said Mr. Gentry, and relapsed into silence. Giltwater nervously took off his glasses to shine them — remembered — and replaced them in a panic.

James Gentry smiled gently.

"Nobody's going to hit you," he said.

"W—what's the big idea, then?" blustered the producer. "Sorry about last night. Stew party—'s'all. Forgive 'n' forget—eh?"

"Nope," said Mr. Gentry.

He leaned forward suddenly. Giltwater, with trembling hand, felt to see that his glasses were firmly anchored.

"After what I learned last night," said James Gentry, "you will see how impossible it is for me to continue with you in my present capacity. I should be given a comedy rôle."

Giltwater gasped.

"Y-y-you ain't no comedian."

"I beg your pardon, I am. However, I am not a screen comedian. I would be valueless to you as that. The big idea is this, Mr. Giltwater. You are about to send a company to England. They start in a week. I start today."

"B-but everything's all set for your next picture with Gladys. I got my cast picked for that English picture."

"Change your mind," said the terrible person with the periwinkle blue eyes. "Change your mind or I'll make it so hot for you you'll be crawling to darkest Africa to get away from the merry ha-has of the press."

"B-but Gladys?"

"Gladys is a lady who is perfectly able to look out for herself," said Mr. Gentry. "I would suggest a quiet annullment of the marriage while I'm away. You know how to fix that. All I want is to get out of this rotten mess. I may have been a fool—but I'm no boob. That's my answer."

Mr. Giltwater was a business man. He knew when he was beaten. He pressed a bell. Bosworth Brass appeared miraculously.

"Gentry's to play the lead in the English picture instead of Caldwell. See it's fixed. Get Gentry off today without any fuss. See Gladys and stuff a towel in her mouth until she calms down. S'long."

Brass disappeared. Gentry rose.

"Much obliged. I'll pack. Try to make a world beater of the English picture."

"Shake," said Giltwater with nervous cordiality.

"No thanks," replied Mr. Gentry. He smiled and bowed himself from the room.

Giltwater collapsed in his chair. He could have been arrested for what he was thinking.

THE KICK KORNER

Its Object—Objection.

Dear Miss Tinée: There being so many miracles performed lately, why not start a little column entitled, "Miracles in the Movies"?

For a starter, we will take "Sin Flood." You evidently noticed the stairway with the high sides, leading down to the barroom. As the flood came to such a height as to run into the transom of the basement door, how come that the water had all nicely disappeared in this sort of a hole-in-the-ground caused by the aforesaid stairs on one side, high walls on the other, and a watertight door, leading to the imprisoned persons in the basement saloon.

I am sure it could not have evaporated, and no sewer was visible. If there was one there, all the mud and grime left by the flood would have blocked it up, so it must have been a miracle.

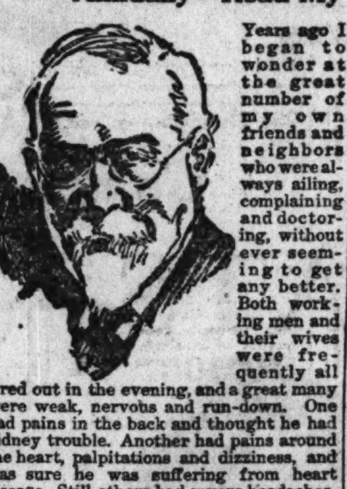
Will let you know when I see the next one pulled off. F. H.

Dear Miss Tinée: Please accept a few of my kicks. In "Rich Men's Wives" I wonder if you remember that crazy maid who was so cruel to the little hero? She was not only cruel but impossible.

Another one of my pet peeves is this idea of dressing up Americans and having them act as Chinese. It is only after one sees the wonderful Hayakawa, though he a Japanese, make one of his exact pictures, that one realizes an oriental is an oriental even on the stage. In C. Talmadge's "East is West" there was only one leading Chinese in the whole cast, and you could tell it. CHINCK.

You Can Now Try Nuxated Iron At My Expense

I First Compounded This Remarkable Remedy For My Own Neighbors And Their Praise Of It Has Spread So Rapidly That Now Over Four Million People Use It Annually—Read My Unusual Offer Below.



Years ago I began to wonder at the great number of my own friends and neighbors who were always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better. Both working men and their wives were frequently all tired out in the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous and run-down. One had pains in the back and thought he had kidney trouble. Another had pains around the heart, palpitations and dizziness, and was sure he was suffering from heart disease. Still others had severe headaches, floating spots before the eyes, tender spots along the spine and a great variety of alarming symptoms.

For years I made a special study of this condition, consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. An immense number of investigations by physicians all over the country showed that three people out of every four you meet lack [illegible] iron in their blood. Lack of iron in the blood is the greatest of all devitalizing weaknesses. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron, nothing you eat does you any good. Your heart, lungs and kidneys and all your vital organs get their nourishment from the blood stream, and when the blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery, you may suffer from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and true cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood.

In the old days people often took metallic iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In compounding this newer form of iron which I call Nuxated Iron, I employed a special form of iron, which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach, and it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. It is the people whose blood is rich in iron who possess great strength, force and energy. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test:

Cut out trial coupon and go to any druggist and get your first trial package of Nuxated Iron; then see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. An astonishing number of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, have greatly improved their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by taking this newer form of iron.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the outside wrapper to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions away go indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue. poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 15c and 30c.

"No other woman is half so lovely"

AT the beginning of Jack's and Sally's engagement, all their friends rejoiced, while the envious others wondered, "How long will it last?" For Jack was a man of rare magnetism, whom all women liked.

Tonight they had been married five years, and his every glance, his every thought, was for her alone.

Presently his eyes wandered over the soft flushed cheek, the delicate texture of the skin on nose and brow, the creamy softness of her throat. "No other woman is half so lovely," he thought. "She is so sweet and fresh and glowing. It's her complexion that is her greatest charm. And she belongs to me!"

Quite true, she was his; but then, too, you see, he still belonged to her.

"His every glance for her"

The way to make mere prettiness bloom into beauty

The Pompeian Instant Beauty Trio, consisting of Pompeian Day Cream, Beauty Powder, and Bloom, gives the magic touch that transforms mere prettiness into real beauty.

The Day Cream is truly a vanishing cream; being thoroughly absorbed by the skin, it does not reappear after application in the form of tiny beads. It softens, protects, and gives a perfect foundation for powder.

The Beauty Powder has, to an unusual degree, the property of adhering to the skin despite the perspiration attendant upon mild exercise, such as dancing. It makes frequent repowdering unnecessary and avoids awkward disappearances for that purpose, or the use of powder in public, always in questionable taste.

The Bloom is a rouge that will not break nor crumble, and is absolutely harmless to the skin, no matter how often used. In all needed shades.

Use these three Pompeian preparations—Day Cream, Beauty Powder and Bloom—together, for Instant Beauty. The effect is better if they are used in combination—not indiscriminately mixed with preparations of other brands—for great care has been taken that all Pompeian preparations blend perfectly, to give the most natural effect.

POMPEIAN DAY CREAM (vanishing)	60c per jar
POMPEIAN BEAUTY POWDER	60c per box
POMPEIAN BLOOM (the rouge)	60c per box
POMPEIAN NIGHT CREAM	50c per jar

Using Rouge Rightly

By MME. JEANNETTE

The correct use of rouge is not so generally understood as it should be. Rouge, like perfume, is something to be employed with restraint and moderation, lest it defeat its own ends.

If you apply rouge by artificial light when it is to be seen by daylight, at least take your hand mirror to an outside window and see that the rouge is not overapplied, before you go out. The stronger contrasts called for by artificial light are decidedly "stagey" when seen by daylight.

Judicious tinting of the skin with rouge delicately heightens the color and imparts sparkle to the eyes.

Blend the rouge outward with chamois or the tips of the fingers. This fine shading prevents the abrupt line which is often the only way that tinting can be detected. So applied, and well blended with powder, it produces a soft natural flush.

Pompeian Bloom is a rouge for gentlewomen. The medium shade, especially, is very popular with girls and young matrons of daintiness and refinement.

The lip stick, like rouge, must be used with discrimination. It should be applied to the inside of the lip and then worked out with the tip of the tongue to the natural lip-edge. Pompeian Lip Stick is harmless, prevents chapping, and gives a most realistic effect when correctly applied.

If your skin is of the oily type you should not use a greasy cream by day, confining your use of such preparation to retiring time.

In the daytime use Pompeian Day Cream, a vanishing cream, almost greaseless. This will serve to counteract the excess of oil in your skin and to prevent shine, giving a perfect foundation for powder.

The protective value of good, well-formulated day cream and a pure, impalpable face powder such as Pompeian Day Cream and Pompeian Beauty Powder can hardly be overestimated. They form an invisible film which foils the attacks of sun, wind, and dust, the three arch-enemies of complexion.

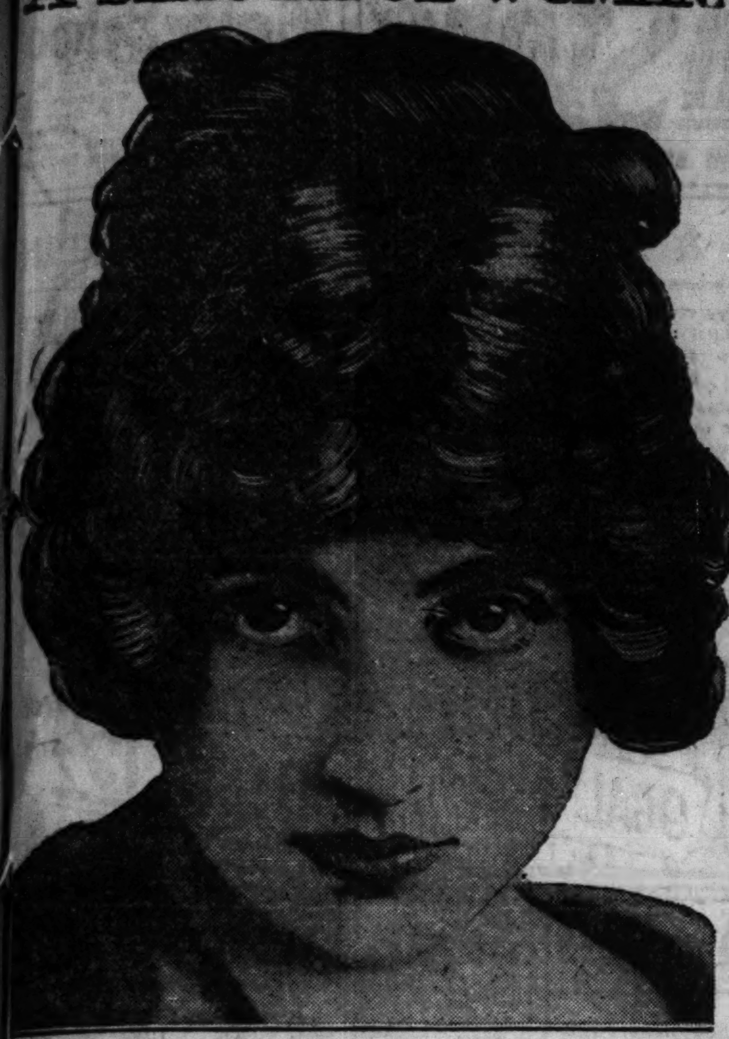
WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?



Nerais.

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

LIKE THE CHANGING WIND.

NERAIS has soft, blazing black eyes, raven tresses, and violent loves and hates. Nature was not moderate with her. She has both face and figure to make one look twice, then rub his eyes to make sure he is not seeing things. She is charming when she laughs; her white teeth gleam between her scarlet lips. But my, O, my, her temper!

The blood of old Arabia flows pure in Nerais. What matter if for 10,000 years her ancestors have lived in Spain or France or Italy or Ireland? Ten thousand years are as nothing in the evolution of womanhood.

Her skin is still olive white, her hands and feet are small and slim, her bones are daintily built like a bird's.

In mind Nerais is brilliant, rapid, and changeable. She is unknowable. Expect her to be constant and she will be fickle. Be gruff to her, put her away, and she will come back. Count that she will do something, then like the changeable wind she will do something else.

Nerais is Semitic. She is the highest and best of all things Semitic. Then let her not marry a blond man if she would value the future of her sons. The chances are overwhelmingly great that every boy from such a union would be mediocre. Boys get their weaknesses from their father, but their stamina from their mother. Nerais has no stamina to give a blond. Her boys would go through life the prey to every force greater than their wills.

CHARACTER FROM HANDS.

LEARN to read character by hands. These organs are habitually exposed and, next to faces, reveal character best. Faces show habitual thoughts. Your face has your mind written in it. The things you think about are there. Similarly, the things you do are written in your hands. If you are capable and industrious, your hands will reveal the fact. If you are lazy and sensual, be assured that no glove can long hide the tell tale marks.

There are three builds of hands, mental, motive, and vital; just as there are three body types, the man of brain, the man of brawn and the fat man.

The mental hand is narrow toward the wrist, and widest at the fingers, with large, round gripping finger tips. Physical driving force lies in the palm, while mental force is concentrated in the fingers. A mental hand belongs to a person who is accustomed to driving people, to analyzing thoughts, and to planning psychic actions.

The motive hand is square in the palm, with short, square tipped fingers. This is the mechanical hand, the hand of a doer, a hand in which a hammer or gun stock or control lever fits perfectly. Contrary to the usual belief, this is the hand of the successful artist. The reason is simple. To succeed in any art requires hard gruelling work and self denial. It is not enough to enjoy and appreciate to be an artist. It is necessary to work harder than most people care to, to achieve success. Michael Angelo and Leonardo da Vinci both had powerful square hands.

The vital type of hand has rounding palms and pointed fingers. If this hand is short and stumpy, it denotes an enjoyer and a forcer of others. If the palm and fingers are long, an aesthete is indicated, a person who has great power of appreciation but little or no driving power.

Hands are often of a mixed type. The thumb and first and second fingers denote the present surface psychic reactions, the annular and little finger the psychic foundation.

"And yet both are the same age"

Comb Sage Tea in Faded or Gray Hair

GRAY hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhance its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. Address Best Joke Editor The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

More than Thoughtful.

Mrs. Moneybags was telling the Ladies' Aid society of her experiences in settlement work in the tenements. "This one family was in the most pitiful circumstances—four children with scarcely enough to eat—the husband out of work, the poor mother taking in washing." The speaker sobbed and continued, "really, she seemed so refined I didn't dare to offer her anything, for I could tell her pride would be offended. I just couldn't sleep that night for thinking of that poor woman and those four poor, little children, so the next morning I got up and just sent her an anonymous check. H. P."

Handling with Care.

Mrs. Moore brought her little boy to school on opening day and said to the teacher: "Little Bennie is so delicate. If he is bad—and sometimes he is—just whip the boy next to him; that will frighten him and make him behave." C. B.

Turn About's Fair.

Teacher: "Johnny, do you know that when Warren G. Harding was your age he was studying algebra?"

Johnny: "I certainly do, and you ought to know that when Warren G. Harding was your age he was President of the United States." V. Z.

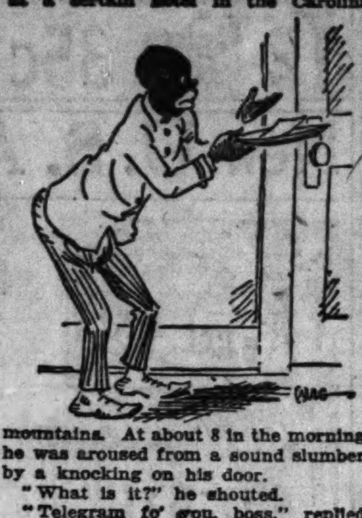
Ring of Finality.

"Here, boy," said the wealthy motorist, "I want some gasoline, and please get a move on. You will never get anywhere in the world unless you have a push. Push is essential. When I was young I pushed and that was what put me where I am."

"Well, guv'nor," said the boy, "I reckon you'll have to push again, 'cause we ain't got a drop of gas in the place." L. R. K.

There Was a Reason.

A New Yorker tells of his sojourn at a certain hotel in the Carolina mountains. At about 8 in the morning he was aroused from a sound slumber by a knocking on his door.



"What is it?" he shouted.

"Telegram fo' you, boss," replied the boy on the other side of the door. "Will you open the door?"

The New Yorker was angered by this. "I will not!" he yelled back. "Can't you slip it under the door?"

"No, boss," was the response; "it's on a tray." A. H.

Hard to Please.

Reggie [who has offended her]: Won't you look up at me?

Peggy: No, if I did you'd kiss me again.

Reggie: No, honest, I won't.

Peggie: Then what's the use? M. B.

Quite Right, Too.

Teacher—A biped is anything that goes on two feet. John, can you name one?

John—Yes, ma'am, a pair of stockings. J. M.

Photographing paths of flying atoms.

ELEMENTS TO YIELD THEIR SECRETS.

EXTRAORDINARY photographs of the smashup of atoms were displayed to chemists of the American Association for the Advancement of Science recently in session at Cambridge, Mass.

New calculations as to the size of different atoms were laid before the chemical section by Dr. Theodore W. Richards of Harvard. A new periodic table of elements was explained by Dr. W. D. Harkins of the University of Chicago. It arranges the atoms and subvarieties of atoms called isotopes. Strictly speaking, there are no longer a mere group of ninety-two elements, according to the old periodic table, but a total of several hundred. For practical purposes, however, the old list of ninety-two holds good, because the new atoms or isotopes have no characteristics of their own except minute differences in mass. For instance, lead is never found as a single element, but is a combination of different varieties of lead atoms, each having apparently the same physical and chemical natures, except for the slight difference in mass.

Photographs of two new types of atomic collisions were shown by Dr. Richards. These were taken by the Wilson and Shimizu methods of photographing an alpha particle, otherwise known as double charged helium nucleus, during its flight through damp air.

"I have not been able to explain this one," said Dr. Richards, showing a picture of the helium atom striking a hydrogen or nitrogen atom.

This showed a helium atom traveling in a straight line after sideswiping a hydrogen atom, while the hydrogen atom which had been hit went backwards instead of forwards. Instantly on being struck the atom had started to travel backwards in the direction from which the blow came. The atom which had delivered the blow in the meantime continued ahead on a straight course.

The atomic projectile makes a speed of 20,000 miles an hour and in other cases drove its targets in all directions except backwards. Sometimes, in the case of a head-on collision, the projectile itself rebounded, but its target was knocked forward.

This unusual affect occurred only once in 10,000 photographs of crashing atoms, and thousands more are to be taken, Dr. Harkins said, to see whether repetitions of the effect throw any further light on the behavior of an atom.

The other type of photograph which is not understood resembles a follow shot in billiards. The projectile, after striking another atom, proceeds in almost the same path. The target atom also moves forward in almost the same path. There were several photographs of this effect.

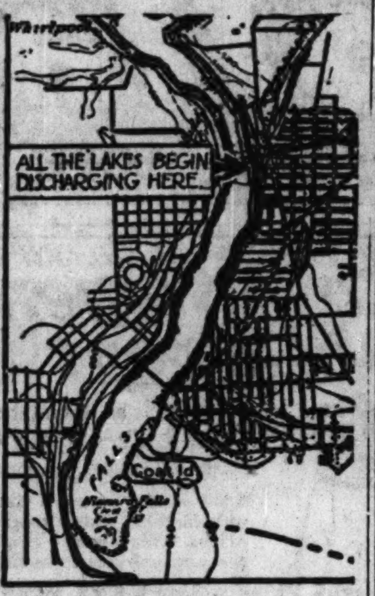
The atom itself is about a million times too small to be seen with the naked eye, but the high speed alpha particle or helium nucleus, which is used as a projectile, is able to produce effects which can be seen and photographed.

GEOLOGY

STORY OF NIAGARA.

GRADUALLY the glaciers that once covered our northern states drew back. Then depressions that they had dug were revealed. Five lakes appeared, scooped from the rocks beneath the ice. We call them the Great Lakes, Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie, and Ontario.

Ontario was the last lake to melt clear of ice. The lakes successively discharged down the Illinois river, the Wabash, the Mohawk, and the Ottawa before their final drainage into the St. Lawrence was established.



Gorge of Niagara.

The land north of the St. Lawrence is writhing. About 20,000 years ago the Ottawa river valley was so low that the lakes spilled over that way. The level of Huron was lowered about twenty-four feet. The present waterway split at Detroit, Huron, Superior, and Michigan flowed out the Ottawa valley, leaving only Erie to discharge down Niagara.

There is a sharp drop of land between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario. Layers of hard stone underlie it. The waters were not long in discovering this. They ripped the soil away and fell to work eating at the bedrock.

A waterfall travels uphill, leaving a deep gorge below. Look at some rivulet in a cinder pile, to see exactly how it is done. For 12,000 years Lake Erie toiled at the gorge and cut it back four miles. Then the geological cycle at the Ottawa river turned, the land heaved upward, and turned the upper lakes down into Erie again. Niagara falls foamed with fresh life and from being a second rate cataract it suddenly became one of the wonders of the world. It bit into the rocks with new vigor and tore out a larger, roomier gorge for itself.

What Most Stomachs Need

The Alkaline Effect of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Prevents or Relieves Acidity and Sour Risings.

To make our food palatable, savory and appetizing, the cook mixes in some onions or garlic, we eat fried sausage,

Why Wait Three Days for the Stomach to Recover Itself? Never Again So Long As You Can Get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

baked beans, cheese with pie, add ketchup and vinegar to some dishes and then complain of a sour, acid, gassy, belching stomach due to indigestion. Experience has shown that the recourse is not to banish all these good things to eat and fire the cook but to simply supply the acid stomach with an alkaline effect and then the stomach takes care of these so-called dyspepsia bringers. Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets today at any drug store, eat what you like even though you may fear indigestion. Chew one or two tablets and then rejoice that you found the very thing your stomach needed.

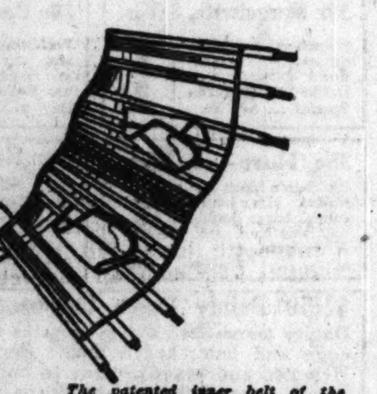
Cup the hands under the abdomen with the tips of the fingers touching groin seam and exert a gentle, upward and inward pressure. The relief you experience immediately is the same effect you will secure by wearing the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET.



The patented inner belt of the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET is attached to each side of the garment. It cups up and under the abdomen and creates an inward and upward lifting of the entire abdominal contents from the pelvic floor.

Make This Test for Perfect Corset Comfort

You can quickly demonstrate the comfort and relief given by wearing the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET by simply cupping the hands under the abdomen as shown above and exerting a gentle inward and upward lifting.

This test will convince you beyond a doubt whether or not you need the support of the KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET. Seven out of ten women suffer ailments caused by weakness of the abdominal walls and the settling or sagging out of place of the internal organs.

Your physician will tell you that 95% of women's ailments are directly or indirectly due to this condition. Constipation, headache, backache, kidney disorders, bearing-down pains, dizziness, stomach-trouble, fatigue are common complaints. The bowels and stomach drop and sag—generative organs become disarranged—hernia and obesity are often caused and so the entire health is impaired. The form loses its natural lines—style, poise, and erect, comfortable carriage of the body is impossible.

The KELLOGG UPLIFT CORSET abolishes tight lacing and affords unrestricted comfort every day of wear. It is not a cumbersome, heavy appliance, but a light-weight, stylish, comfortable corset, which scientifically supports the inner organs in a natural position, yet retains all the style advantages of the preferred type of corset of today.

With the patented non-elastic belt, the abdomen is gently but firmly raised and the organs lifted directly from the pelvic floor—replaced to their natural position with the consequent restoration of the health.

When laced the inner belt is hidden from view and cannot slip out of place nor interfere with the movements of the body and does not gouge when sitting.

Instead, it affords a delightful feeling of comfortable security, gives an upright, graceful carriage to the body, permits unrestrained, healthful breathing, and marked comfort and relief from the first minute of wear.

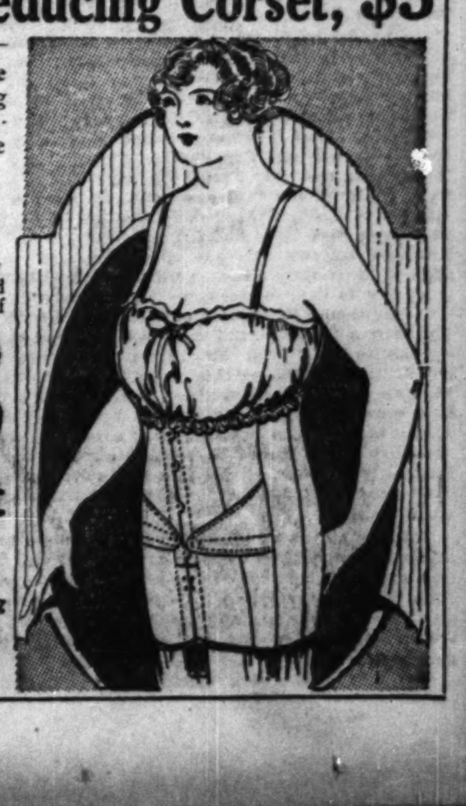
Greater By Far Than Any Corset Value in Years—New Nemo Self Reducing Corset, $3

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—



One-half hour after the store opened last Tuesday, the first day of the offering of the New Nemo Self Reducing Corset at $3.00, every fitting room was filled, every corsetiere busy, and so it has been every moment of the time since.

...mo Self Reducing Corset possesses every helpfulness, every reducing feature of the Nemo System and fits a great variety of styles of figures.

And so as our corsetieres work deftly, silently, they find they can fit properly, correctly, according to the latest hygienic and scientific methods, according to the strict interpretations of the "N. H. F. I." methods, most figures in this $3 model—an ideal model for the stout woman or for the woman who has not looked upon corsets favorably within the past few years, with the result of a waist line which is anything but agreeable today. They are fitted without extra charges, sizes to 36 at.......................... $3

The New Circlet for Stout Women at $1

is in its way as great a value as is the New Nemo Self Reducing Corset at $3.00—more than a brassiere, it fully controls a large diaphragm and the entire figure above the waist line, because of the ingenious way it is designed it always fits perfectly. Sizes 34 to 48, at $1

BOOKS

Best Sellers of the Ages

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

Fifty-fifth Paper—Pepys' "Diary"—Cross-Section of an Era.

MR. PEPYS IN BRIEF.

> Though I am much against too much spending, yet I do think it best to enjoy some degree of pleasure now that we have health, money, and opportunity, rather than to leave pleasures to old age or poverty, when we cannot have them so properly.
>
> But good God! what an age is this and what a world is this! that a man cannot live without playing the knave and dissimulation.
> (The Diary.) SAMUEL PEPYS.

DIDST thou see the King today? What said he, and whom of his doxies did he most shamelessly fondle? And what of his brother, the Duke? What of those Dutch guns booming on the lower Thames? What is this week's toll of the plague? Some say 'tis six thousand, but others fear the true number nearer ten. What of the opera; what of the play? Alas, one trouble no sooner mended than another descends! Now 'tis fire, and here is my Lord Mayor faltering along in Canning street like a man spent, with a handkerchief about his neck, and, to the King's message that houses be pulled down, he cries like a fainting woman, "Lord, what can I do? I am spent: people will not obey me." What, now, the news from France? Well, 'tis said the King of France doth make a sport of us, and says that he knows no reason why his cousin, the King of England, should not be as willing to let him have his kingdom as that the Dutch should take it from him, and 'tis a most wretched thing that ever we should live to be in this most contemptible condition. What of the fashions? Which is the best liked book of the day? What the latest news from our embassy to Spain, and what the new scandal about the King? That last is this—that he hath taken ten times more care and pains in making friends between my Lady Castlemaine and Mrs. Stewart, when they have fallen out, than ever he did to save his kingdom. Later: Now runs it that my Lady Castlemaine is in a higher command over the King than ever—not as a mistress, for she scorns him, but as a tyrant to command him. Dost thou ask me of this Lord's day's discourse? 'Twas not much. Mr. Mills made an unnecessary sermon upon Original Sin, neither understood by himself nor the people.

Such is Pepys' book—one of the most entertaining and instructive books ever written—one of the saddest, too, I think—and never meant for your eyes or mine.

In this book, which was written in cipher and lay for 153 years unknown and unvalued before a patient young Cambridge scholar put in three years of fourteen-hour days decoding it—in this book a decade of one man's life becomes the cross-section of a period that is one of the most interesting and certainly the most disgraceful in English annals; a period when the King of France laughed at the King of England and the King of England took a pension from the King of France; a period when poltroons dug up the body of great Cromwell to make it a public mock, and disemboweled amid joyous shouts the partisans of Cromwell who had survived him; a period when gentlemen entrusted with large affairs of state hired tutors to teach them the multiplication table before taking up the burdens of office; a period when those gentlemen—gentlemen painted by the courtly brushes of Sir Peter Lely and Geoffrey Kneller—were, not to put too fine a point on it, lousy; a period when the same gentlemen beat little boy servants until their (the gentlemen's) arms were "very weary"; a period when great nobles were pimps to the sovereign; a period when bribes, which the gentlemen who accepted them called "compliments," withered the right arm of the state—its navy; a period fraught then as now with stern lessons to every nation that allows the passion for pleasure to get the upper hand of its moral sense. Destroyed then is every other sense—sense of decency, sense of honor, sense of proportion, common sense.

It was the period of the Merry Monarch; the period of Merry Hell.

Samuel Pepys tells it all.

Seek you in his pages a little picture—only half a dozen lines—of how mass-hysteria can make a horrid kind of fiesta out of the rancors of a civil war fought a dozen years before? The date of Mr. Pepys' entry is Sept. 13, 1660; the scene that open place in front of Charing Cross station which you, perhaps, have often traversed; the leading actor a general of the Cromwellian armies and judge of Charles I.—ancestor, too, I have heard or read of our Presidents Harrison:

> To my Lord's in the morning, where I met with Captain Cuttance—but my Lord not being up I went out to Charing Cross, to see Major-general Harrison hanged, drawn, and quartered; which was done there, he looking as cheerful as any man could do in that condition. He was presently cut down, and his head and heart shown to the people, at which there was great shouts of joy.

Is not looking as cheerful as any man could do in that condition a winsome touch?

Mr. Pepys, under date of Dec. 1, 1660, takes you into an English gentleman's home of the period of Merry Monarch and Merry Hell—his own home:

> This morning, observing some things to be laid not as they should be by the girl, I took a broom and basted her till she cried extremely, which made me vexed, but before I went out I left her appeased.

Come again on a June day two years later:

> Hearing from my wife and the maids' complaints made of the boy, I called him up, and with my whip did whip him till I was not able to stir, and yet I could not make him confess any of the lies that they tax him with. At last, not willing to let him go away a conqueror, I took him in task again, and pulled off his frock to his shirt, and whipped him until he did confess that he did drink the whey, which he had denied, and pulled a pink, and above all did lay the candlestick upon the ground in his chamber, which he had denied this quarter of a year. I confess it is one of the greatest wonders that ever I met with that such a little boy as he could possibly be able to suffer half so much as he did to maintain a lie. I think I must be forced to put him away. So to bed, with my arm very weary.

Or, perhaps, leaving the home of a representative man of the middle class—a useful servant of the state, too, and a lover of books and of music—you would have a glimpse of the entourage of the head of the state—that merry soul for whom men had bled and died and ancient families had impoverished themselves. The date of Pepys' entry is July 18, 1668—eight years after the restoration of Charles II.:

> Creed told me this day how when the King was at my Lord Cornwallis's, when he went last to Newmarket, that being there on a Sunday, the Duke of Buckingham did in the afternoon to please the King make a bawdy sermon to him out of Canticles, and that my Lord Cornwallis did endeavor to get the King a whore, and that must be a pretty girl the daughter of the parson of the place, but that she did get away, and leaped off of some place and killed herself, which if true is very sad.

Pepys lifts out the house fronts, knocks down the palace walls, bares the immortal and immoral soul of the seventh decade of seventeenth century England. He was born nearly three centuries ago (1633), but all our knowledge of him and of the decade his book covers is as intimate, as specific, as alive, as this morning's paper or the social circle of this afternoon. The essence of him is life. Himself a bundle of contradictions, no contradiction of human nature—or of nation nature—either dismayed or disheartened him. He found it entertaining and, better than any other chronicler that ever wrote in English, he could tell it entertainingly. Himself, too, was infinite entertainment to himself. Hence he must tell all to himself.

After the coronation festivities we have this confession:

> Waked in the morning with my head in a sad taking through last night's drink, which I am very sorry for; so rose and went out with Mr. Creed to drink our morning draft, which he did give me in chocolate to settle my stomach.

But he rises before sunup to read Cicero:

> Up by 4 o'clock in the morning, and read Cicero's Second Oration against Catiline, which pleased me exceedingly; and more I discern therein than ever I thought was to be found in him; but I perceive it was my ignorance, and that he is as good a writer as ever I read in my life.

Intensely amorous, he was faithless to his wife, but he would cry himself to sleep with contrition. Occasionally accepting those "compliments" which were the scandal of his time he yet was by contrast with his colleagues a model of official probity. He loved drink, but he loved work and system more. He loved music and composed prettily but he would beat a child. He loved his wife, whom he married when she was fifteen and whom he long outlived, but he would try to seduce a woman in a church. He was quarrelsome but good hearted, timid but he stuck to his post like a man during the plague, saying to his colleague, Sir William Coventry, "You took your turn of the sword; I must not grudge to take mine of the pestilence." He was sensible and shrewd, and no man saw more clearly the doom the Stuarts were piling up for their house, but he celebrated his thirty-sixth birthday by getting the tomb of Katherine of Valois in Westminster Abbey opened and taking the body into his arms and kissing the mouth—"reflecting upon it that I did kiss a Queen and that this was my birthday." She had been dead 232 years—that pretty, piquant Katherine of Shakespeare's play of "Henry V." He was fussy, timid, officious, vain, ostentatious, and often drunken, but so astute a warrior as General Monk called him "the right hand of the navy" and Coventry said he was "the life of the navy office." Nearly two centuries later Macaulay, whose superb survey of the reign of Charles II. is considerably indebted to Pepy's graphic pen, confirmed those verdicts and pronounced him "the ablest man in the English admiralty."

All the bad, all the good, about himself, all his daily comings and goings in his wanton London of 400,000 souls, all the vulgar ructions at home and all the fond episodes of reconciliation, the dinners he ate, the clothes he wore, the periwigs he bought, the sermons he heard, the gossip he devoured, the vermin he had his wife comb from his hair—all—all—all he tells.

Why did he do it? Why did he leave this record of so much folly and so much weakness? No man can say, but supposition long has been allowed its privileges and copiously has used them. My own guess as to his state of mind is based on frequent observation of newspaper writers bending at 1:30 o'clock in the morning over the hot forms in a composing room to "cut their own stuff." How they hate it!—not the stuff, but the cutting of it. Somewhat so, I think was Mr. Pepys' state of mind. He was a great reporter, one of the greatest that ever lived. For ten years he had written well—incomparably well. He knew the stuff was good. He knew he had given in those six thick volumes of closely written shorthand the very body and essence of the time and that there were tears and laughter and life in every one of the pothooks and dots and dashes that made up his 3,012 pages of cipher. Ten years of his life and his country's life, as those lives had been lived from hour to hour and from day to day, in weakness and in striving, lay before him in the books. He loved them. They were part of him. He could not destroy them. He had not written for print and there was no grim makeup man standing over him and muttering, "Well, Mr. Pepys, you're way overset—as usual—and we've got no rubber type on this paper." So he was a free agent and could save his own stuff. He knew there was political peril in almost every page of it if it were decoded during his life, but the cipher was intricate. So he took a long chance with posterity, and a century and a half after he had closed the diary at the age of 36, because his eyes were failing him, posterity came into all his secrets, all his pith and color and spontaneity, all his follies, all his irresistible humanness. It cost him a heap of dignity, but it gave him immortality.

Before all, above all, is the consciousness he imparts—nay imposes—of a fellow man speaking. We do not resent him. Times have changed since his time and mankind grows more decent. But Samuel Pepys remains bone of our bone, flesh of our flesh. Different errors, other follies, each of us that took an inexorable pen in hand might be able to set down, but could we set down fewer? And of the good, fortunate is he who could record so much. He was generous to the poor and loyal to his trust.

EDUCATIONAL EDUCATIONAL

The Nation's Business is written in Gregg Shorthand

The Gregg System has won a national reputation as the universal language of business. Its superiority is a matter of statistics. Ninety per cent of the shorthand written in America is Gregg Shorthand.

Gregg School, the Home of Gregg Shorthand, is the pre-eminent business school of America. This reputation is based, not upon our own opinion, but primarily upon the fact that we always have more requests for our graduates than we have graduates to send out. The insistent preference exhibited by business men for Gregg-trained competence amounts to this, that Gregg Shorthand is income insurance. When you are Gregg-trained there is always a position for you at far better salary than the average of young people.

But this value by no means measures the full significance of our stenographic training. The laurels which thousands of young men and women have won through Gregg training proves that the stenographer sits in a most strategic position at the threshold of the business world. To have one's thumb on the pulse of a business, to be in intimate contact with every policy, every problem, every decision, and to work side by side with the executive is one of youth's greatest opportunities.

Visitors are welcome at Gregg School, and we are always glad to explain or answer questions regarding our methods. If you write, telephone or call in person, a descriptive catalogue will be issued free. We do not employ solicitors.

> —HARRY KEMP in "Tramping on Life."

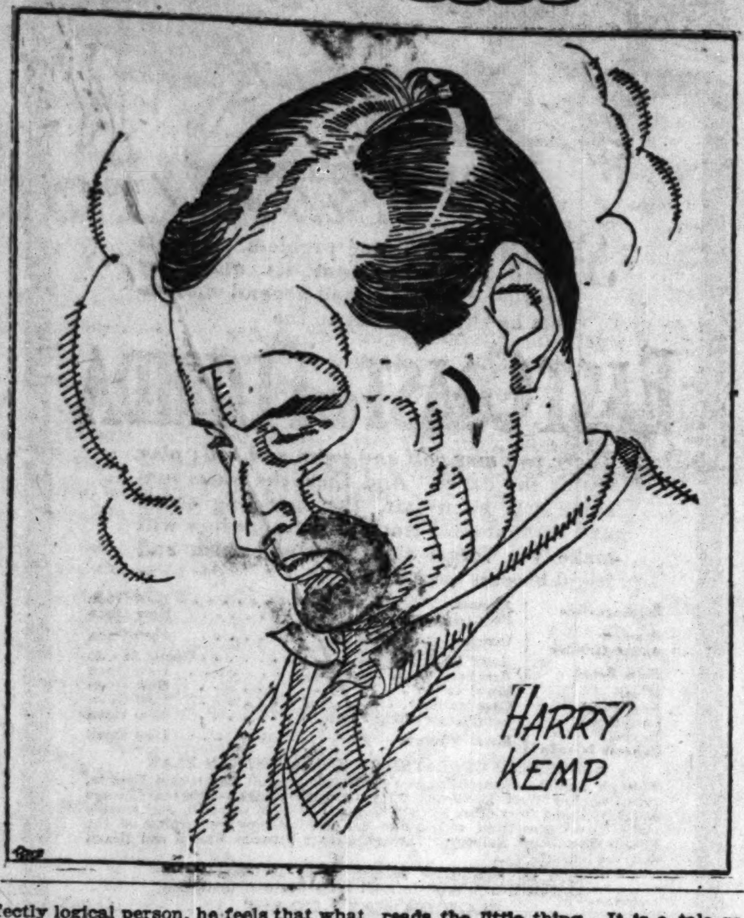
A TRAMP ON LIFE.

By Fanny Butcher

RUMOR is having it that Harry Kemp's "Tramping on Life" has more than an ordinarily good chance for the Pulitzer biography prize this year. In the tide of winter books, that particular one had been washed ashore for a more careful reading some time, and until last week there it had lain. The hint of the Pulitzer award drove me to its neglected side. I will say that once it was taken up, it was not relegated again to its comfortable obscurity. It is not the sort of book that can be put down once it has been begun.

Its qualification for the prize awarded for the best biography written by an American are—but let's look upon the whole thing quite dispassionately.

Harry Kemp, as a few of you may know, is a poet. As many others of you may know, he is the man who had a sensational affair with a famous author's wife, a jaunt which won for their young participants much more notoriety than poetry had as yet won them. In the sense that they are public characters, those sordid repayments of the friendship of their benefactors were the most important thing in the life of either Harry Kemp or Gilbert Cannon.



I mention the fact merely to place Harry Kemp in the minds of those of you who wonder why he should be writing an autobiography, or rather why, after he has written one, any one should read it. Since the world is as it is, sensation has a much more persuasive perfume for the average reader than poetry. A poet may live and die and the world may never wear a path to his doorstep.

From the very title, "Tramping on Life" is remarkable. It is beyond a doubt the most detailed analysis of an absolutely egotistic mind that I have ever read. Harry Kemp has literally tramped on as well as through life, and the fact that he has willingly set himself the task of telling the truth about the tramping is what makes the book one which no one may put down after he has once begun it. It has all of the marks of being an absolutely unrestrained narrative. He says now and then that his audience inspired him to invent more brilliant details to his life than were actually there, but though he may have been an inspired liar during his life, in this, his autobiography, he seems always to be telling the truth. At times his truth telling is so unreserved as to give the reader a shock. It is as though he had just discovered that truth, unadorned, is the most blasting thing in the world, the highest mental explosive, the most devastating machine that mind has ever invented, and he had set out with his new plaything to do a little wrecking.

The power of the book is cumulative. As you read on and on you realize that truth is being used by a man conscientiously to wreck himself, that to make a Roman holiday he has burned his own soul. Or mayhap, to cleanse himself, he has washed his mind in public. But with whatever motives he has, Harry Kemp has literally tramped upon himself; he has, like the wine making monks of old, tramped upon the fruit of his life to make a thrilling cup for man to taste. The juice of his life is concentrated in the book, the essence of it. He has simply taken himself out of himself and put it into a book, a book which has that quality of being a creature itself, something that grips you with its skinny hand and will not let you go.

Harry Kemp is a poet—not a great one and not a negligible one. His reputation as a poet would have been greater if he had not written "Tramping on Life." It is not the autobiography of a poet, although there is scarcely a page upon which he does not declare that he is a poet, that he lives for and by poetry, and that lying, stealing, the most grueling of hard labor, the brutal unkindness of his fellow men, the breaking of faith have all been done in the name of poetry.

He does not, however, write like a poet. There is scarcely a time in the whole 438 pages (which I read word by word, so gripping were they) when a poetic idea pushes its way into the narrative. The autobiographer calls himself a poet, and, with that as a theme, does nothing to embroider his narrative. I do not mean that he doesn't include poetry in his tale. He does, as I remember, once or twice quote something he has written—not by any means his best. I mean that the concept of life which he has is not a poet's concept of life; that the essence of the narrative is egotism, not poetry.

I have never read of any one who was so devoid of property sense as John Gregory, the hero of the tale, quite frankly Harry Kemp himself. Not only had he no sense of the physical property rights—he stole when he wanted anything, lied if it added to his humor, broke every canon of normal living—but he has no sense of mental property rights, no sense of restraint or reservation. What is the world's is his, so he takes it, and, being a perfectly logical person, he feels that what is his is the world's. Therefore he tells everything literally that passed through his mind.

He has, for instance, no sense of the property rights of the woman he ran away with in the tale of their elopement. He tells all of its most intimate details, the story of their deception of the husband, of their orgies of devotion—with the house in a maelstrom of unwashed dishes and chairs heavy with discarded clothing—without one adverb's or adjective's reservation. There can be no possible doubt of the identity of every one in the narrative, and yet there never is any sense of hesitation on the part of Mr. Kemp about using the contents of other men's minds as well as his own. For that very reason the book is amazing.

"I must admit I was pleased with the sudden notoriety that had come to me," he says about the furore that followed his elopement; "years of writing poetry had made my name known but moderately here and there, but having run away with a famous man's wife, my name was cabled everywhere—even appeared in Japanese, Russian, and Chinese newspapers."

There is an epitome of "Tramping on Life," the utmost pinnacle of egotism—egotism which, strangely, has sought in the book to perpetuate itself at the cost of anything and anybody else. There has never been a novel which can compare with it in that sense. It is an almost perfect chart of the life of a perfect egotist.

There are a thousand things one might say of the book. One might fill a page with quotations from it. But the essence of it all would be just that. There are books interwoven with life all through it; or rather books make most of the life, which is, at times, entirely a reflection of books.

One of the most clutching pages in the whole book is the one where he tells of his first contact with Keats and of the ecstasy of having found his savior that it gave him. One might tell of the life at Kansas university, where he must have been a terrible thorn to the faculty.

His picture of East Aurora and its master, Elbert Hubbard, would break the hearts of those thousands who used to worship the Fra. His disguises of men and places are so fragile as to be clews rather than mystifications. There is no one with whom he was associated who has not had in the book the initials of the autobiographer carved upon him in some conspicuous spot. As I said, he has had no sense of the mental property rights of any one, and himself he has spared least of all.

As for the Pulitzer prize—well, that's something else again. The book is an absolutely and unquestionably remarkable piece of autobiography in the sense that it is almost aggressively true. But it neither celebrates a typical American person who has done anything for his country nor is written in a manner to make an American a nobler figure, and those qualifications are, I believe, the fundamental ones which are taken into consideration in the awarding of the Pulitzer prize.

Just Like the Russians.

"The Soldier and Death" sounds like a doleful tale. When it is subtitled "A Merry Russian Folk Tale" one says, "Isn't that just like the Russians?" and with curiosity thus piqued reads the little thing. It is a tale retold by Arthur Ransome, and it proves to live up to both of its titles. It concerns a Russian soldier who, dismissed from the army with three pieces of bread, repairs to the city to seek his livelihood—regretting a trifle the regularity with which the army is wont to be fed. On the road he meets two beggars, to each of whom he gives one of his slices of bread. When he comes upon a third beggar, he divides his last slice with him, but upon second thought decides that this beggar might meet the others and might hear from them that he had given each of them a whole slice, so he gives him the entire piece. In return the beggar presents him with a sack, which is so disposed that if one says to anyone or anything, "Jump in," anyone or anything has to jump into it. And in the sack lies the tale of the soldier and death. After many adventures with the sack, he tried it on Old Lady Death. She has to jump into the sack, but she swears to be revenged on him. Her revenge is the tale—and it's a merry one, the forefather of the story of the man who dies and went first to hell, where he wouldn't be taken in, and then to heaven, where they refused him, and he was finally sent back to—Chicago or Detroit or Sauk Center or wherever the lad who's telling the tale lives. Only this Russian soldier is still, according to the legend, wandering about trying to make his peace with death.

Goncourt Prize for 1922.

The Goncourt prize was awarded for 1922 to a newspaper man, M. Henri Beraud. For the first time in the history of the academy the prize was given for two novels published within twelve months by the same author. "Le Vitriol de Lune" and "Le Martyre de l'Obese" they are, the first an historical novel in which the author describes the execution of Damiens and the death of Louis XV., and the second a tale of the love affairs of a man who used to be labeled in America with the tag "Nobody loves a fat man." The martyr tale is dedicated to twenty souls, all resident in bodies rotund, including Marshal Joffre, with these words, "I dedicate this book which thin people will mistake for a humorous work." M. Beraud himself weighs, they say, 230 pounds. He is at present a special correspondent of the Petit Parisien at Athens.

Oscar in Lavender.

Some years ago there appeared an exotic edition of Oscar Wilde published by Nichols and called the Cosmopolitan library, an edition especially suited it seemed to Oscar Wilde, bound in lavender leather, limp, and luxurious, bestamped with gold printed on Bible paper. There were those who having seen its garish allurements never again could wish for Oscar Wilde in any other form. It did, however, soon go out of print and for some time it was unobtainable until a few months ago, when the Cosmopolitan press brought it back into print, on the theory, probably, that Oscar Wilde is still a drawing room favorite. Its reappearance in its bepurpled garb remind some of the famous plum colored velvet knickerbocker suit and of the esthetic Oscar strolling down Piccadilly with a lily in his hand. Its reappearance also reminds one that the life which Frank Harris wrote still remained one of the neglected great biographies.

Our Best Poets.

Theodore Maynard, an English poet only lately come to our hospitable shores, has done a book which he calls "Our Best Poets," and then tells, without reservation, what he thinks of them. Among the English poets he includes G. K. Chesterton—who is the best of the best, he says—Alice Meynell, Charles Williams, Walter de la Mare, Ralph Hodgson, W. B. Yeats, Hilaire Belloc, J. C. Squire, W. H. Davies, Lascelles Abercrombie, Lawrence Binyon, and John Masefield, whom he rates as the last of the English group. He thinks Edwin Arlington Robinson is the greatest of the American poets, with Robert Frost a running mate for him. He discusses Vachel Lindsay, Amy Lowell, Carl Sandburg, Edgar Lee Masters (and the other vers librists whom he doesn't treat with gentleness), the Benets, William Rose, and Stephen Vincent, Sara Teasdale, Edna St. Vincent Millay, and Ridgley Torrence.

Hugh Wiley Forever.

Alfred Knopf is so devoted to the humor of Hugh Wiley, whose "Lady Luck" he published last year that he has bought up his two previous books and has published them in a uniform edition. Mr. Wiley's works now consist of "The Wildcat," "Lily," "Lady Luck" (all stories about the black colored gennlemum and his white colored goat), and "Jade," a group of short stories about Chinatown in San Francisco.

Floods of Lectures.

First of all there is Hugh Walpole, the genial and charming young Englishman who comes Jan. 16 to lecture at Orchestra hall on "Books and Friendship." This afternoon at Le Petit Gourmet, in the Florentine court at the corner of Michigan avenue and Ontario street, Vachel Lindsay will read from his poetry. D'Annunzio is planning a trip to America to put the case of Italy before the American people as Clemenceau put the case of France before us. Francis Brett Young, John Masefield's favorite young English writer, will come to America this winter to deliver some lectures, and Rebecca West, whose "The Judge" we are so completely devoted to, has signed a contract to come over in November of this year. And on Jan. 13 there comes William Beebe to our town, the author of two perfectly delightful books, "Jungle Peace" and "The Edge of the Jungle." He will lecture at many places, including the Cordon, on the evening of his arrival.

More Stevensoniana Treasures.

The Stevenson society of New York welcomed three natives of Tahiti who came to the United States bearing an unpublished poem and letter by their patron saint. One of the men was the son-in-law of Stevenson's friend, ex-Gov. Donat, to whom he wrote both the poem and the letter. The two treasures will be added to the collection of Stevensoniana at Lake Saranac. Here is the poem—a pretty fragile thing, it seems to me—to make such a fuss about!

Threefold, my Donat, threefold dear thy gifts;
Dear, firstly, being welcome in themselves;
Next, for remembrance of enchanted isles;
And last and most, my Donat being thine.

Blank verse, I know, in Gallic ears
A mighty senseless sound appears.
Ah, Donat, I lack space and time
To put thy kindness into rhyme.

About Lake Geneva.

A handsome book has—as is fitting—been written about our beautiful Lake Geneva. Nearly fifty years ago a minister from a little town in northern Illinois took his family for a month's camping out on the shores of Lake Geneva. Since then that family has spent as much of its time, individually, there as the rush of life permitted. One of the children of that family, Paul B. Jenkins, has so loved the lake that he has made a careful study of it, historically, geologically, and every other way. He it is who has written this exhaustive book about the lovely lake. The University of Chicago Press published it for the Chicago Historical society. A portion of the royalties from the sale of the book will be devoted to the Fresh Air Home at Lake Geneva. The book came out about a week and a half before Christmas—too late to find its way into many Christmas bundles. It will, however, have an enormous sale, without any doubt, at the American Geneva in the summer time.

CONFESSIONS

I wrote some time ago to Honoré Willsie to ask what book she would rather have written than any other, and I had no reply. I thought the letter might have been lost. But there was a more sinister reason for her silence. She is one of the nicest, realest persons in the whole writing business. This confession of hers makes me sad, as it will many others of you who admire her.

Dear Miss Butcher:

I have been ill with a bad heart for many months and most everything in the way of correspondence has gone to the dogs. Today I am taking up the threads again.

I merely want to acknowledge, now that it is too late, your note. If I had been well enough to have replied to your query, I would have said that I would rather have written "Kim" than any book in the world. I don't know why. Sincerely yours,

Honoré Willsie

BOOK NEWS from LONDON

By Sidney Dark.

[Editor of John O'London's Weekly.]

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.]—A number of English authors have been asked for their adolescent judgment of "Alice in Wonderland," and rather oddly the men are more enthusiastic than the women.

E. F. Benson says: "I was brought up on Alice. I did not know you could be brought up on anything else. But when you ask me whether I had any difficulty in understanding its humor, you amaze me. The whole point of Alice is that no one, child or adult, can possibly understand a word of it, because it does not mean anything. This is the secret of its unique merit."

E. F. BENSON.

W. B. Maxwell finds "Alice in Wonderland" perfect and final, "containing all that a child wants to be said, cannot say by itself, but has always believed might be said."

And Dion Clayton Calthrop confesses that he still reads Alice regularly.

On the other hand, Cicely Hamilton dislikes Alice's "elongated neck," and Evelyn Sharp, a Socialist, who herself writes fairy stories, is also critical of Lewis Carroll.

The most industrious churchman in England is the Very Reverend Ralph Inge, dean of Saint Paul's. He writes books. He writes innumerable newspaper articles, and when he is not lecturing in England he is lecturing in Sweden. The dean's latest book, "Outspoken Essays, Second Series," has moved Bernard Shaw to a three column eulogy in the Nation. The review is marked "Copyright in U. S., 1922," and therefore presumably it will in due course be published in the Hearst press. Meanwhile, it may be worth while to say that orthodox Christian England, already not unnaturally suspicious of a churchman who describes himself as a Christian Platonist [whatever that may be] has had its suspicions doubled by Shaw's characteristic declaration that the dean is "our greatest churchman and our greatest freethinker." Shaw is, however, compelled to admit that the dean does not yet believe in the Shavian God who is "neither omnipotent nor omniscient but ever striving to become both."

INGE.

some time a drug in the English book market, "Sir Douglas Haig's Command" is selling well, mainly because of its incidental criticisms of Lloyd George. Cherry Garrard's elaborate and expensive account of Scott's antarctic expedition, published with the title of "The Worst Journey in the World," a splendid record of courage and endurance, is also attracting much attention.

A book of a very different kind, but full of interest, particularly at Christmas time, is B. W. Matz's "Dickensian Inns and Taverns." Not to know Dickens' inns is not to know Dickens, and to know the Dickens inns is to know a great deal of the history of England. For instance, years before Mr. Squeers stopped at the Saracen's Head in Snow Hill, Richard the Lion Hearted stopped there, when at last he came home from the third crusade, and drank so much that he began to lay about him with his mighty battle ax to the "astoundmente and dyscomfythure of ye courtierres."

Augustine Birrell, who was born in 1850, has just published a collection of his characteristic essays. The modern English literary man lives long and retains his capacity for work to a remarkable extent. George Saintsbury, perhaps the most accomplished literary critic for two generations, is 77, and he has published a new book this autumn. Oscar Browning, the Cambridge historian, is well over 80, living in Rome and busily writing his autobiography, and, though it is hard to believe, Bernard Shaw, still regarded as a sort of bad boy of literature, is nearer 70 than 60. Mr. Birrell has been writing essays for forty years. His interest is mainly with dead writers and particularly with the men of the first two-thirds of the nineteenth century. The eighteenth century is antipathetic to him. Thackeray could see nothing in Sterne but a "foul satyr."

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL.
[American Press Assn. Photo]

Mr. Birrell takes an equally partial view of Swift, of whom he says: "No fouler pen than Swift's has soiled our literature. His language is horrible from first to last. He is full of odious images, of base and abominable allusions. It would be a labor of Hercules to cleanse his pages. His love letters are defaced by his incurable coarseness."

Here as always Mr. Birrell has his own definite opinions and does not lack the courage to express them, but though he may see Swift clearly, he sees him very partially.

On the other hand, he writes with complete sympathy of Lamb and Hazlitt and with something like enthusiasm of Carlyle. The man who loves books and likes to read about them may safely be recommended to Mr. Birrell.

The Story of the Love of Erik Karsten

The Code of the Karstens

By
Henry Walsworth Kinney

The story of the love life of Erik Karsten, descendant of a long line of Karstens, whose code was not to covet a friend's wife or daughter or a maid, and never wittingly to do anything to cause sorrow to a woman.

From his first love episodes in Copenhagen, through his unhappy marriage experience in San Francisco until he finally seeks solace in Tokyo, the reader will follow the career of Erik Karsten with eager interest.

An Epic Novel of the Last Dash of American Homesteaders

(The Cherokee Run of 1893)

TUMBLEWEEDS
By HAL G. EVARTS
Author of THE SETTLING OF THE SAGE

The most frenzied stampede of a century, known in American history as the Cherokee Run, by which the whole vast tract of Cherokee lands, over twelve thousand square miles in extent, was transformed almost over night from the playground of bad men into the homeland of law-abiding settlers, is vividly depicted in this epic novel.

Against the background of the changing days from the open range to the quarter section Mr. Evarts presents his drama, and he has given us a narrative of enduring historical value that will rank with Emerson Hough's "The Covered Wagon" and Herbert Quick's "Vandermark's Folly."

ZANE GREY'S MASTERPIECE

Just Published

Zane Grey says: "I am willing to stand or fall by the Wanderer of the Wasteland. It is my supreme effort, my most mature and finished work." An adventurous and vivid romance of the rehabilitation of an heroic exile of the wastelands by the love of a young girl. Against a background of the great American desert, the heat of its glaring noons, the tang of burning sage brush and the crisp clearness of its starlit nights, Zane Grey has written a tale of spiritual and physical adventure incomparably finer than anything he has yet done.

Here are fulness of living, courage, love, and the rewards of courage.

AMAZING SALE! World-Famous Pocket Series Offered Until Feb. 28 at Sensational Reduction! Size of Books 3½x5 inches. Books Printed Uniformly; Bound in Heavy Card Cover Stock. You Must Act Before Midnight, Feb. 28, 1923.

5c Per Book

I have sold 25,000,000 copies of my pocket series in three years. I find it cost approximately a million dollars to sell these 25,000,000 books. That means for every dime I received I had to spend five cents in order to make the sale. So I have really been getting only five cents for each book. I have solved the production problem—I produce these books at an astonishingly low cost. The actual cost above the price of raw material is very slight indeed. This is because of especially made machinery. Mass production has cut the cost of the book, but distribution costs remain the same—5c per book. That is the problem I am working upon now, and I may solve it. I have a plan which I intend to try out with readers of this announcement. In brief, what I must do is simply this: the sales' cost per book must be reduced from 5c per book to 1c per book. That means we must get five times as much business on the same advertising and distribution outlay. Am I asking too much? That remains to be seen. The response to this amazing announcement will decide the question. There is nothing so convincing as an actual test, and that is the real reason for this sale.

F THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

n'
n Moody Church

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

William Jennings Bryan will speak tomorrow evening in Moody church, North Clark street and North avenue, on "Moses vs. Darwin." At 3 o'clock he will address ministers and Christian workers in the Moody Bible institute auditorium, Chicago avenue and North La Salle street. Both meetings will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Fundamentals Ministers' association.

"Wanted, a Syndicate for the Propagation of the Happiness Germ." This is the subject of an address by E. Phillip Rosenthal at a union meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, Wellington avenue, near Broadway. The meeting has been called by the following pastors and rabbis, who will make short addresses: Rabbi Abraham Hirschberg, Temple Sholem; the Rev. Van Ogden Vogt, Wellington Avenue Congregational church; Rabbi Felix A. Levy, Temple Emmanuel, and the Rev. Fred V. Hawley, Unity church. The public is invited.

The cornerstone of the Bible school of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, Emerald avenue and Marquette road, will be laid today at 12 o'clock. The congregation will meet for its regular morning service at 10:30 o'clock at the New Regent theater, 6826 South Halsted street. Adjournment will then be made to Salem chapel, 6820 Emerald avenue, where preliminary services will be held in connection with the stone laying. The Rev. Richard D. Hughes is pastor and F. C. McDiarmid is superintendent of the Bible school.

THE VERY REV. MICHAEL J. RIPPLE, O. P.

The Very Rev. Michael J. Ripple, O. P., New York, will be the special speaker this evening at 8 o'clock at the annual meeting of the Holy Name society at the Holy Name cathedral, North State and Superior streets. Father Ripple is national director for the United States of the Holy Name society, and comes to Chicago by the special invitation of Archbishop Mundelein. It was Father Ripple who gathered in many bound volumes the photographs of Holy Name men, supervised their shipment to Rome, and went in person to explain to his holiness, Pope Pius XI., the significance of the work of the Holy Name society in America. Father Ripple was given a personal letter from the pope expressing satisfaction concerning the memorial. At the meeting this evening Archbishop Mundelein will also speak, and Bishop E. F. Hoban, director of the Holy Name society of the Chicago archdiocesan union, will officiate at vespers and benediction.

Sermons will be broadcasted today by radio at KYW station as follows: At 11 a. m. sermon by the Rev. F. F. Shannon at Central church, Orchestra hall, on "What Is New Year Prosperity?" Choir led by Daniel Protheroe. At 3:30 the Rev. T. M. Baxter, St. Ann's Episcopal church, "Finding the Lord," St. Ann's choir singing. At 7 p. m. the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, First Presbyterian church, at Sunday Evening club, on "The Review of 1922," shown by comment and pictures, and at 8 p. m. an address by Dr. James E. Freeman, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., solo and choir singing.

The choristers and ex-choristers of St. James Episcopal church, totaling 450 men, will have a dinner tomorrow evening at 6 in the parish house, 55 East Huron street. John W. Norton, choir director, and the retiring rector, Dr. James S. Stone, will be present.

The Rev. William B. Spofford, field secretary of the "Church League for Industrial Democracy," will preach at 11 o'clock today in St. Edmund's Episcopal church, 5831 Indiana avenue, the Rev. Gardner MacWhorter, rector, on "The Church's Ideal of Social Justice," and at 7:45 p. m. on the subject, "Be Not Conformed to This World."

Founder's week, in memory of the late Dwight L. Moody, evangelist of international fame, will be observed at the Moody Bible institute auditorium Feb. 5-9. Ten speakers from England, Scotland, Canada, America, and from the mission fields of New Guinea and the New Hebrides will be present.

A farewell dinner will be given the Rev. Hugh M. MacWhorter, retiring rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Downers Grove, next Wednesday evening at the church. After more than five years at Downers Grove, he becomes rector of Christ church, Ottawa, Ill.

The tenth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. L. Ward Brigham of the St. Paul's on the Midway Universalist church, 6010 Dorchester avenue, will be celebrated today. With the exception of the late Rev. W. H. Ryder, Dr. Brigham has been longer in the pastorate of St. Paul's than any other minister. The church organization recently celebrated its eightieth anniversary.

The Rev. W. S. Pond, rector of St. Barnabas' Episcopal church, 4241 Washington boulevard, will preach today at 11 o'clock his first anniversary sermon as rector of the church.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Bryan to Talk on 'Moses vs. Darwin' in Moody Church

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

William Jennings Bryan will speak tomorrow evening in Moody church, North Clark street and North avenue, on "Moses vs. Darwin." At 3 o'clock he will address ministers and Christian workers in the Moody Bible institute auditorium, Chicago avenue and North La Salle street. Both meetings will be held under the auspices of the Chicago Fundamentals Ministers' association.

"Wanted, a Syndicate for the Propagation of the Happiness Germ." This is the subject of an address by E. Phillip Rosenthal at a union meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, Wellington avenue, near Broadway. The meeting has been called by the following pastors and rabbis, who will make short addresses: Rabbi Abraham Hirschberg, Temple Sholem; the Rev. Van Ogden Vogt, Wellington Avenue Congregational church; Rabbi Felix A. Levy, Temple Emmanuel, and the Rev. Fred V. Hawley, Unity church. The public is invited.

The cornerstone of the Bible school of the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, Emerald avenue and Marquette road, will be laid today at 12 o'clock. The congregation will meet for its regular morning service at 10:30 o'clock at the New Regent theater, 6826 South Halsted street. Adjournment will then be made to Salem chapel, 6820 Emerald avenue, where preliminary services will be held in connection with the stone laying. The Rev. Richard D. Hughes is pastor and F. C. McDiarmid is superintendent of the Bible school.

THE VERY REV. MICHAEL J. RIPPLE, O. P.

The Very Rev. Michael J. Ripple, O. P., New York, will be the special speaker this evening at 8 o'clock at the annual meeting of the Holy Name society at the Holy Name cathedral, North State and Superior streets. Father Ripple is national director for the United States of the Holy Name society, and comes to Chicago by the special invitation of Archbishop Mundelein. It was Father Ripple who gathered in many bound volumes the photographs of Holy Name men, supervised their shipment to Rome, and went in person to explain to his holiness, Pope Pius XI., the significance of the work of the Holy Name society in America. Father Ripple was given a personal letter from the pope expressing satisfaction concerning the memorial. At the meeting this evening Archbishop Mundelein will also speak, and Bishop E. F. Hoban, director of the Holy Name society of the Chicago archdiocesan union, will officiate at vespers and benediction.

Sermons will be broadcasted today by radio at KYW station as follows: At 11 a. m. sermon by the Rev. F. F. Shannon at Central church, Orchestra hall, on "What Is New Year Prosperity?" Choir led by Daniel Protheroe. At 3:30 the Rev. T. M. Baxter, St. Ann's Episcopal church, "Finding the Lord," St. Ann's choir singing. At 7 p. m. the Rev. William Chalmers Covert, First Presbyterian church, at Sunday Evening club, on "The Review of 1922," shown by comment and pictures, and at 8 p. m. an address by Dr. James E. Freeman, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., solo and choir singing.

The choristers and ex-choristers of St. James Episcopal church, totaling 450 men, will have a dinner tomorrow evening at 6 in the parish house, 55 East Huron street. John W. Norton, choir director, and the retiring rector, Dr. James S. Stone, will be present.

The Rev. William B. Spofford, field secretary of the "Church League for Industrial Democracy," will preach at 11 o'clock today in St. Edmund's Episcopal church, 5831 Indiana avenue, the Rev. Gardner MacWhorter, rector, on "The Church's Ideal of Social Justice," and at 7:45 p. m. on the subject, "Be Not Conformed to This World."

Founder's week, in memory of the late Dwight L. Moody, evangelist of international fame, will be observed at the Moody Bible institute auditorium Feb. 5-9. Ten speakers from England, Scotland, Canada, America, and from the mission fields of New Guinea and the New Hebrides will be present.

A farewell dinner will be given the Rev. Hugh M. MacWhorter, retiring rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal church, Downers Grove, next Wednesday evening at the church. After more than five years at Downers Grove, he becomes rector of Christ church, Ottawa, Ill.

The tenth anniversary of the pastorate of the Rev. L. Ward Brigham of the St. Paul's on the Midway Universalist church, 6010 Dorchester avenue, will be celebrated today. With the exception of the late Rev. W. H. Ryder, Dr. Brigham has been longer in the pastorate of St. Paul's than any other minister. The church organization recently celebrated its eightieth anniversary.

The Rev. W. S. Pond, rector of St. Barnabas' Episcopal church, 4241 Washington boulevard, will preach today at 11 o'clock his first anniversary sermon as rector of the church.

Navy Wool BLANKETS Not new — but you'd believe they were if you saw them. Steel gray; weigh 4 pounds each and big enough for any bed. $2.29

GALLANT MERCANTILE CO.
25 W. Van Buren St.
HEADQUARTERS FOR ARMY GOODS

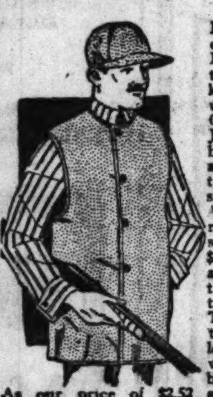
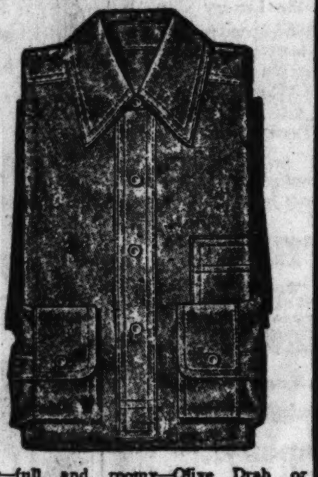
U. S. Government Genuine
Leather Vests
(Leather Jerkins.) New



How the merchants from New York to the coast have kicked because we've sold these Government Jerkins at far below their ability to buy them, why shouldn't they? As we feel sure no one else is selling them for $3.50 to $5.00 a piece, and they're worth that much. They're made of the best tan leather and lined with an O. D. blanket lining. As our price of $2.52 still nets us a profit we'll let you buy as many as you please.

$2.52

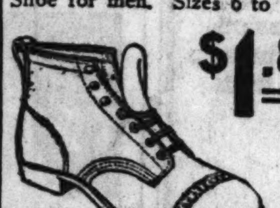
U. S. ARMY
Flannel SHIRTS NEW, $1.29



Big—full and roomy—Olive Drab or Khaki color. They're not all wool, but you wouldn't realize it if you saw the shirt—and they'll wear as well and keep you as warm as a Wool O. D. shirt.

ARMY MARCHING SHOES

These shoes, in our estimation, couldn't be duplicated under $4 a pair. Tan or black, heavy soles, solid heels. A real honest Work Shoe for men. Sizes 6 to 11.



$1.87 Pair

EVEN AN ARMY GOODS STORE

FINDS ITSELF WITH AN ACCUMULATION OF MERCHANDISE IT MUST DISPOSE OF. PARTICULARLY IS THIS TRUE IN OUR CASE.

OUR BUSINESS HAS BEEN SO LARGE THAT IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE FOR US TO GATHER UP THE LOOSE ODDS AND ENDS—AND IN TAKING OUR INVENTORY (WHICH HAS JUST BEEN COMPLETED), WE FOUND THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS WORTH OF MERCHANDISE THAT WE REALLY THOUGHT WE HAD DISPOSED OF—(WE PRESUME THIS IS TRUE IN MOST LARGE MERCANTILE INSTITUTIONS). WOULD IT SURPRISE YOU WERE WE TO TELL YOU THAT OUR BUSINESS DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON WAS PRETTY NEARLY 100% GREATER THAN IT WAS A YEAR AGO, AND WE HAVE DETERMINED THAT THE MONTH OF JANUARY SHALL KEEP UP THE WONDERFUL AVERAGE OF THE MONTH OF DECEMBER. WE ARE MERCHANDISE PEOPLE ENOUGH TO KNOW THAT THERE IS ONLY ONE METHOD BY WHICH THIS CAN BE ACCOMPLISHED AND THAT IS BY SIMPLY TAKING THE "BULL BY THE HORNS" AND SLASHING PRICES TO THE LIMIT SO THAT MORE PEOPLE WILL ENTER OUR DOORS THAN EVER ENTERED BEFORE.

LAST YEAR OUR BUSINESS IN THIS STORE FOR THE MONTH OF JANUARY RAN CONSIDERABLY OVER $100,000. WE BELIEVE WE CAN EASILY MAKE OUR SALE HALF A MILLION THIS JANUARY AND WE HAVE SET OUR MARK AT THIS AMOUNT. IT MEANS THAT WE WILL HAVE TO BE BUSY HERE EVERY DAY AND THE ONLY WAY WE CAN BE BUSY IS TO SHOW THE PUBLIC THAT OUR MERCHANDISE IS PRICED FAR BELOW ANY OTHER FIRM'S IN CHICAGO.

WE BELIEVE THAT, IN MOST INSTANCES, YOU WILL FIND GOOD, STAPLE, RELIABLE ARTICLES HERE FOR THE HOME—FOR THE CAMP—FOR THE INSTITUTION—FOR THE HOSPITAL—FOR THE HOTEL—FOR THE SCHOOLS, ETC. PRICED FULLY 50% BELOW WHAT IT CAN BE OBTAINED FOR ANYWHERE IN THE UNITED STATES.

THIS SALE WILL RUN THROUGH THE ENTIRE MONTH OF JANUARY, BUT WE SUGGEST YOU COME AS EARLY AS YOU CONVENIENTLY CAN. COME TOMORROW AND TAKE ADVANTAGE OF THE OPPORTUNITY THE LIKE OF WHICH, WE FEEL SURE, HAS NEVER BEEN OFFERED YOU BEFORE.

U. S. GOVERNMENT
WOOL Underwear
For Men 58c

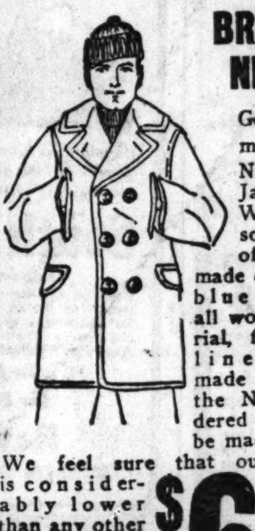
Brand New

It seems almost impossible (doesn't it?) to sell Men's Wool Underwear at anywhere near this price. We believe the jobbers are compelled to ask a great deal more from dealers.

But we bought several hundred thousand of these garments from the Government, in Shirts and Drawers—in all sizes and they're really wonderful garments — ribbed or flat wool. No limit to the quantity you buy at this price.

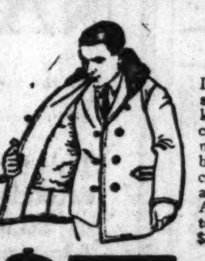
U. S. NAVY
Pea Jackets
BRAND NEW



Government Navy Pea Jackets. We have sold a lot of them—made of heavy blue Melton, all wool material, flannel lined, and made only as the Navy ordered them to be made.

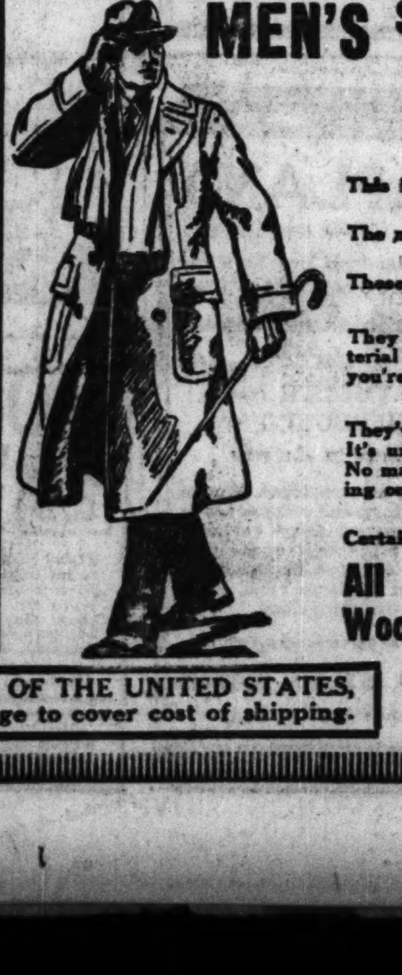
We feel sure that our price is considerably lower than any other firm every offered them at or can afford to sell them. $6.97

SHEEP-LINED COATS
NEW



Lined with best sheep pelt, khaki, duck or covered with moleskin — big black fur shawl collar. Unmatchable at the price. Actual values up to $15.00 and $20.00.

$7.42



MEN'S $25—$30—$35 OVERCOATS
No Man Need Go Without One

BECAUSE
This is an extra quality in a Man's Overcoat.
BECAUSE
The material is of heavy all-wool fabrics.
BECAUSE
These Overcoats are in Blacks, Browns, Grays, Navy and Mixtures.
BECAUSE
They are not redyed, reclaimed Overcoats, but new and of the same material that Overcoats such as we all wear are made of—the same as you're accustomed to paying $25 to $50 for.
BECAUSE
They've in conservative Business Man's styles and It's undoubtedly the best Overcoat value possible to obtain.
No man, no matter what his position is in the community, is above wearing one of these overcoats, and
BECAUSE
Certainly no man need go without one at this price.

All Wool $5.08 ALL WOOL

Leather Coats New Sporting Coat, all leather, moleskin lined, reversible, belted — women can wear them as sport coats as well as men. $35.00 would be about the right price for them. $11.95

Wool Shirts GOV'T SURPLUS They're new. Unless we were on the continual lookout, we probably would have to sell these Shirts for around $6.00 each. That's what Uncle Sam paid for similar O. D wool shirts with double elbows and lined bosoms. Sizes 14 to 17. $2.45

Government Tack Hammers New, all steel, including handle—picket pin end. Government cost about a dollar. Unbreakable. 15c

Blankets GOV'T SURPLUS $3.00 It's a far cry from the $6 to $8 the Government paid for these Blankets and our price of $3. It's the biggest buy in Blankets since the armistice was declared. That's what this sale is. Imagine a Wool O. D. Blanket for $3, new. Big enough for double beds. Weight UP to 5 lbs. If you have an open car it will make an ideal lap robe for it. Government cost from $6 to $10 apiece.

HELMET CAPS SURPLUS PROPERTY NEW — In either wool or fleeced jersey. Assorted olive drab colors. Can be worn by either men or boys. Supposed to retail for $1—and we believe they're worth a dollar. Buy as many as you want at the price. 25c

POLICE SHOES GOV'T SURPLUS NEW — Double oak soles — broad, roomy toe — throughout — 100% leather heels of rubber—black—sizes 6 to 11. Police officers particularly pay $10.00 a pair, we believe, for no better shoes. $4.82

Government Spirals New, full regulation length and width Spiral Puttees. Olive drab color. Priced at, pair, 51c

Wool Underwear GOV'T SURPLUS We really paid considerably more for these Men's Undershirts and Drawers than 25c each, but we don't know when we can get more, so we're closing out the lot we have on hand. They're a real good, perfect lot of real wool and fleeced Shirts and Drawers for men and in sizes to fit almost all of you. We advise your early selection while variety, quantity and sizes last. 25c

Del Monte Preserves 13½ oz. jar of Del Monte Pure Fruit Preserves, in Cranberry, Apple and Apple Butter. 15c

LEATHER PUTTEES GOV'T SURPLUS New — Officers' — in spring or strap style—chocolate polished leather. Shaped to fit perfectly. Sizes up to 18, and small enough for Boy Scouts as well. Cost, we believe, up to $12 a pair. $2.42

Thermo-Wool SWEATERS GOV'T SURPLUS The most popular, warmest Sweater made. Olive drab color. Three button style, high neck. Advertised everywhere in all popular magazines as a $8 Sweater. $3.63

Leather GLOVES GOV'T SURPLUS New — five finger, leather palm and canvas back — a good work and handy-around-the-house Glove. 22c

Government Overseas Caps New, Olive Drab, Wool; fit anybody. 18c

OFFICERS' Hi-Top Shoes GOV'T SURPLUS It's the soft finished, seal brown, lace Sport boot, 15 inches high, soft toe. We feel sure they sold recently as high as $12 a pair. $6.85

Government Australian Jam 2 LB. CAN—Nothing but sugar and fruit. Gov't cost about $1 a can. 10c

Wool Sox GOV'T SURPLUS These Sox cost the Government $1 a pair and in some instances more. A good wool work sock—in gray, brown and mixtures. Buy as many pairs as you desire at the price. Pair, 18c

Gauntlets Black Auto Gauntlets, soft, pliable leather — strap at wrist—some folks advertise they're worth $5 a pair, $1.69

CANVAS LEGGINGS GOV'T SURPLUS NEW — Regulation Canvas Leggings — sizes for men or boys— olive drab color—pair. 31c

Peaches No. 2½ can in heavy syrup, Michigan grown; whole peaches in can, 18c

OVERCOATS GOV'T SURPLUS These are extra heavy—All Wool—reclaimed, but in wonderful shape. Sizes for big boys and medium size men. Government cost new over $50.00. Olive drab color. $2.07

Government Bed Sheets Bleached seamed center, large enough for double bed (72x90 inches). Priced, each, 85c

Web Belts GOV'T SURPLUS NEW — Olive drab — web belts, with oxidized buckle — all sizes. 11c

NAVY JERSEYS SURPLUS PROPERTY They're not all wool by any means — but they're warm, very elastic, high neck, and well made—brand new—besides a few also in maroon color, though most of them are navy blue. Sizes to fit evedyone. They probably could not be duplicated again under $2.50. 86c

Pineapple Surplus Property Del Monte No. 2 can of genuine Hawaiian Pineapple; Government cost about 40c a can. 15c

Beans Maine packed Pork and Beans, No. 2 can; worth, we believe, about 15c a can. 6c

Blankets SURPLUS PROPERTY The prettiest, warmest Home Blanket possible to obtain. In either white, gray or plain; mohair bound. Size 66x80 in. and brand new. We doubt if they could be duplicated under $10 to $12 a pair anywhere else. $4.91

Government Surplus Razors New Durham Duplex Razors—in Khaki Kit. Have 3 blades and are equipped with guard. Sell world over, as you know, for $1.00 a set. 39c

Men's Drawers, 26c New Canton Flannel Drawers for men—worth about $1 a garment.

Sweaters New Phoenix Wool Sweaters—heavy knit, navy, heather or maroon color. For men or boys. $1.27

Ponchos Surplus Property New—an ideal rainy weather outdoor garment; khaki color. $1.50

Government Saddle Bags New; made of extra heavy black leather; canvas lined; complete with straps. $3.00

CrockerySet 42 PIECES FOR Plain White China—Contains 6 cups, 6 saucers, 6 dinner plates, 6 bread plates, 6 fruit dishes, 6 oatmeals, 1 each meat platter, sugar bowl, salad dish, creamer, vegetable dish and pie. $3.02

Government Tea Regular 2 oz. package of Japan Tea. Black and mixed flavors. Price, pkg., 9c

Mattress Pads $2.27 New—cotton filled—fancy art ticking—size 2 ft. 6 in. by over 6 ft. Weight about 15 pounds.

TOWELS GOVERNMENT SURPLUS New Turkish Bleached Bath Towels; hemmed ends; size about 18x40 in. 25c

SHIRTS New Khaki Drill Work Shirts; collar attached; very heavy grade; sizes up to 17. 87c

Palmetto Toilet Soap Supposed to sell for 10c a bar. 5 BARS, 15c

DinnerSet 50 PIECES FOR Plain White China—Contains 6 cups, 6 saucers, 6 dinner plates, 6 bread plates, 6 fruit dishes, 6 oatmeal bowls, 6 pie plates, 1 meat platter, 1 salad dish, 1 pickle dish, 1 creamer, 1 covered vegetable dish, 1 covered sugar bowl. $4.32

Government Pistol BELTS New. Extra wide and heavy. Government cost over a dollar each. 10c

Suit Case 24 inch Fiber Suit Cases—new—protected ends and brass trimmings. Black or brown. $1.01

Sport Coats New; Wool Elastic Knit Sport Coats—dark mixtures—the most popular sweater style coat. $2.06

Service Hats Stetson made them for the gov't; new sweat bands—reblocked. 85c

Balloon Silk GOVERNMENT SURPLUS It's been the biggest seller we've ever had in the store—and it should be, because the Government paid about $2.00 a yard for it. Makes wonderful drapes and curtains, besides being useful for underwear, dresses, etc Suggest you buy early, as we do not know if we'll be able to get more. 43c YARD

Executives and Managers.

SALES EXECUTIVE.

I am desirous of making a change and becoming connected with a high class, well rated concern as a sales executive.

I do not want a soft job with a fad salary, but a real opportunity.

Results can govern the compensation, but the house, the product and the opportunity must be there.

My experience covers 17 years with three concerns, all leaders and of national reputation.

The last five years I have been sales manager.

I am 37 years old, married, and in excellent health.

Highest class references will be furnished as to character and integrity and the most rigid investigation will, I believe, establish a claim to the following qualifications:

A clean, successful record.

A thorough knowledge of sales technique and fundamentals.

Experience in selling retailers, jobbers and manufacturers.

The ability to select and handle men.

The possession of energy and a fair amount of vision, mentality, and common sense.

Sound and decisive judgment called for in sales work.

The ability to get along in harmony with others and a strong sense of loyalty.

I have tried to eliminate bunk and exaggeration from the above.

I have confidence born of a fair measure of success, and enough mistakes and failures to kill egotism or self-satisfaction.

I wish to make the last change and to capitalize, if possible, the years of work and study, and in so doing know I will fit into the organization and plans of some going manufacturer or large jobber.

A personal interview, without obligation, will be appreciated and all replies will be held in strict confidence. Address F 199, Tribune.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Executives and Managers.

SALES MANAGER—THIS IS A REAL OPportunity for the right man. We have hundreds of inquiries from prospective customers in our office unanswered, and thousands in our files not followed up. Our product is complete home radio receiving sets and is sold through music dealers exclusively. These inquiries are all from interested dealers who WANT to be sold. Experience in radio is absolutely non-essential. Sales ability is what we want. We are the only radio manufacturers selling to the music and phonograph trade exclusively. We are the only manufacturers in Chicago licensed under the Armstrong Patents. We have been manufacturing for eight years. The inquiries are coming in faster than we can handle them and the man we want is the one who through correspondence can follow up and sell these prospects who WANT to be sold, the best radio on the market.

We cannot interview all the applicants for this position. Therefore we request that all applications be made by mail. Send two letters to us, one giving your past experience, age, qualifications, salary received in past, and salary requested. Tell us what you have accomplished. All correspondence will be considered confidential and no references will be referred to until after interview which will be granted if letters are convincing. Send with this first letter a second telling us as though we were a music dealer, on why we should handle radio, and why the music dealer is the logical one to handle radio. If you can sell us we will call you for an interview. Address E F Milton, 2061 McCormick Building.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

SALESMEN—OWING TO A CHANGE IN sales policy a manufacturer of a well known, nationally advertised trade marked product, which is sold to hardware houses, furnishing, variety stores, and kindred trades, requires salesmen to cover every state. This is not a new line, but is favorably known by the trade and consumer and therefore requires a minimum amount of missionary work. We are one of the largest manufacturers in the country of this class of goods, being established over 50 years, and have the proposition and the money, but will advance funds, practically anything wanted AFTER you have produced. This is a strictly commission proposition and applicants, therefore, should have some funds to tide over the initial period. We are not looking for "has beens," peddlers or "advance seekers," but want men not over 45 years old who will put forth some real effort every day in the week. To hard working, serious minded salesmen we offer real opportunity. This is not a side line proposition, but will require that you travel steadily. The first year's earnings will be over $6,000 for a worker, and we can prove this to you in ten minutes face to face. Prove to us in your first letter that you have the backbone, ability and willingness to work hard, and make your letter long enough to state age, residence, and tell full details of previous record, which will be treated in absolute confidence. Address K B 7, Tribune.

SALESMEN, ATTENTION.

We have openings for 3 live, ambitious, neat appearing young men in our fast growing sales organization where the possibilities are limited only by your individual effort to produce. Ours is not a stock, bond, or real estate proposition, but experience in the above would be beneficial. Preference will be given to those having had merchandising or advertising experience. This is a permanent connection. Work is interesting, pleasant, and fascinating, but hard. If you are not afraid of the hard part and are in a position to leave town, if you are the successful applicant, you can apply for interview at Suite 1625, 127 N. Dearborn-st.

SALESMEN.

One of Chicago's largest and most reputable organizations will employ several men who have had 3 or more years of sales experience. Compensation will be on a salary and commission basis with expenses paid. The positions are permanent, with unusual opportunities for promotion; no traveling. The men we select must measure up to the following standard: 24 to 50 years of age, neat appearance, aggressive personality, and most important, the ability to sell advertising to men who are themselves good salesmen—such as real estate brokers. See MR. PERKINS, Room 217, 320 W. Madison-st.

SALESMEN—IF YOU HAVE SALES ABILity, good appearance, a pleasing personality, and the ambition you can learn and like our business. It is ideal for a single young man who can travel in any society and meet the officials of any association. For an honest American who will work full time for us we will arrange a drawing account with incidental expenses paid; your income would exceed that of the average young man today. For part time outside of Chicago, compensation is based on 20% straight commission. Please do not apply unless you can furnish unquestionable references. Address D C 156, Tribune.

SALESMAN.

If you are not satisfied with your present position or have tried in vain to sell schemes which are represented to have earning possibilities beyond reason, we have an opening in our sales department which will interest you. This is a permanent position offering a future in an organization of high standing. If you are a salesman with at least average ability and will work on commission, you can make a comfortable living from the start; give phone. Address D C 154, Tribune.

SALESMEN—WE WANT TWO SALESMEN of proven ability, one for Atlantic seaboard and one for Middle Western territory, to sell nationally advertised article to department, hardware, furniture and grocery trade; permanent position; liberal drawing account and commission arrangement will enable real salesmen to earn real money; state age, married or single and full business experience when writing for interview. Address F 104, Tribune.

SOMEWHERE IN CHICAGO

there are a few young men who want to increase their earning power. They are men whose earnings have not kept pace with the rising standard of modern living. They are men who are willing to devote all or part time to our work, thus materially increasing their weekly income.

To such young men we can offer an opportunity to add at least $50 a week to their income and ultimately take places on our permanent selling staff.

Selling experience is not essential. We will teach you and train you to sell our way.

Write, telling us about yourself, age, training, etc., so that interview may be arranged for. Address C Y 364, Tribune.

AMBITIOUS MEN OR WOMEN
NOW EMPLOYED.

$50 PER WEEK
FOR YOUR SPARE TIME.

Who have been residents of Chicago past 3 years and who have a desire to increase their earnings by $50 to $100 per week, in a business where you can be 75% efficient by working evenings, Saturday afternoons, and Sundays, thereby demonstrating to yourself and to us whether or not you can be successful as a salesman before leaving your present position. We have the opening you have been looking for.

The article to be sold is one for which every man or woman is a prospect—the values every prospect will recognize and appreciate. An average of two sales every ten days will pay you at the rate of $75 a week for your spare time only. Our full co-operation, personal assistance of Salesmanager in closing deals, our schooling, selling talks, and selling methods, will make it possible for any person with average intelligence and ability to make good. All interviews strictly confidential. If interested apply Monday evening, Jan. 8th, between 6:30 and 8, Room 202, 163 W. Washington-st.

MEN—NOW EMPLOYED—
READ THIS ADVERTISEMENT CAREFULLY!

Several weeks ago we advertised for men and young men now employed, who spurred on by rising living costs, desired to add to their income by working a few hours in the evening.

We received more than 300 replies. Out of these we selected 10 young men who have been developed into producing salesmen.

We can use 10 more such men. If you are willing to devote a few hours a night we will train you to sell and help you to add between $40 and $60 per week to your income.

Those who qualify will be given the strongest kind of co-operation and will be financed over their initial period and will be given the opportunity of joining our permanent sales force.

In writing tell us about yourself, age, education, experience, what your present employment is and anything else that may help us determine if you can fit into our organization. Address C S 130, Tribune.

DRUM & DRUM, E. D.

MOLES. WARTS.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

Destroyed FOREVER by multiple electrolysis, 60 to 700 hairs removed per hour; no pain, no scars; absolutely perfect and GUARANTEED PERMANENT by RESPONSIBLE people that are

EXCLUSIVE SPECIALISTS.

NOTE—DRUM & DRUM, E. D. Specialists, have had many years of experience in the permanent destruction of superfluous hair, moles, warts, etc. They have treated thousands of cases from a few stray hairs to beard-like growths and not a single failure. THEIR CLEAN RECORD IS THEIR MOST VALUABLE ASSET. So that the public may understand more clearly, they have prepared a small booklet on "THE ART OF MULTIPLE ELECTROLYSIS" which is the ONLY method known to science for the permanent destruction of superfluous hair, moles, warts and other blemishes. This booklet quotes phrases taken from editorials on electrolysis and may act as a guide to those that do not know where to get the most expert treatment obtainable and to those that have become discouraged and lost confidence through inexperienced operators. It must be remembered that perfect and satisfactory results come ONLY through the SKILL, the KNOWLEDGE and the EFFICIENCY of the operator combined with the very BEST EQUIPMENT and MATERIAL USED WHICH QUALIFY DRUM & DRUM, E. D. SPECIALISTS, TO LEAD SUPREME. Don't fail to send for this free illustrated booklet.

EASTNOR MANOR

534-552 Brompton-av.
3500 BLOCK NORTH, AT PINE GROVE.
3, 4, and 5 Room Apartments

Already famous for beauty of design, with modern innovations for comfort, both ingenious and practical, varied and rapid transportation, parklike views, and, above all, sun and light in every room—these advantages make the new EASTNOR MANOR the most desirable apartment home of its type in Lake View.

The 3 rooms are equal to five, through clever portal bed and kitchenette arrangements, smart French doors eliminating the usual smoke nuisance. Entertaining space of over 350 sq. ft. in the 4 and 5 room suites, stunning English fireplaces in some, and shower baths in all add to their convenience.

Now that the master workmen have completed their tasks, we are ready to give our tenants our carefully planned efficiency service. Our janitors are experienced, our superintendent makes a daily tour of inspection, and our agent is on the premises from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m. Michigan.

$10 TO $50 DOWN!

Starts your purchase of 20, 40, or 80 acres, near a thriving little city in one of lower Michigan's best counties. Balance on long time to meet your circumstances.

These are rich clay loam lands well suited for raising wheat, rye, oats, corn, barley, clover, timothy, alfalfa, potatoes, vegetables, and fruits. No better clover lands can be found anywhere. Good schools, churches, neighbors, roads and markets. Beautiful lakes and streams.

Farmers in this district are making money and a good living. You can do the same. Land values now are as low as we can ever expect to see them and with increasing prices for farm products land values should steadily advance. This favored part of Michigan is the place for you to establish a farm home.

The Swigart Land Company is responsible. It has been in the land and real estate business for over twenty years. Its contract is one of the most liberal offered by any substantial concern. It gives free insurance, protecting the purchaser and his family in case of death or disability; provides for suspension of payments in case of sickness, lack of work, or other misfortune; gives the privilege to borrow money if needed and many other liberal features.

Write today for free illustrated booklet, giving full information. It contains no glowing statements or exaggerations—just facts, in plain words. You'll find it intensely interesting. Send for your copy now.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

We Show You How to Start a Successful Business of Your Own

Thousands are making good money in the variety business.

So can you.

Men and women have started in this business on moderate capital and made a success from the very start.

We show you how to pick out your stock, your fixtures, tell you how to buy, and how to sell, and how to make a profit.

It's a cash business in the kind of goods that all people, rich or poor, buy every day in the year.

And it pays a bigger return on investment than any other kind of a store.

We know many good locations in different parts of the country for new Variety Stores that do not conflict with those already established.

All you need is $2,500 to $5,000 and the ambition to succeed in a business of your own.

If you prefer to take over an established business we can put you in touch with one store on the West Side in Chicago which can be bought for $5,000; also another store in Paris, Ill., for about $5,500.

Being originators of the Variety business, we have helped thousands of men and women to a successful start in selling Variety Goods at retail.

And in helping others we have gained a vast fund of information, which we are glad to pass on to those who wish to enter this great and fertile field. Let us outline our complete plan.

A visit to our nearest house or inquiry by letter, telling about yourself, will be treated in strictest confidence, and will place you under no obligation whatever.

BUSINESS CHANCES.

RARE BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

A nationally known manufacturer is considering the disposal of one of his stamped metal products, this product being somewhat foreign to principal line. It is being manufactured and marketed successfully, and is a complete unit. It is a recognized necessity in banks, retail stores, theaters, department stores, and many other lines, and numbers as its users the most prominent business institutions in the country.

All patents, dies, tools, selling records — in fact, the complete manufacturing and distributing unit—will be sold outright in its entirety. Competition in this [illegible] any other mechanical specialty line. This proposition affords a rare opportunity for a manufacturer to add to his products a nationally known, trade marked article which enjoys an enviable reputation and a veritable monopoly in its field. Address A Z 554, Tribune.

A MILLION DOLLAR CORPORATION is looking for new things to sell in New England. Will consider anything of merit for which there is or might be developed a market. Patents developed. Address P. O. Box 2705, Boston [4], Mass.

CADILLAC'S SPECIALS

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 53 TOURING CAR. HERE IS A CAR which is in unusual mechanical condition. The former owner has just had the cylinders rebored, installed new timing gears and fan bearings, and has given the other mechanical units a thorough overhauling. The car has recently been equipped with a new top, which, together with the condition of the paint, makes it an attractive offering for any one with whom appearance is a factor. Tires, upholstery, and side curtains are in excellent condition. Equipped with radiator cover, clock, stop light, tire lock, and spare tire. Carries 7 passengers comfortably and is a real bargain at our price of $400.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, CONVERTIBLE. THIS IS A BARGAIN for any one desiring a large, commodious 7 passenger car in good condition at a low price. Mechanically the car is good and will deliver many thousands of miles of service. The upholstery is in unusually fine condition and has an almost new appearance. Carpets, interior fittings, and top all bear the closest inspection. For the further protection of the interior during summer weather, a set of seat covers is included in the equipment. The other equipment includes spare tire, front bumper, radiator cover, clock, etc. A special bargain at $600.

MARMON "34" TOWN CAR. This car has been refinished a dark Berkshire green. Upholstery is a durable gray broadcloth and the appointments are in practically new car condition. While in the hands of the original owner the upholstery was protected by a complete set of seat covers. A heater is installed in the passenger compartment. Car has been given a complete equipment of new type disteel wheels. For taxi or livery use this car is unsurpassed. A special bargain at $900.

COLE 1920, 7 PASENGER SEDAN. THIS is the suburban model of this make and has just been repainted in our paint shop a beautiful maroon with black upper panels. It therefore presents almost the appearance of a new car. It is upholstered in a good quality of silk velour and is equipped with seat covers which are now on the car. Tires are in excellent condition and car will bear the most rigid examination mechanically. Specially priced at $1,200.

PAIGE "6-66" 1921 BROUGHAM. Refinished in a beautiful shade of green, upholstered in an attractive taupe broadcloth, and with disc wheels to add snap and life to the exterior appearance, this commodious 5 passenger enclosed car will appeal to the discriminating buyer. Mechanically it is in excellent condition and the appointments are almost like new. Windows lower nearly all the way and the front seat pulls forward to admit 3 passengers to the rear seat. There is a large carrying space beneath the rear deck. Equipment includes spare disc wheel and tire, stoplight, aluminum step plates, motometer, front and rear bumpers, and windshield spotlight. A rare bargain for the small family or for the woman who drives. Price $1,350.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 61, PHAETON. This car has been equipped specially for winter driving. A new set of Cadillac winter enclosures, costing $240, has just been installed. These, in addition to warm windproof features, contain a new type of ventilating glass which is an innovation in this manufacture of winter sides. The car is in first class mechanical condition and has been thoroughly overhauled in our shops to carry the same warranty as a new car. It has been repainted dark blue and the fenders, which are without blemish, have been re-enameled. It would be hard for even a curious observer to distinguish this from a new car. Equipped with 5 new cord tires, tire cover, and front bumper. A reasonable offering at $2,750.

Your present car can be applied on the purchase price.

4 Bargains AT THE Peerless

FACTORY BRANCH.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, TOURING CAR. This car, taking into consideration its appearance and condition, is a real bargain. Do not let the price we have put on it scare you or influence your judgment, because this car is not one that is worn out or ready to be junked. The former owner had just spent in overhauling almost as much as we are asking. The equipment is complete and we do not believe you can duplicate it at anywhere near our price of $450.

HUDSON TOURING CAR, 1919. A beautiful 7 passenger touring car that has just been turned in on one of our new Peerless enclosed cars and we feel very fortunate in being able to offer it at such a ridiculously low price. Mechanically it runs smoothly and quietly. Paint is excellent, tires good, in fact, it is a very good looking car and shows no signs of excessive use. A real bargain for any one who would appreciate owning a car that we know has had the care and attention that this one has had. See it today. Price $600.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, TOURING CAR. In order to complete a new car deal this car must be disposed of immediately. It is in such condition that we feel it would be very difficult for you to distinguish it from new. Newly finished, seat covers, bumper, excellent cord tires, and mechanically exceptionally fine—all this in a late model Cadillac Touring Car at a price that we know is far below its market value. It must be moved today, for that reason we will sacrifice it for $1,475.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1922. We have just exchanged this car for one of our latest series for spring delivery and feel fortunate in being able to offer this car to the public. It is the first one of this type that we have had for some time and the last one we had only stayed in our possession a few days. This one can hardly be told from new. If you are interested in the purchase of a high grade 5 or 7 passenger enclosed car, do not fail to see this one, because it is the nearest thing to a new car that you have ever looked at. It will carry the standard warranty of the Peerless Motor Car Company and it will be sold for the extremely low price of $2,500.

PACKARD

BUICK CABRIOLET, MODEL D-46. This is a light, economical 3 passenger enclosed car. It is in good mechanical condition, well painted and fully equipped throughout. To the man desiring comfortable transportation and economical transportation this car will offer an instant appeal. The price is certainly attractive. $300.

PACKARD BERLINE LIMOUSINE MODEL 1-35. This is the model which has won such favor with the undertaker trade. It has always been in private service, kept up in wonderful condition at all times, and looks like a new car today. It is very completely equipped, including practically new cord tires, 2 spare tires, bumper, radiator cover, motometer, mirror, etc. It has been recently reupholstered in the latest style and is a car that is good for years of satisfactory service. Price $1,250.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 55, VICTORIA. This car is a large, roomy 4 passenger Coupe. It has very recently been repainted and thoroughly overhauled, and is ready for immediate service. Equipped with wire wheels, oversize cord tires, seat covers, stoplight, heater, spare tire, etc. This will not be available very long at our special reduced price of $800.

HUDSON TOURING WITH GLASS ENCLOSURE. This is a late 1920 model car; has been entirely overhauled in our shops, repainted in dark blue, and will render satisfactory service for a long period of time. It is equipped with every necessary accessory for winter comfort, such as tonneau heater, stoplight, motometer, etc. Our price is under its actual market value. $750.

PACKARD TWIN SIX PHAETON—This is our model 1-25 5 passenger sport touring. All necessary mechanical work has been completed and the car repainted in standard Packard blue, with cream yellow wheels. Any one desiring a high grade car for a very small investment will surely be interested in this one, as the price is only $600.

PACKARD TWIN SIX MODEL 3-25 TOURING. This car is identical in lines with our present Packard Twin Sixes, varying only in the wheelbase. We have thoroughly overhauled the motor and chassis, repainted the entire car in a very pleasing combination of Bronze Green with Sagebrush Green striping and door panels. This is one of the handsomest cars of this model that we have been able to offer for some time and represents a value very difficult to duplicate. $1,500.

PACKARD 3-25 TOWN CAR CABRIOLET. This is a very late series chassis and is equipped with a custom built body by "Derham" of New York, one of the most exclusive body builders in this country. The chassis has gone through our rebuilding shops, where all worn parts have been renewed, and the car is guaranteed to render new car service and satisfaction. The body is of exclusive design and seats 5 passengers comfortably in the rear. Is upholstered in a very special imported figured broadcloth, painted in Dark Packard Blue, and the most discerning could not distinguish the car from new in any way. The purchaser of this car will effect a remarkable saving; $4,000.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE

WILLS PHAETON, '22.

This car has been driven only 3,000 miles. The original maroon paint looks like new and the tires show no wear. The upholstery looks as though it had never been used. We have never offered a more wonderful bargain. The original owner traded it in last week for a sedan. We are giving a new car warranty with this automobile because we know it is as good, if not better, than a new car. It has been broken in properly. The equipment consists of lock, motometer, front and rear biflex bumpers, stoplight, step plates, and 1 key locks all locks and cut out. Price $1,900.

Stearns-Knight Town Car.

FOR TAXI SERVICE.
PRICE, $675.

We can highly recommend this car to any man wishing an extra fine automobile for high class trade. The driver's compartment is enclosed with winter sides. The mechanical condition of this car is excellent and there is not a thing to be done to it. The coach condition is fine and the paint and upholstering look like new. Our price is at least $400 under its actual value. The actual mileage is 25,000 miles.

APPERSON SEDAN, 1921.

This car has just been given a burnt-off paint job. The tires are new, the upholstering shows no wear; valves have been reground and squeaks and rattles have been eliminated. We can recommend this car to you and we are offering it at a price that should sell it immediately. Price $1,375.

WILLS BROUGHAM, '23.

SAVE $500.

This is the first time we have ever had an opportunity to offer for sale an almost new Brougham. The mileage is only 2,000 miles, the color of paint is standard Wills Sainte Claire blue. The body is Fisher's finest. This automobile seats 5 comfortably. The upholstery is granite weave, the finest upholstery made. This car will appeal to the man or woman expecting to buy a new car at the Automobile Show. Price $3,250.

WILLS ROADSTER, '22.

SAVE $950.

Body by Budd, solid steel construction; no wood; painted standard Wills Sainte Claire maroon. You have undoubtedy wished for a new Wills roadster. You cannot tell this almost new Wills from a new car. There is no automobile that gives you quite the thrill that you get in driving this wonderful, powerful, beautiful smart runabout. The equipment is complete and the price should appeal to you. Car takes new car guaranty. Price $1,950.

Winton Columbia

CADILLAC TOURING, TYPE 61 SERIES. This luxurious 7 passenger car has been carefully driven less than 4,500 miles and it is in new car condition. It has its original finish, Brewster Green, which has been well preserved, the side curtains are complete and like new, and the car throughout reflects its fine care. The mechanical condition and cord tire equipment, of course, are excellent. Included in equipment are spare cord tire, double heater, rear view mirror, automatic windshield wiper, 2 windshield spotlights, winter front radiator cover, bumper, motometer, stop signal, etc. We are offering this practically new car considerably below its present market worth at $2,250.

MARMON, MODEL 34, TOWN TOUR. CAR. "Luxury" in an automobile means comfort and ease of riding. You get luxury at low cost in this fine Marmon car. It is a luxurious 4 or 5 passenger Town Car and suitable for all year use. Its condition, of course, is the best and the appearance of the car is impressive. It is upholstered in imported English broadcloth, which is in excellent condition and equipped with 5 wire wheels, 5 excellent cord tires, shock absorbers, etc. Included also are summer top and complete set of side curtains which are used when converting into a 7 passenger touring car. See it and ride in it immediately—you won't want to let this one go by. $600.

COLE 1922 SUBURBAN SEDAN. A demonstration will prove the excellence of this luxurious full 7 passenger enclosed car and that it has not been abused in any way. It cannot be classed as the "ordinary" used automobile. In appearance it is still new. Mechanically it is exceptionally fine and very smooth in operation. It has seen very little use and was driven carefully less than 7,000 miles. The upholstery has been wonderfully preserved. Lovejoy shock absorbers, heater, bumper, De Luxe motometer and arm, running board pads, stoplight and other equipment add to the comfort and ease of operation. If you are looking for a very late model slightly used high grade sedan at a low price, this is a value we can highly recommend. $2,000.

STEARNS-KNIGHT, CURRENT MODEL TOURING. This 4 cylinder car was delivered new in August, 1922, has been carefully used less than 5,000 miles and its condition from the standpoint of appearance and operation would lead you to believe it had never been used. Everything about the car is first class, including the beautiful Maroon finish and black enameled hood and fenders. It is perfectly equipped including bumper, radiator cover, motometer, cowl ventilator, windshield squeegee, 2 fender rear view mirrors, spotlight, stoplight, neutral lock, snubbers and 5 excellent Goodyear cord tires. Your immediate action is suggested as such a value rarely stays here over night at $1,400.

PIERCE ARROW—1923.

1923 Pierce-Arrow Suburban Limousine Sedan, a beautiful automobile of a maroon color, with the natural wood wheels. The driver's seat is upholstered in red Spanish leather and makes a beautiful contrast, the cord tires are only equal to brand new, and the equipment includes special Vesta head lamps, 2 spare tires and tire cover, heater, bumper, etc. It is really so perfect that its beauty can only be appreciated by actually seeing the car. Standard new car guaranty.

LINCOLN SPORT—1923.

1923 Lincoln Sport Car, equipped with a special La Barron body. This late model automobile is so new that it is utterly impossible to recognize it as a used car, either in appearance, running qualities, or tires. It is equipped with a winter top, a special mahogany trunk and rack, special head lights, tail and backing light. It is certainly an unusually smart and individual appearing sport car. New car guaranty.

CADILLAC SEDAN—1923.

1923 Cadillac, Model 61. Suburban sedan; a late model Cadillac in the condition of this car is rarely found; the motor, tires, and the appearance have not had a chance to wear or even look used, it is so new; it is fully equipped and has front and rear bumpers, lock, spare tires, etc., and we give a standard new car guaranty.

LOCOMOBILE SPORTIF—'21

1921 Locomobile sportif. The few thousand miles of driving that this car has had in the hands of a careful driver have only served to increase the velvety action. It was built to last a lifetime; the paint is in wonderful condition and the motor thoroughly inspected; we have installed brand new seat covers and it is equipped with nickeled radiator, special nickeled lamps, wind shield and wind shield wiper, spotlight, spares, and bumper. Don't delay in seeing this car. Guaranteed.

Packard Sport De Luxe—'21.

1921 Packard, 4 passenger Sport De Luxe, the actual mileage of which is 6,485. Beautifully painted in a cream color with plum color chassis, fenders, and trimmings; the smooth running condition of the motor is flawless; the 6 disteel wheels are nickeled, as are the special Vesta head lamps, Cowl lights, winter front, and wind shield; addition equipment includes 6 new cord tires, tire covers, special radiator cap, and special tail light. The interior is fitted with a new set of finely tailored brown seat covers and a special plum color carpet. Attractively priced and guaranteed.

1923 6 Pass. Sport
De Luxe California Top.

This car was bought new late in the fall by a prominent Chicagoan, and after driving it with utmost care for only a few thousand miles, owing to a change in his family affairs he traded it back to us for a Stutz Roadster. The entire car is as new in appearance as the day it was delivered, and the new car guarantee has not yet expired.

The De Luxe type of California top on this beautiful car is the last word in style and distinctive appearance, and is not to be confused with what are usually termed "California Tops." It is custom built and while suitable for town and country all the year around when the enclosures are attached, the exterior appearance is finished and the interior is as luxurious as that of the most expensive sedan. The head lining is in plain dark blue velour, and the detachable upholstery [which completely covers the dark blue Spanish leather] is in striped dark blue velour. One dome and two Tiffany reading lights are fitted in the top. The exterior is covered in alligator and the large windows are of heavy French beveled plate glass. The body is finished in fleetwood blue. The radiator massive Stutz special drum type, lamps, Biflex bumpers, windshield, spotlight and monogram motometer are in silver. Additional equipment consists of shock absorbers, self-lubricating metal spring covers, aluminum number pad holders, 2 running board electrically lighted marine lanterns, stoplight, 6 new Goodrich Silvertown nonskid cord tires, 6 wire wheels, cutout, blue plate glass sun and storm visor, etc.

This superb car cost nearly $4,000 only a few weeks ago and can be purchased at a considerable reduction. One desiring the last word in a smart appearing high powered, fast long lived car for winter and summer comfort over boulevards and cross country will appreciate this unusual opportunity.

$10,000.00 In Cash Prizes!

The Chicago Tribune announces

A STUPENDOUS NEW CONTEST!

Solve the Puzzle Pictures of Movie Actors and Win a Big Cash Prize!

Starting today The Chicago Tribune begins one of the greatest contests ever conducted. $10,000.00 in Cash Prizes are offered to men, women, boys and girls everywhere.

No Work to Do

—Just Amuse Yourself

Every Sunday for 12 weeks The Chicago Tribune will print three Puzzle Pictures of Movie Actors in the big COLO*Roto* Magazine—FREE with The Chicago Sunday Tribune. These pictures will be composites. All you have to do is to cut apart the Puzzle Pictures and assemble them, naming the Actor the picture shows. Clues will be given in descriptions under the pictures to help you.

The first three Puzzle Pictures are printed on the opposite page. Can you cut these apart and assemble them and name each Player correctly?

It's simple. No work to do. Just prove your skill. Good fun for everybody!

Open to Everybody

—Men, Women, Boys and Girls

This contest is open to everybody regardless of age. It does not matter where you live.

$10,000.00 in Cash Prizes will be given to the persons who send in the nearest correctly named and neatest complete sets of Puzzle Pictures in this contest.

THE PRIZES:

1st Prize		$1,000.00
2nd Prize		500.00
3rd Prize		250.00
4th Prize		100.00

IN THIS COMPOSITE you have the forehead of the husband of a famous movie star. The eyes and nose belong to a man who has been divorced from a woman who appears now and then in pictures and vaudeville. The mouth and chin have quivered over recent domestic infelicity.

$10,000.00 in Cash Prizes!

RULES:

1. Every Sunday for 12 weeks The Chicago Tribune will print in the COLO*Roto* Magazine, three Composite Puzzle Pictures of Movie Actors and Actresses. Each Composite will consist of the forehead of one Player, the eyes and nose of another, and the mouth and chin of a third. The three Composites printed each Sunday, will, when cut apart and assembled, make three complete pictures of movie actors or actresses. $10,000.00 in Cash Prizes will be paid to the persons sending in the nearest correctly named and neatest sets of the 36 pictures.
2. 1327 Cash Prizes will be paid as follows:

1st Prize	$ 1,000.00
2nd Prize	500.00
3rd Prize	250.00
4th Prize	100.00
Next 3, $50.00 each	150.00

Next 200, $10.00 each	2,000.00
Next 1100, $5.00 each	5,500.00
1327 Prizes Totaling	$10,000.00

3. The contest is open to everybody—men, women, boys and girls—except Tribune employees and their families. It does not matter where you live.
4. You pay nothing—you do no work—just amuse yourself by proving your skill.
5. The Puzzle Pictures must be cut out, assembled and pasted or pinned together. Below each picture write in the name of the Movie Player. Clues will be given in descriptions below each Composite to help you solve every one.
6. In all, 36 pictures will be printed—three every Sunday for 12 weeks. Pictures are to be submitted in sets of 36 only. Hold all your pictures until you have the complete set of 36. Then send them to "Puzzle Pictures," The Chicago Tribune, 7 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois, attaching your name and address. All pictures must be in by midnight 15 days after series No. 12 is published.
7. Accuracy will count. Neatness will count.
8. You need not purchase the Tribune to compete. You may copy or trace the pictures from the originals in the Tribune and assemble the pictures from the copies you have made. Copies of the Tribune may be examined at the Tribune office or at public libraries, free of charge.
9. The judges will be a committee of three members of the Tribune staff whose decision will be final. In case of ties the full award offered will be given to each tying contestant.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE is a favorite, not so much because of her good looks as because of her sparkling vitality; her debonair and—yes—divilish—smile; her airy wholesomeness! Given the right direction and a story that amounts to something, she sweeps across the silver sheet like a clean spring wind, with joy and laughter in her train. There's always a twinkle to her love making. You feel sure she's going to leap from her adorer's arms trilling merrily:

"Enough of THAT for this time, Fido! Let's play tennis! Or see how fast we can go and how far before a motor cop lamps us! Or have a swim! ANYHOW, let's do something else—I'm tired being pawed over!"

Miss Talmadge, you will remember, made her first hit as the Mountain Girl in Griffith's "Intolerance." In that role she was a breezy, wild thing, and if you ask me, I'll say she STILL is!

Sell Pets Through Tribune Want Ads

PETS have their day and when they cease to engage the children's fancy they become a household problem. The dearly-loved pup of a year ago has now reached a disenchanted maturity; puss is neglected, the parrot and the canary each in its turn has lost prestige. The question is—what to do with them?

Advertise them in a Tribune Want Ad and pass them along to other children who will prize them—and whose parents, incidentally, are willing to pay for them. And if you are in the market for a dog, a parrot or even a horse, consult The Tribune's Want Ad Section—the easiest and most convenient way of overtaking your wants.

Wording a Want Ad to make it pay

A COPY of "Wording a Want Ad to Make it Pay," The Tribune's new booklet, will be mailed free to anyone requesting it. No obligation. The Tribune presents you with this booklet in the hope that it will help you to make your Want Ads more effective. Write for it today!

THE BROKER'S MAN

by Edgar Jepson

Elizabeth Just Had to Hate Him—the Sheriff's Man, Camped in Her Home Till the Taxes Should Be Paid. But He Was Young, He Wanted to Learn, and How He Could Dance!

SOME of the members of the circle the Mortons adorn spent their Easter in the country, some at the sea, some with friends, some among strangers. The Mortons spent theirs at home with the broker's man. It was a matter of thirteen, fourteen, eight, and a chalcedony cup, made by some old time Chinese artificer in the shape of a flower that never grew in any land. It was nobody's fault, though Mr. Morton declared that it was the fault of the commissioners of inland revenue. Yet they were entitled by law to exact by process of distraint £13/14/8, the king's taxes. He called them bloodsuckers. He always did.

Assuredly, it was no one's fault that they had not been paid. The money had been there, nestling in the strong room of the bank, ready to glut the maw of the bloodsuckers, as Mr. Morton phrased it, when he had seen the chalcedony cup in the window of Mr. Levison, a dealer in objects of art; and a check had been made out to Mr. Levison, instead of to the commissioners of inland revenue. As Mr. Morton observed, no person of taste could have seen the cup without begging, borrowing, stealing, or buying it. It had been impossible to beg it from Mr. Levison, who often said with some sternness that he did not believe in indiscriminate charity; no less impossible to borrow it, for Mr. Levison, as he often said with quiet pride, made it a principle never to lend. Mr. Morton had felt himself unequal to the business of stealing it from so astute a person. Therefore he had been reduced to buying it.

When he took it out of its cardboard box both Mrs. Morton and Elizabeth uttered a little cry of pleasure and applauded his firm handling of the matter. It was a joy to them. When they had done admiring, Elizabeth observed in tranquil accents, "I suppose we shall have the broker's man in again."

SHE was right. The sheriff's officer left him at the house on the afternoon of the Thursday before Easter.

Elizabeth let him in. She was surprised by his largeness, his youth, and his handbag. The broker's men previously supplied by the commissioners of inland revenue had been small and old, and carried their food and, it may be, their tooth brushes in red cotton handkerchiefs. She observed also that he had very blue eyes in a fresh colored, sulky face. She took an instant dislike to him: she did not consider broker's manning, or whatever the profession is called, work for a strong young man. Under the cold disapproval of her gaze he appeared to become ill at ease and dropped his hat.

She took him down to the kitchen, pointed to a chair in the corner, told him that he could smoke, as long as he did not smoke shag, and boil a kettle when he wanted his tea, set a teapot, milk jug, cup, and saucer on the dresser, and left him still, to judge from his flushed face, ill at ease.

When she came down to the kitchen to make buttered toast for afternoon tea she found him reading a book. She marveled; the earlier broker's men had sat through the hours ruminating, with rather vacant eyes, on their past triumphs. She ascribed this innovation to the growth of democracy. Politely he kept his eyes glued to the page

Humming softly, she got to her toast making. The broker's man's eyes rose above the top of his book and studied her beautiful face with its clear skin of the tint of a tea rose and translucent as fine porcelain, dark brown eyes of immeasurable depths, straight nose, most kissable lips, her abundant dark brown hair, and her admirable figure. He perceived that, as he had supposed when she opened the house door, she was the most beautiful creature he had ever seen. He continued to study her. Turning, she caught him in the act, and paused to gaze at him sternly. With a guilty flush he again glued his eyes to the page.

MR. MORTON came into the kitchen to make the tea. He was a man of many theories, intellectual, moral, and æsthetic, in support of which he adduced many sound arguments, both in his books and his conversation. One of his theories was that women cannot make tea. He adduced no sound arguments in support of this theory. He made the tea.

Having made it, he prodded Elizabeth sharply in the ribs with his forefinger, thereby drawing a small, undignified squeak from her, and said in a hushed voice, "He's reading a book—another proof of my theory that the proletariat is coming on." Then he added in a louder, very civil voice, "May I ask what you are reading, young visitor?"

Inured by his calling to hostility and jibes, the broker's man looked at him with defiant eyes and said in a defiant tone, "I'm reading Emerson's Essays."

"A notable work. You have my profound sympathy. Don't you find it rather—shall we say heavy reading?" said Mr. Morton.

Apparently the broker's man decided that he was a man of good will, for he scratched his head and said in a confidential tone, "I don't seem to get on with it very well."

His deep musical voice made his northern burr rather pleasant.

"Then what are you reading it for?" said Mr. Morton.

The broker's man looked at him suspiciously, again decided that Mr. Morton was not a scoffer, and said gravely, "I'm reading it to expand my mind."

"An admirable ambition; but you're setting about its attainment in the wrong way," said Mr. Morton, in the tone of an expert. "You can't expand your mind by boring it, and you won't be able to get any pleasure out of the work of that admirable and often illuminating writer for another fifteen years or so. You have to mature first."

"The bookseller told me it was a very improving work," said the broker's man unhappily.

"It will improve you—in about fifteen years," said Mr. Morton, considering his ingenuous face thoughtfully. Then he turned to Elizabeth and added: "Well, I suppose we must do something for his mind—the stranger within our gates, you know. Which shall it be—Marco Polo, or Wells's 'Outline of History'?"

"I should like to give him a pick ax and set him to work with it. He must be as strong as a horse," said Elizabeth with cold decision.

The broker's man flushed and scowled at her.

Mr. Morton smiled and said: "But how unreasonable! What would a broker's man do with a pick ax? To a man of his sedentary occupation a book is far more appropriate—'The Outline of History,' I think."

He picked up the tray and, preceded by Elizabeth, left the kitchen. The broker's man ground his teeth in his bitter indignation. A pickax! She wanted to make a navvy of him! A common navvy! The impudent hussy!

He rose, opened his handbag, and set about making his tea, still simmering bitterly. Elizabeth entered, carrying a large book. He quailed at the sight of it: Emerson's Essays made but a very small volume beside it.

Setting it down on the table, she said coldly: "You'd better read it here. It's too heavy to read comfortably in a chair."

"Thank you, miss," he said sulkily. Then he added bitterly. "If I could handle a pickax, I should think I could handle that."

"There is that," said Elizabeth coldly as she went out of the kitchen.

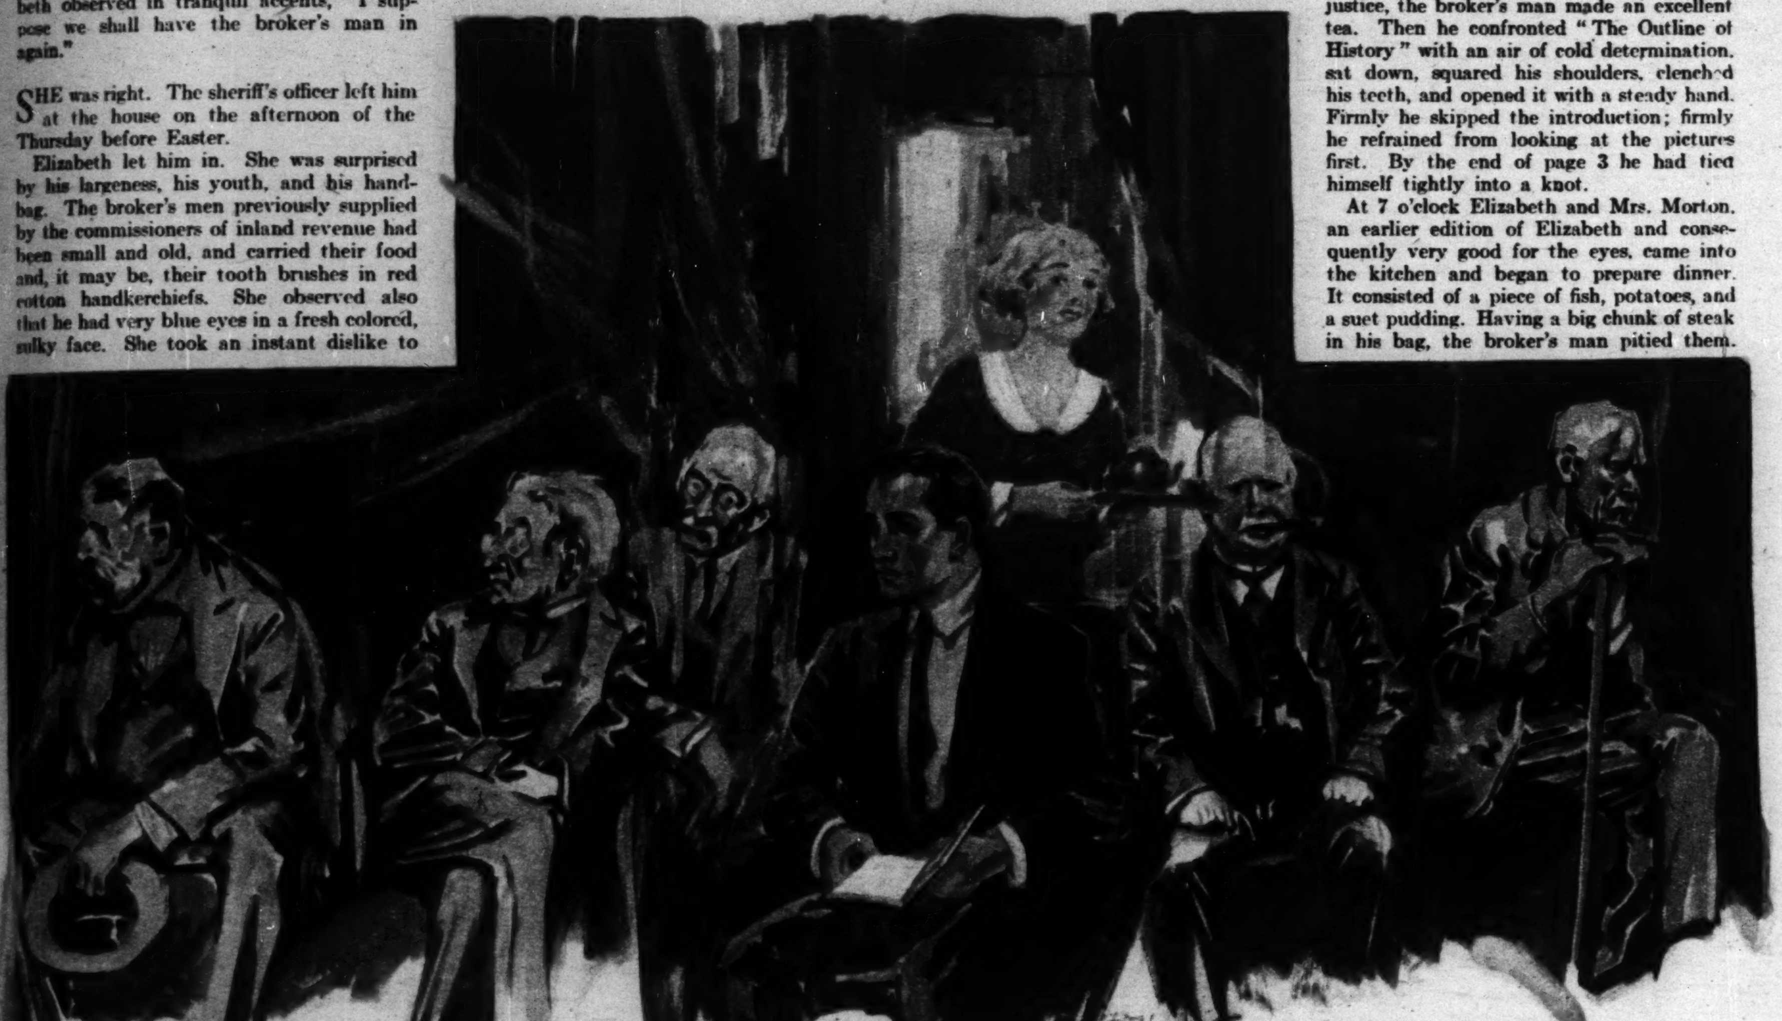
SHE was not quite as much at her ease as she looked; she perceived from the bitterness of the broker's man that she might be doing him an injustice. She wondered at her antipathy to this minion of the commissioners of inland revenue.

For all his bitterly rankling sense of injustice, the broker's man made an excellent tea. Then he confronted "The Outline of History" with an air of cold determination, sat down, squared his shoulders, clenched his teeth, and opened it with a steady hand. Firmly he skipped the introduction; firmly he refrained from looking at the pictures first. By the end of page 3 he had tied himself tightly into a knot.

At 7 o'clock Elizabeth and Mrs. Morton, an earlier edition of Elizabeth and consequently very good for the eyes, came into the kitchen and began to prepare dinner. It consisted of a piece of fish, potatoes, and a suet pudding. Having a big chunk of steak in his bag, the broker's man pitied them. Mrs. Morton amiably asked him how he liked his book. He answered that it was something like a book.

The dining room was next the kitchen; and from their frequent laughter he gathered that their spirits were unaffected alike by the poorness of the fare and his presence in the house. He wondered at them. To the other five houses in which he had stayed his presence had brought gloom. When the Mortons brought the dinner things into the kitchen he learned that they were going to a club dance.

"If your stern sense of duty compels you to sleep on the floor of the kitchen or the hall, you can. But there's a bed in the attic.



The earlier broker's men had sat through the hours ruminating on their past triumphs.

We shan't take anything out of the house," Mr. Morton said to him.

"Thank you, sir. I'll sleep in the attic," said the broker's man.

HE was relieved by their going. He could wrestle more manfully with the great work, undistracted by the possibility of Elizabeth's coming into the kitchen. To get a firmer grip on it, he took off his collar. Later he took off his coat and rolled up his shirt sleeves. At 9 he made a large supper; at half past 10 he went to bed.

He was down at 7 the next morning, breakfasted, and got to his book. At 8 Mrs. Mullins, the daily servant, came. She was very little surprised to find him in possession; she had made the acquaintance of four of his confrères during two years in that house; she was only surprised that so young a man should be in so responsible a position.

"It's allus the taxes. Su'thin' allus prevents their bein' paid in time. Mr. Morton says it's destiny—wotever that may be. But, lor' bless yer, none of them never minds whether the bailiffs is in or out," she said in a tone of pride.

She seemed eager to impart to him the knowledge of the Mortons she had acquired during her two years' service; and he did not check her. She always spoke of people as she found them; and they were nice people, though queer wasn't the word for it. They didn't know what regular hours was. Often and often she went away at 12 o'clock, and not a soul stirring. They were as likely to have breakfast at dinner time as at breakfast time any day. And how they kept themselves alive on what they ate passed her understanding. For days at a time it would be bacon for breakfast and a bit of fish for the rest of the day. Yet, she must say, they seemed to thrive on it. And they were that peaceful, it was surprising. In all the two years she had been in the house she had never heard any of them speak sharply to the others. Well, she supposed some famblies were like that. She sighed as if hers was not. All the same, Miss Elizabeth stood no nonsense. If she slacked over her work at all, she caught it—he might take his oath she did. And so did the tradesmen if they tried any of their games on. No, there was no nonsense about Miss Elizabeth. But Mr. Morton, he was a puffeck gentleman, he was. Why, the night she came up to ask what she should do when Mullins got blind at the Anchor and made a fool of himself and got locked up, he came straight down to the police station and bailed him out. And next day he sent for Mullins and gave him a telling-off which kept him sober six weeks.

"Only a gen'leman could 'a' done it," she added, and paused to take breath.

"Do you mean to tell me they never have rows?" said the impressed broker's man.

"Never a cross word 'ave I 'eard in this 'ouse," said Mrs. Mullins solemnly.

DURING the next two days the broker's man learned that Mrs. Mullins had told him the truth about the Mortons. Their hours were irregular; but they lived in peace. Mr. and Mrs. Morton took an interest in his progress through "The Outline of History" and told him the meaning and pronunciation of words strange to him. Elizabeth bade him a civil good morning when she first entered the kitchen and ignored him for the rest of the day.

He resented this. Infected by the communism which had been rife in the great industrial center in which he had spent his boyhood and youth, he had the English feeling that all men, and much more all women, were his inferiors very strongly developed in him, along with a very bitter hostility to the idle rich. The Mortons were not idle, and they were certainly not rich; but in some confused fashion they came in his mind under that heading—at any rate, Elizabeth did; and he was very hostile to Elizabeth. That did not prevent him from giving her, surreptitiously, a good deal of attention, of which she was quite aware, when she was in the kitchen.

She was also quite aware that this was inevitable, that no young man could help giving his most earnest attention to her. That did not prevent her from telling herself that it was awful cheek on the part of a broker's man. At the same time, though he knew well that she had never taken the trouble to look at him, she could have described him with far greater exactitude than he could have described her. She would have assured you that he must have an uncommonly good brain behind his broad, well molded forehead.

Then there came a clash. Mrs. Mullins did not come on the Sunday. The broker's man lit the kitchen fire and had breakfast—Mrs. Mullins had bought for him provisions for the next two days; then as early as 9 o'clock he heard the Mortons stirring; and presently Elizabeth came into the kitchen carrying a coal scuttle, crossed it, and picked up the coal shovel from the stove.

"Let me do that, miss," said the broker's man eagerly; and he rose from his book.

"No, thank you; I won't trouble you," said Elizabeth coldly.

"No trouble at all," said the broker's man.

"I shouldn't like you to soil your lily white hands," said Elizabeth.

The broker's man flushed deeply, spread out his hands, and looked at them as if he had never seen them before—strong, well formed, well kept hands, but certainly not lily white.

"My—my—lily white hands?" he said in a rather breathless voice.

Elizabeth moved towards the kitchen door.

"They weren't always like this—not by a long chalk," he said, glowering at her. "For four years, day in and day out—to say nothing of overtime—I handled steel bars—white hot. They did more work in those four years than any one you ever knew did in all their life." He paused, then added yet more bitterly: "And all the while I might have been fighting."

Elizabeth repented—at once and hard.

"I'm sorry. I didn't guess," she said quickly.

Still glowering at her he went on: "And why shouldn't I have a soft job that lets me read and expand my mind? All the folks I know grab a soft job whenever they get the chance. Do you think I got in much reading those four years? Why, I got home so done most nights that I didn't have a mind at all." Then he added fiercely: "And I'm going to stick to this job as long as I damn well like!"

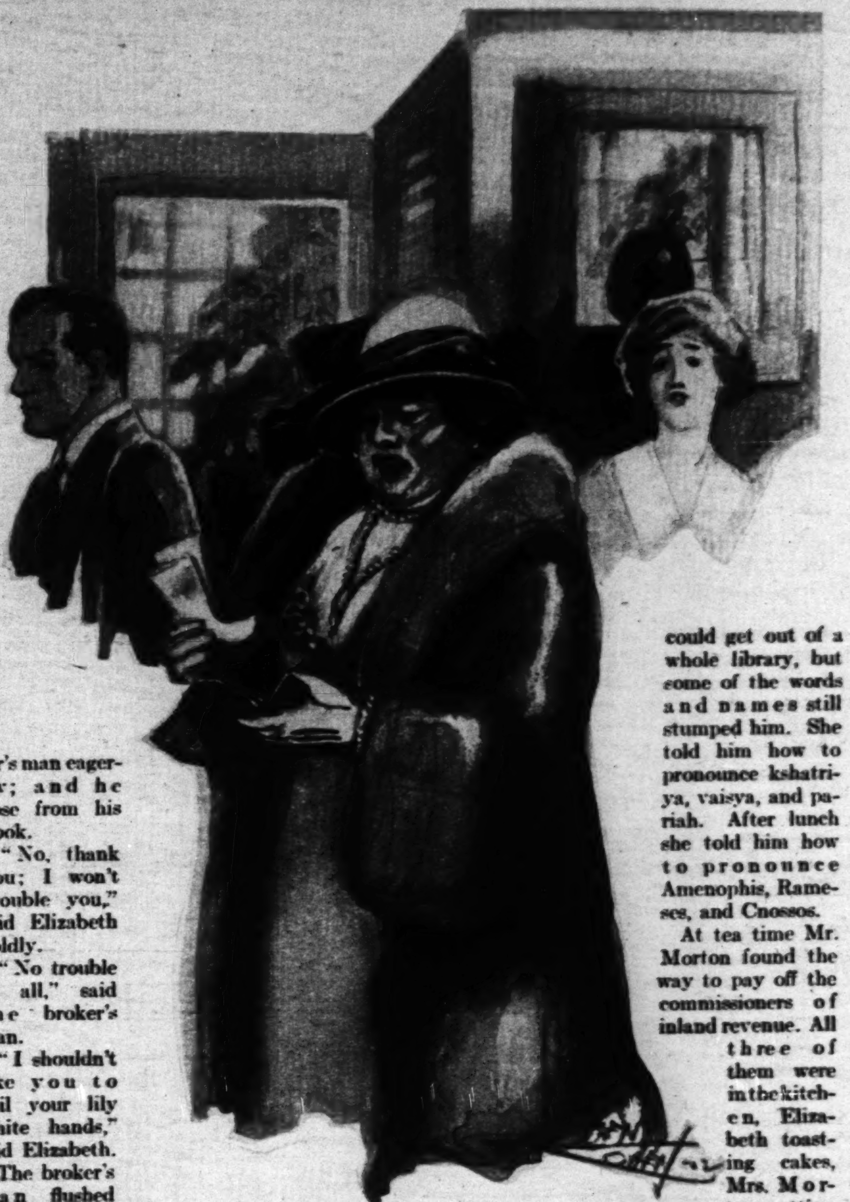
"Of course—I didn't know—you're quite right," said Elizabeth.

His face cleared with an astonishing quickness: "Of course, you didn't know," he said in an amiable, patient tone. "And I don't know why I talked to you like that. It's all a waste of time. You idle rich don't know anything, or understand anything. And now I'll just see to those coals."

Elizabeth let the accusation of idle wealth pass; meekly she let him take the coal scuttle from her and fill it; meekly she followed him upstairs and meekly she thanked him. Just for the time being she was feeling small. He went down to the kitchen and left her feeling uncommonly uncomfortable at having hurt his feelings by her unjust words.

WHEN she went down to the kitchen to prepare lunch she asked him how he was getting on with his book. She could do no less. He said that he was getting more out of it than he had ever supposed he could get out of a whole library, but some of the words and names still stumped him. She told him how to pronounce kshatriya, vaisya, and pariah. After lunch she told him how to pronounce Amenophis, Rameses, and Cnossos.

At tea time Mr. Morton found the way to pay off the commissioners of inland revenue. All three of them were in the kitchen, Elizabeth toasting cakes, Mrs. Morton setting tea things on the tray, Mr. Morton waiting for the kettle to come to the boil.



"There's no doing anything with an idiot like you."

"I know how we'll glut the maw of the bloodsuckers," he said in a tone of triumph. "We'll sell Shou Lao to Hardcastle. He has always wanted him. He's worth forty pounds; and he'll jump at him for thirty."

"But you're so fond of Shou Lao," said Mrs. Morton.

"Not as fond of him as I was; and neither of you care much for him."

"It's the crystal—it's not a good medium—it seems to me that the rays of light muddle up the form—I never quite get it," said Elizabeth.

"There's something in that. I could never have parted with him if he had been jade. I'll write to Hardcastle tonight," said Mr. Morton.

He made the tea and carried the tray upstairs. Mrs. Morton followed him.

"I didn't know you kept any animals," said the broker's man in a civil tone. "Is Shou Lao a horse or a dog?"

"Neither. He was a Chinese holy man; and my father was speaking of the crystal figure of him on the mantelpiece in the front part of his study."

"Ah, one of those ornaments," said the broker's man; and Elizabeth shuddered at the barbarous description of her father's collection of jade and agate and chalcedony and crystal. "They're queer but taking."

"Queer? They're beautiful!" said Elizabeth with a touch of indignation. "Why, if you were to live with things like that, they'd expand your mind quicker than books."

"Would they now?" said the broker's man quickly; then he added in a more cautious tone: "But thirty pounds is a lot to give for an ornament."

"Shou Lao isn't an ornament. He's a thing of beauty," Elizabeth protested. "And, of course, my father didn't give thirty pounds for him. He caught the dealers napping and got him for fourteen. You might very well spend an hour looking at those ornaments, as you call them; they'll improve another side of your mind—your sense of beauty."

"I know other things that will," said the broker's man quickly, looking at her, and pulled himself up short in the middle of the sentence and added: "I'll look at them more carefuly."

"Do," said Elizabeth; and she carried away the tea cakes.

When she came quietly downstairs in soft slippers next morning she surprised the broker's man, an empty coal scuttle at his feet, studying the hardstone figures and bowls and cups on the mantelpiece of her father's study, and thoughtfully scratching his head.

When she entered he picked up the coal scuttle hastily and said: "I've been looking at them. I think I begin to see what you mean. There's a lot in them if one could only get at it."

"It's merely a matter of looking at them and looking at them till they sink in. They're an education," said Elizabeth with enthusiasm.

"And that's what I'm after," said the broker's man. "That's the one your father's going to sell, I suppose." He pointed to the crystal Shou Lao. "I like it best. It's brighter like."

"It's quite right and natural that you should begin by liking it best," said Elizabeth.

Mrs. Mullins was not coming that day. Her Easter holiday extended over the bank holiday. The broker's man did not ask Elizabeth if he might help her wash up the used crockery. He helped her.

ABOUT the middle of the morning Mr. and Mrs. Morton went up to Hampstead Heath to look at the holiday makers. Elizabeth read a novel in the study. The front door bell rang. She went and opened the door to find on its threshold a big woman of forty-five, with a pleasant enough face, wearing a rich gown of plum colored satin, a cloak of Russian sables, and a big, bright hat. Round her neck a necklace of large diamonds, ending in a pendant set with large diamonds, sparkled brilliantly. Large diamond earrings sparkled in her ears, diamond bracelets on her wrists, diamond rings on her fingers. Opulence could go very little further. She looked rather shamefaced and she was frowning.

"Can I see young Burton?" she said.

"Young Burton? No one of that name lives here," said Elizabeth.

"He's the—the broker's man," said the bejeweled lady, getting the words out with some difficulty.

"You'll find him in the kitchen. This way," said Elizabeth, led the bejeweled lady to the top of the basement stairs, and added: "The door on the left."

The bejeweled lady thanked her and went down the stairs. Elizabeth returned to her book, marveling a little that the broker's man should enjoy the acquaintance of so sparkling a representative of the new rich.

Presently she became aware of voices raised high in the kitchen. They rose higher. She endured it for rather more than three minutes; then, outraged by this violation of the peace of the house, she went briskly down to the kitchen, jerked open the door, and stepped, scowling, into it as the bejeweled lady said firmly and distinctly to the broker's man:

"You're an obstinate, aggravatin', pigheaded young limb! That's what you are!"

"How dare you behave like this in a civilized house?" cried Elizabeth. "You ought to be ashamed of yourselves—both of you!"

They turned to her, both flushed, both with fiercely sparkling eyes.

"Don't you come interferin' between me an' my boy!" cried the bejeweled lady, fiercely.

"You get out into the street if you want to behave like savages! Get out at once!" said Elizabeth, if anything, more fiercely.

"Savages? Savages?" said, or, rather, shrieked the bejeweled lady. "I never—"

"Shut up, mother!" said the broker's man with extraordinary violence. "The young lady's quite right! You've no business to go rampaging about other people's houses in your tantrums!"

"It's disgraceful!" said Elizabeth.

cowed by the broker man's violence. She hesitated, swallowed hard, and then said in a less loud voice but bitterly enough: "He'd make a saint use language, he would."

"Well, don't use it here!" said Elizabeth. "If you want to behave like wild beasts go out into the street and fight there."

"Savages? Wild beasts? That ever I should——"

"Shut up, mother!" said the broker's man, again violently.

The bejeweled lady shut up.

"If you can't talk like civilized people you'd better stop talking altogether; and you'd better go," said Elizabeth.

The bejeweled lady looked at her hard; then she said in a civil enough voice: "Well, you're in your rights, miss. It is your house; and I oughtn't to have pitched into him here. But if you knew what I've had to put up with an' me only wantin' 'im to take his proper place and be a gentleman an' then to find him a low broker's man, you'd understand."

She had apparently recovered her temper completely.

She turned to the broker's man and said with calm, almost judicial severity: "There's no doing anything with a pig-headed young idiot like you; an' well I know it. I suppose you'll stop away till you've got over your sulking. But nobody shall say as I didn't give you the money to live like a gentleman if you wanted to; and here it is." She drew a thick envelope out of her vanity bag, threw it on the table, and, moving towards the door, added: "An' I wish you a very good day. An' I hope the young lady will give you a proper dressing down for shouting at me as you did. Good morning, miss. I'm sorry I disturbed you. I shan't give him the chance again, I can tell him."

"I don't want it," said the broker's man with manifest sincerity.

"You won't get it—not if you beg me on your bended knees," said the bejeweled lady; and she sailed out of the kitchen with an air of lofty virtue. She went out of the back door and shut it, not loudly but with decision.

"AGGRAVATING? Me aggravating?" said the broker's man in a hushed voice; then, turning to Elizabeth, he added: "I'm sorry, miss."

Elizabeth would have dearly loved to give him the dressing down the bejeweled lady had recommended with such gusto; but she could not bring herself to take instructions from her.

"What was it all about?" she said, stiffly.

"She came to get me to go back home; and the row began again."

"What was it about?" said Elizabeth.

"The original row I left home about. It began—let's see—I don't quite remember." He scratched his head to stimulate the thought process. "Oh, yes: she didn't like my tie. It wasn't bright enough."

Elizabeth laughed: "You really mean to say you left home and became a broker's man for a trifle like that?" she said.

"It didn't stop at the trifle. It doesn't."

"But what savages! How did you get these barbarous manners?" said Elizabeth.

"It comes of the life. The women get overworked and worried and irritable, and they have to take it out of somebody, so they take it out of the men when they come home and there's a row, and it becomes a habit. Goodness knows, my mother hasn't anything to worry her nowadays—since my dad left her all that money; but the habit goes on. The servants leave when she rows them, so she rows me," said the broker's man in the tone of one giving the complete, rational explanation of a natural phenomenon.

"It takes two to make a row. You must encourage her," said Elizabeth, coldly.

"I'm not particularly sweet tempered; and my mother—well, you heard her," said the broker's man.

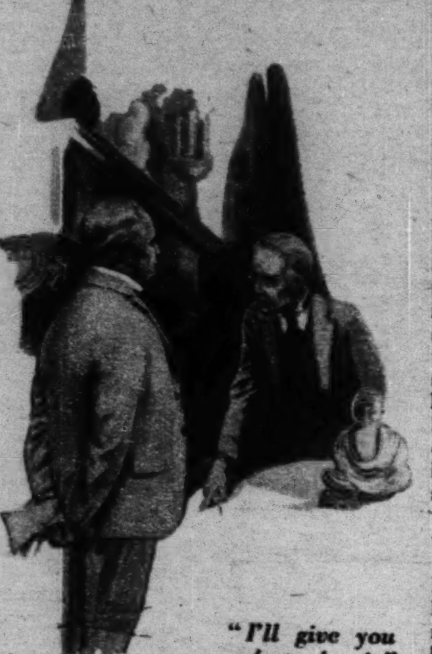
"Poor young man!" said Elizabeth, scornfully, and left him.

THE rest of the day passed peacefully. At tea time the broker's man engaged Mr. Morton in conversation about methods of expanding the mind other than books and received a lecture, with examples, on Chinese sculpture in hard stones. When Elizabeth was cooking the dinner he learned the meaning and pronunciation of the words that had worsted him during the day.

At the end of the instruction he said, with a sigh: "I've a lot to learn."

"Well, you've plenty of time to learn it in — about fifty years," said Elizabeth.

"Ah, but I don't want it when I'm old and it's no use to me," said the broker's man.



"I'll give you forty for it."

There was an expectancy in the air the next morning, for Lord Hardcastle was coming to buy Shou Lao. The broker's man seemed to take a rather gloomy interest in the matter. He observed to Mrs. Morton that it did not seem right that Lord Hardcastle should have so many mind expanding objects of beauty when he himself had none.

"But Shou Lao won't expand Lord Hardcastle's mind. He is merely a collector and interested in virtuosity, not beauty," said Mrs. Morton, lightly.

This was a hard saying, above the broker's man's head. He scratched it, rather unhappily. At 11:20 the famous collector arrived. The broker's man grew fidgety; covetousness assailed him. At 11:25 a happy thought came to him. Mr. Morton's study was a long room, divided into two by folding doors. The stove in the back part of it needed filling; he filled a scuttle with coal and carried it up. As he had hoped, the folding doors had been drawn back and he saw the crystal figure on the table and Lord Hardcastle and the Mortons standing round it. Covetousness grew violent in him.

Then he heard Mr. Morton say: "Oh, hang it all, Hardcastle! Twenty-five pounds is no price for a piece like this. It's worth forty."

"It was," said Lord Hardcastle in a hard, unpleasing voice. "But the prices of objects of art have slumped."

"Not of the real things like this," said Mr. Morton.

"Of everything," said Lord Hardcastle. "Anyhow, twenty-five is the last penny I'm prepared to give."

He was sure that Mr. Morton would not be selling Shou Lao unless he needed money badly.

"Oh, well—if only the bloodsuckers hadn't their claws in me," said Mr. Morton, with a sigh. "I suppose I shall have to——"

But covetousness had impelled the broker's man to the threshold of the front room.

"Beg pardon, sir," he broke in. "I'll give you thirty-five pounds cash for that figure." And out of the envelope his mother had thrown on the kitchen table he drew a packet of bank notes.

There was a stir as the four turned to look at him; and Lord Hardcastle put his eyeglass into his hard left eye the better to stare at the large, shabbily dressed intervener.

"B—But what do you want it for?" said Mr. Morton, hesitating.

"To expand my mind," said the broker's man simply; and he glared greedily at the crystal figure.

Lord Hardcastle laughed a harsh, grating laugh and said: "Now, that's devilish funny!"

"It's yours," said Mr. Morton to the broker's man.

"Here! Steady on! You offered it me for thirty," said Lord Hardcastle.

"And your last word was twenty-five," said the broker's man in a combative tone; and he laid three ten and one five pound notes on the table and picked up Shou Lao with an almost reverential hand.

"Hang it all! I'll give you forty for it, Morton," said Lord Hardcastle, in his turn furiously assailed by covetousness.

"It's obviously too late. It's the property of our young visitor," said Mr. Morton in a pleased voice. "If he likes to take forty for it he can."

"No, thank you," said the broker's man. "It's worth more than that to me, a lot more."

He seemed to get into the back room, fill the stove, and get into the hall in one movement.

Lord Hardcastle took his leave with some sulkiness. Mr. Morton went off to glut the maws of the bloodsuckers, as he phrased it. When Elizabeth and Mrs. Morton went down to cook the lunch they found the broker's man still gloating over his treasure.

"It does one good to have a thing like this," he said in a tone of immense satisfaction.

EARLY in the afternoon the sheriff's officer took him away. He left depressed, but as an honored guest. The extra ten pounds had smoothed the path to Pontings and summer frocks. They bade him come and see them when he was next free; and Mr. Morton gave him "The Outline of History" as a luck penny.

Elizabeth missed him. He had been an object of interest. The house seemed duller for his absence. She found herself wondering whether, accompanied by "The Outline of History," he was pursuing his leisured calling, or whether he had returned home, and whether, under the influence of Shou Lao, he was finding the decoration of that home excessive.

Four afternoons later she was alone in the house when there came a ring at the front door. On the threshold stood an exceedingly well dressed young man; a harmony in gray—a dark gray tweed suit, a tie of the same lighter gray as his socks, a gray hat, gray gloves. It was the broker's man.

Blushing, but self-possessed, he said that he had called to discuss with her father the expansion of his mind. Elizabeth should have found it odd that he should have called at an hour at which, as he must have observed, her father was always out. She did not. She invited him in and gave him tea. She could do no less for the purchaser of Shou Lao. The stuff for the summer frocks was already in the dressmaker's hands.

They were quite at their ease with one another. The expansion of his mind afforded them plenty of material for conversation. Then he told her that he had returned to his home in Bayswater. He had thought it best because he was "awkwardly situated." His father had left all his large war fortune to his mother. But if he married a lady he was to receive an income of six thousand a year. He had decided that a denizen of Bayswater had a better chance of marrying a lady than had a broker's man. Elizabeth agreed with him. Then he told her that he had called to ask her father to help him to expand his mind. He wished to come from 2 to 4 on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays to talk about the things which expand the mind and the difficulties which cropped up in his reading. For this he would pay a fee of seven guineas a week.

"Of course, I don't want Mr. Morton to feel tired at all," he added. "If he was out it would do just as well if I talked to Mrs. Morton or to you. I'm sure that this is the best way for me to go ahead."

Elizabeth doubted that her mother and she would prove as efficacious mind expanders as her father; but she said that she would lay his proposal before her father that night. He took his leave at 6 o'clock. Elizabeth was surprised to find that it was so late, that they had found so many things, viz.: the broker's man's feelings and aspirations—to talk about. She had not been bored. They interested her.

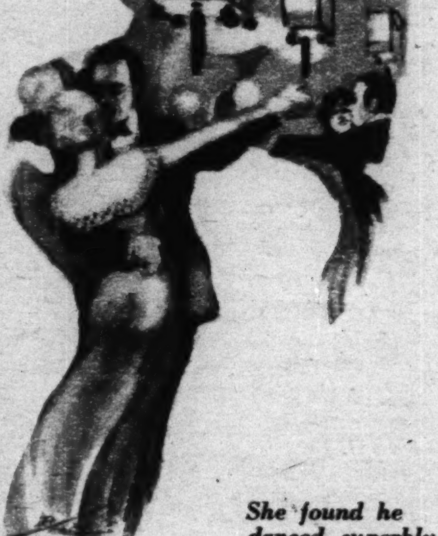
When, at dinner, she informed her father of his proposal, Mr. Morton said: "Excellent. An intelligent disciple, outside my own family, has been a long felt want of mine. And the money will be a blessing."

ACCORDINGLY the broker's man, as they continued to call him inaccurately, became a regular visitor. Indeed, it seemed to Elizabeth that he was always in the house. After his two hour mind expansion they gave him afternoon tea—they could do no less—and if Elizabeth alone gave him afternoon tea he stayed on till 6, or half past, or a quarter to 7. She did not fail to notice this. She grew rather disquieted. She suspected that one who pursued mind expansion so passionately might pursue other things with an equal vigor. She was something of an expert, for she had had as many suitors as Penelope, though she had not yet found Ulysses. Of course, such an aspiration in one who had been a broker's man was absurd. She told herself that it was absurd. However, there was always a reassuring humility in his attitude to her—not that he appeared to be naturally humble, except about his unexpanded mind.

Then on a Tuesday afternoon Bobsie took her to the Palace of the Dance. Bobsie was a suitor, a good looking young artist, whose considerable talent was becoming atrophied owing to the fact that his misguided father had left him six hundred a year. It made him eligible, but no Ulysses—a lack of moral fiber—he would have contrived to be the first man eaten by Polyphemus. But he was an admirable dancer. So was Elizabeth.

During the first dance Elizabeth saw the broker's man. He was dancing with one of the instructresses. He appeared to be enjoying it, and—wonder of wonders! the instructress appeared to be enjoying it, too. He must be an uncommonly good dancer. Also, he was wearing yet another suit she had not seen, and was a harmony in brown—a good brown. The number and variety and good taste of his expensive suits impressed Elizabeth. She might be a highbrow, but she was a female.

Before the next dance he came to her and rather timidly asked if she could spare him a dance. It was Bobsie who jumped at the suggestion. Never a glutton at exercise, he had lived richly the night before and well into the morning. He felt languid. Elizabeth was not languid. Moreover, he perceived that there was nothing to be feared from the broker's man; he wore his hair too closely cropped.



She found he danced superbly.

Elizabeth had gathered that the broker's man danced well; she found that he danced superbly. When she told him so he said with a rather shame faced air that he had been an expert in the clog dancing of his native north and to that this dancing was just child's play. With Bobsie's full consent she spared him eight dances. By the end of the third they had established their common rhythm for good and all; and she enjoyed them immensely. At the end of the eighth dance, with considerable less than his usual humility, he invited her to dance with him there on Thursday afternoon.

What could Elizabeth do? She had found the dancer of a dream. She accepted. Misgivings came later. She dismissed them.

BEFORE the Thursday afternoon was half through his humility had fallen from him as a cloak falls; he excelled Elizabeth in her own accomplishment. He became her master and teacher. It affected his talk between the dances; he asserted his own views of life as an equal. She had been to the Palace of the Dance with wittier and more cultivated men, but never had she enjoyed an afternoon there more.

He invited her to dine with him at the Savoy and dance at the Palace of the Dance on the next Monday evening. She was

A SAILOR'S WIFE

by Frank H. Shaw

Should the Men on the Sinking Ship Be Rescued and the Sick Wife Be Allowed to Die? Should She Live and the Others Perish?

IT was altogether against the company's regulations, as the marine superintendent took pains to state, but on account of Capt. Brentwood's good service the request should be granted.

"Only, it mustn't establish a precedent," he was informed.

"Don't intend it should," Brentwood made answer. "But I had to ask. Being married yourself you'll understand my feelings, sir. I'm all against carrying women at sea at the best of times—it's no place for 'em. I served my time with a skipper whose wife accompanied him every last, blessed trip he made—he couldn't call his soul his own, old Squeaker Wilmot couldn't. She found fault with everything; ran the ship. Didn't like the color of the mate's hair, and got him fired at Frisco. O, yes, there isn't room for women aboard an ordinary ship. With liners it's different, because they make arrangements; but in a freighter——"

"If you'd told me your views before," the superintendent said, smothering a grin, "I might have refused permission. We men have to stick by one another whatever comes, in these days, else where'd we be? But it isn't too late——"

"It is too late, sir. Permission's been granted. You know my wife, sir; but you don't know her as well as I do. I could no more go to her now and say she wasn't to make this coming voyage with me than I could commit barratry. I'm a bit addicted to blushing, for one thing; she'd smell a rat at once. No; she'll have to go. I suppose in a way I'm glad."

"There's such a thing as an official letter from the company, you know, Brentwood. Canceling earlier promises, eh—so forth? It could be worked. Mrs. Brentwood wouldn't be able to find fault with that."

"Couldn't she? That shows how little you know her. There are remarkably few things Mrs. Brentwood cannot find fault with when she is in the mood, let me say. Not that she does it nastily." He coughed, as though aware that he had conveyed a wrong impression of a woman with whom, in spite of many years' married life, he was still much in love. But he was, like many men, somewhat prone to speak with affected cynicism of his real deeper feelings.

"Mind you, we're making an unusual exception in your favor, Brentwood." The superintendent believed strongly in keeping the line's employés constantly aware of the debt of obligation they owed the firm. "And your having your wife aboard mustn't interfere in the least with the ship's work. There'll be trouble if anything of the sort happens."

"There'll be nothing of the sort happen. I've never allowed anything to stand in the way of Buntline & Spinnaker's interests, as you know."

"It's remembering that that's caused us to give the permission. But, speaking as a friend, if you'd really rather not—well, I'll be happy to do all I can." But Capt. Brentwood sternly refused the proffered mediation; and by way of clinching the matter proceeded to remove certain wall decorations from the bulkheads of his cabin. There was nothing whatever wrong with the pictures he took down, but his wife had her own ideas concerning adornments, and he wished to please her.

THEN he went home and announced the news. Seeing the growing light of happiness in Mrs. Brentwood's eyes, he felt extraordinarily glad that he had not availed himself of the superintendent's offered assistance. Although, on principle, and by reason of youthful experience—the experience that clings to the male mind through many years—he was opposed generally to the idea of women aboard ship, with his wife it was entirely different. Maisie Brentwood was different from the few other women with whom he had come in contact during his almost monastic life at sea. She was clinging, soft souled: and it was her faith in him that made Brentwood refuse to treat her as nine men out of ten of his acquaintance would have done. Maisie had established for her own abiding comfort an ideal man, worthy of all the confidence and worship of her trusting soul; and that man was the Brentwood of her fancy. Since ordinary male humanity endeavors to live up to the ideals of those with whom he is thrown in contact, Brentwood invariably thought of what might meet with Maisie's approval before committing himself to definite action. Morally and professionally he suffered nothing at all from this course of conduct; and the pair of them remained sweethearts.

"I'm mighty glad I managed to bring it off," he said. They were sitting in one chair before the fire as he spoke, although they had been man and wife for a goodly number of years. "It must be pretty lonely for you when I'm away at sea. I expect it's the loneliness that's made you look so pale and peaked." She smiled bravely at him, determined to speak no word of the curious little gnawing pain that occasionally troubled her.

"Six months' running about the seas will bring the color back and do you all the good in the world," he went on. "We'll make a sort of honeymoon of it, eh? Come to think of it, we never had a real moneymoon."

"A honeymoon with a middle aged wife!" she scoffed. "Am I looking so sick as you say?"

He kissed fleeting roses into her cheek. Their conversation fell to whispers; Maisie laughed once or twice. She spoke of the joy of being in constant companionship with this man, whose wife she had been for fifteen years, and who was yet, in many respects, a stranger to her; for the seaman's mate must perforce be widowed for eleven months out of every dozen. Listening, Brentwood felt a touch of indignation against the marine superintendent trouble him. What right had Massey to make suggestions in the way he had done? It didn't follow that because his own wife was a bit of a brimstone, other men's wives were tarred with the same brush! Yes, Capt. Brentwood was glad he had held out—insisted on carrying his wife. Maisie wasn't the sort to interfere with the customary discipline of the Wanama. She would adapt herself to sea conditions and prove a real help. He was conscious of warm and soothing glows running through him as he pictured dank, bleak nights of fog and rain and driving spindrift, when he could steal an hour from the bridge to slip below to his cabin, where Maisie would await him, with bright eyes and understanding smiles.

HE spent more money than he could well afford in the days that intervened before the Wanama sailed, in buying such cabin adornments as he fancied might please his wife. He laid in extra table delicacies with a lavish hand, and bought the cook an entirely new and up to date cookery book. He took the cabin steward to task, and said that the old custom of waiting at table in unclean shirt sleeves must cease forthwith. He set the carpenter to work to paint out saloon and cabin, and hinted that extra luxurious deck chairs might be considered. His officers noticed that a new humanity was growing in their skipper: he took a personal interest in their affairs, and was generous in the way of leave ashore.

But Brentwood believed that the Wanama was not nearly well enough equipped when that stout steamer passed through between the pier heads and entered the open roadstead.

"I think she's perfect," Maisie Brentwood said. She had recently stowed away certain glaring atrocities of cushions and curtains that offended her taste, but it may be that there were spots of moisture on the discarded adornments, too; because she realized the genuine affection that had dictated their purchase. "I'm going to be happier than ever I've been in all my life."

She laid a hand to her side where the pain was fretting, and smiled bravely. She made no mention of the roughness of the fare that was served to her for her first meal aboard; but when Brentwood went back to the bridge, she engaged herself in lengthy conversation with the steward, and, under his sympathetic guidance, ventured into that holiest of all holies on shipboard: the cook's galley. Here she found the brightly bound cookery book chocking off a soup kettle that was too small for the stove and the "doctor" himself wiping lather from his razor blade on one of its leaves—the leaf that dealt exhaustively with squeezed duck. When the next meal was served, not only Capt. Brentwood, but the mate and second mates opened their eyes widely prior to winking their satisfaction.

"The cook seems to have been getting lessons," the mate remarked.

"Ah, that's the new cookery book I got him—these hash spoilers only need a bit of teaching," said Brentwood; and Mrs. Brentwood said nothing concerning the blisters on her slim fingers.

NOW, a large and not uninteresting book could be written dealing with Maisie Brentwood's sojourn aboard the Wanama; but it would treat chiefly of minor, uninteresting episodes. No one wishes to be told of the new feet that were knitted into the second mate's shocking socks, nor of Mr. Meekins, the mate, writing a letter of apology and contrition to the girl he had quarreled with. It was not until a month had passed that the boatswain showed the conventional photograph of his wife and family to Maisie; but before a fortnight had elapsed the chief engineer was her devoted slave, and expressed the opinion, down there in the engineers' mess room—yes, slamming his work stained fist on the oilcloth covered table, that Mrs. Brentwood must certainly have good Scots blood in her veins, because of her worthiness. The fourth engineer, a cockney Irishman, named her for one of Belfast breeding, and was promptly sent down to perform an entirely unnecessary bit of work for his pains.

She did not seek favor: indeed, it was almost impossible to realize that she was actually aboard the ship. But, as day followed satisfactory day, Brentwood found himself wondering how it was he had contrived to endure previous loneliness without losing his reason. Life was indeed worth the living now; forgotten youthfulness pleasured his soul.

At Santos he took advantage of a yellow fever scare to carry Maisie away into the bracing hills, and found her a companion unbelievable. She was untiring; always ready to fall in with his wishes in the matter of strenuous tramps about the coffee plantations, although on infrequent occasions she admitted that the rough roads and the excessive heat tried her somewhat. But, seeing what she named for a shadow of discontent on Brentwood's face, she bravely made light of her troubles.

"I didn't know it was possible to be as happy as all this," the captain of the Wanama said. "Tell you what, old girl: I'm falling in love with you all over again. You're getting prettier, too. You always were that, but what I mean to say is, that you're sort of—sort of getting even prettier." There is nothing a woman past her prime so much delights in as a sincere compliment from the man who means all the world to her, and Mrs. Brentwood managed to laugh quite naturally and musically before her lips writhed with the pain that was troubling her.

"These are the days that a man's never going to forget," Brentwood opined, staring away at the violet and saffron wonderment of the surrounding hills, and consequently failing to notice her sudden pallor.

"O, I hope you'll remember them—always!" she said with an energy somewhat unusual to her.

"I'll have to slip down to Santos tomorrow," Brentwood said after a while, what time their fingers had been interlocked. "Ship's business, you know—urgent. But there's no call for you to come—you're better up here; though if you'd like——"

Maisie had no desire that way; and after seeing her husband off on the wide open, curtained cars, she did not immediately return to the inconspicuous hotel they doubtful about dancing with him in the evening—it is somehow more thrilling than dancing in the afternoon—but she compromised. She would dance but not dine with him. He accepted the compromise joyfully.

That Monday evening was delightful—entrancing would perhaps be nearer the mark.

When they came somewhat regretfully out of the Palace of the Dance he hailed a taxi. Elizabeth protested, with no great vigor, that she would rather go home by tube.

"O, no; let's go in comfort," he said, and with a firm hand on her arm he helped her into the taxi.

There is comfort and comfort. The taxi had not gone forty yards when he took a deep breath, and said: "Well, that was an evening!" and slipped an arm around her.

Elizabeth could never recall exactly what happened. She only knows that he was trembling and incoherent, and she was trembling and incoherent, and when her mind did grow clear he was kissing her, and she was letting him kiss her, and it had been arranged, without any definite statement on the part of either, that they were to get married.

Later, as the cab turned into the home stretch, she said, half laughing: "But it's absurd! And I can't understand it! It must be your beautiful clothes."

"But isn't it glorious?" said the broker's man.

patronized. Instead she walked along a palm bordered, pleasant street, where mule bells tinkled invitingly, and where almost nude children played and chuckled unashamed. After much waiting she was admitted to the sallow presence of the Brazilian doctor.

"I'M not afraid—not altogether afraid to hear the truth," she said, after the examination was over, and the doctor commenced to stammer. "Is it bad?"

"Yes, eet ees bad, Senhora. Not, perhaps, very bad. Ah; it is of a thousand pities that I have not the good English. An operation, eh? You unnerstan'? By a skillful man, no? In all Brazil there is not one of sufficient skill; but in England or New York—you savvy? Entreat your good husband to lose no time in taking you away. Please unnerstan'—it is not exactly of the utmost urgency, but every day that is gained gives you an increased chance of perfect recovery. On the contrary, every day lost is to our disadvantage—is that the word?"

"I can't interfere with the ship's business," said Maisie Brentwood stoutly. "It was a favor to the captain that I was allowed to make this voyage, doctor."

"It might have been better had you remained at home in your own land, Senhora. Here we have all the will, but perhaps not the experience, and the climate is against us. Whereas your so wonderful surgeons fear nothing and they work the miracles. I have the great admiration for the skilled surgeons of America and England. Meantime, we shall do what we can." He wrote a prescription; and that prescription crinkled against her bosom when she met Brentwood as he alighted from the cars.

"We're being tied up," he informed her. "Ship can't get away for days and days yet—there's some trouble up country, and they can't get the stuff down."

She linked her hand—it was growing daily thinner and more transparent—in his arm, and smiled happily upon him.

"Never mind: we're very happy here," she said. "And we must make the best of the good times we're having."

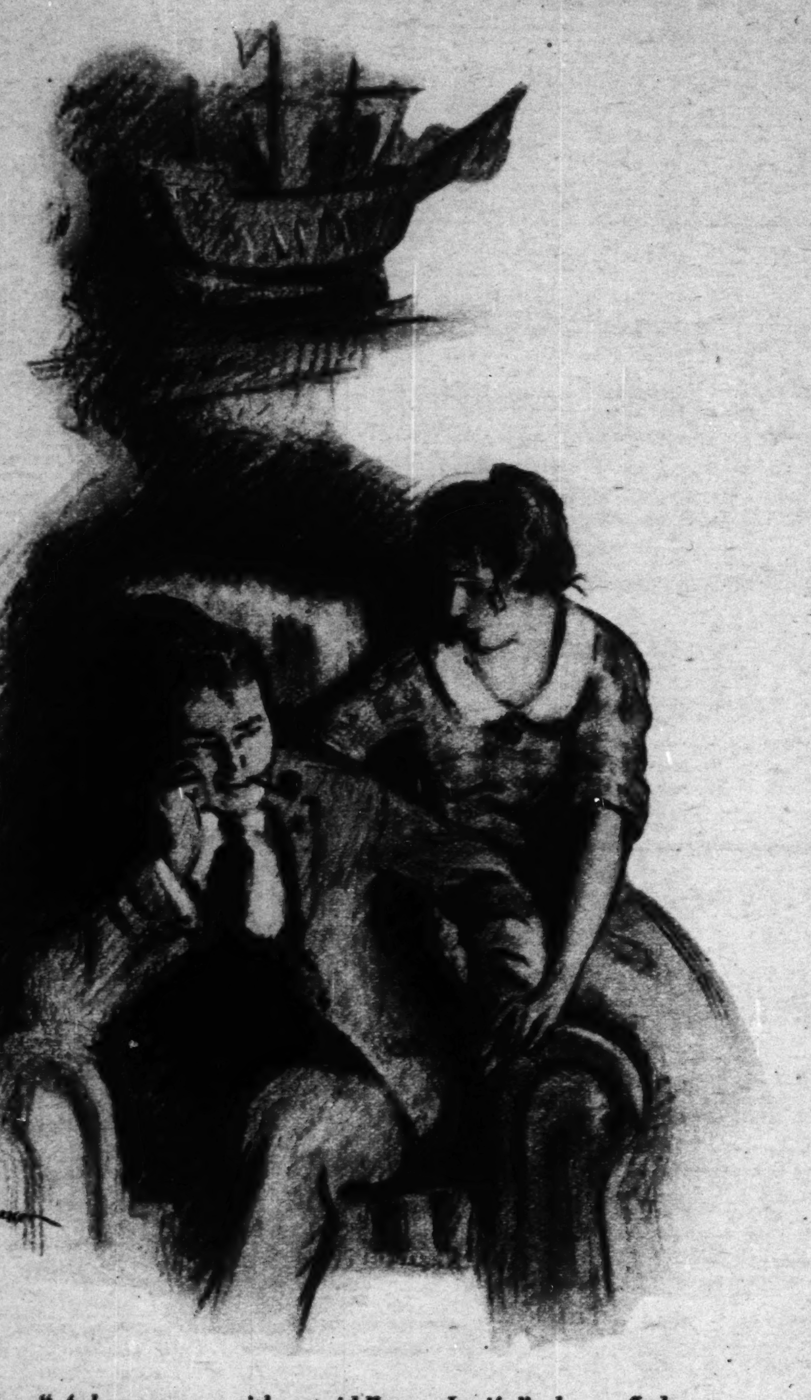
THE pain was more frequent and of a greater poignancy when the Wanama ultimately cast off her shore lines, and moved slowly out into the river, with a full cargo aboard. Maisie made no mention of it. She had laid in a good stock of the medicine prescribed by the doctor, and prayed for the best as she gulped down the nauseating doses. Several times she had tried to tell Brentwood all about the doctor's diagnosis, but something within her invariably prompted her to silence. Brentwood was a stalwart monument of health, with scant tolerance for ordinary human weaknesses; he had enormous faith in the open sea as a healer, and as he daily congratulated—quite sincerely—his wife on her improved good looks and rejoiced in her companionship, it was not for Maisie to dash the cup of happiness from his lips. Women are constituted that way: swallowing discomforts and actual agonies without a quiver of lip or eyelid to bespeak their suffering, so that the man they love shall continue to admire and believe.

True, in open water, away from the sweltering Brazilian heat, she did taste an improvement in her health. The pain, though acute at times, was more intermittent; and there were long spells with no actual pain at all, indeed, during which intervals she fondly hoped against her own belief, that the trouble was finished and done with. She had her reward in Brentwood's maintained happiness and satisfaction. The Wanama's captain found time to study intricate tomes dealing with the higher navigation; his ambition was rekindled; he determined to seek the greatest honors attainable in his arduous profession.

"I'll go in for liners," he told Maisie boisterously. "This sort of being together grows on a man, makes him feel a fool for wasting the earlier years in this tramping job. Have you realized how thoroughly you and I have got to know each other during these months?" Maisie patted his arm and stared outboard at the shimmering sea, in order that he should not see the convulsive working of her throat.

"It has been good," she admitted, after a lengthy pause. "Sometimes it seems—it seems as though it was too good to last. I've never been so happy in my life." She laughed on the word, and Brentwood heard no false note.

"It's going to last," he said. "It's got to. You wait a bit—I'll get a fat job on the Atlantic Ferry—home every three weeks for a clear week at a time, and you'll hardly have realized that I'm away before I'm back." He planned with the impulsive eagerness of a boy about to depart on holiday; and Maisie aided and abetted him. Detail by detail they furnished the new house that would receive them; once, in a curiously husky voice, Brentwood mentioned a possible nursery. Until now—so little had they known each other in the years of separation—he had never dared to give utterance to his main ambition: to father a strong, blue eyed son, who should in his time fare forth upon the riotous waters as his forebears before him. Knowing what she knew and fearing what she feared, Mrs. Brentwood played the gay game of self deception through the golden tropical days, what time the Wanama hissed and splashed and throbbed her way towards the north.



"A honeymoon with a middle aged wife," she scoffed.

CAME then a morning when Brentwood, returning for his early visit to the bridge, found her white, gasping, and tortured.

"What is it?" he demanded, with a quiver in his voice that none of his subordinates had ever heard there. When it was possible, Maisie told him: full confession wrung from her unwilling lips by reason of her agony

"But that chap was only a Dago!" Brentwood protested. All the Anglo-Saxon's scorn of the Latin vibrated in his words. "It's hardly likely he would know. You tell me your symptoms, old girl—there's a book in the medicine chest that tells you all about anything."

"No, he was right," Maisie said in her womanly wisdom, which is inevitably greater than blundering man's. She detailed symptoms, and later, thumbing the pages of the wise tome, Brentwood realized the truth of her diagnosis. After the first staggering shock he refused to lose heart. An operation was necessary, was it? Very well; that operation should be performed. All that was necessary was that the Wanama should reach port at the earliest possible moment—and he was the man to see to that. He had never had an opportunity to prove what the ship could really do at a pinch, but now that the chance had come he was prepared to make records for the line. He took the surly chief engineer into his confidence.

"They'll raise Cain about the coal we'll use, Mac," he stated; "but we're going to do it."

"Aye. I've a few oddments o' cash put by in a pairfectly sound bank, Capt. Brentwood," stated the presiding deity of the pulsating engine room. "Gin Buntline & Spinnaker raise the hell they're capable o' raisin', ye can draw on me for the limit o' ma resources. Ye'll get speed." There was really no need to urge the ship's people to their utmost endeavors. As soon as the word was passed a new spirit seemed to animate them from chief mate downwards. In their own unostentatious way these hard bitten men had learned a great affection and reverence for Maisie Brentwood. They compared notes, and found that all had in some greater or lesser degree profited by her presence aboard. In consequence the Wanama picked up her heels and fled gallantly towards the northern latitudes where hope beckoned. Somewhere beyond the clean cut rim of the horizon science and almost superhuman skill were waiting—if only they could be secured in time. That was what it amounted to, when all the trimmings were discarded; the Wanama was embarked on a headlong race against time. The pity of it was there was so little that the majority of them could do. They were palpitating with eagerness to serve, but beyond performing the ordinary routine tasks, nothing of a sacrificial nature came their way. They had all the disposition to martyr themselves for the cause of Maisie's life but none of the martyr's opportunity came to them. With the stokehold and engine room staff it was different; they toiled like furies in their sweltering workrooms; and with a wide open throttle the Wanama raced where before she had lagged. The steward and cook put their heads together, recovered the despised cookery book from its limbo in the galley coal locker, and devised fearful and wonderful sickroom dainties.

Brentwood himself read every volume the ship carried—yes, even down to the weird works on necromancy proffered him by the donkeyman, who was darkly reported to be writing a book on black magic; he applied remedy after remedy, and remembered forgotten prayers which he hurled vigorously in the direction of a jealous Creator who had apparently remembered some forgotten sin of early youth and visited judgment on his head after much patient waiting.

Maisie conscientiously did her best to recover, and there was not a soul aboard who knew of her pain riddled, sleepless nights, when she lay staring through burning eyes at the beams overhead, and clenched her hands until the nails scored her palms to restrain the cries that drove to her parched lips. Every morning she averred she was a little better; and Brentwood, possessing a pain quickened sight, understood that she lied.

"But we'll make it—yes, we'll make it in time," he told the chief.

"We will—if engines can do it. Give us this smooth water clear along an' ye'll be surprised what we will do. Gin you o' the deck will only watch yer steerin' o' her—look at that wake astern there—as crooked as a giddy corkscrew!—we'll howk her home in time. For the mercy o' God, Capt. Brentwood, put the fear o' death into they heedless quartermaster." And Brentwood did—so that the hastening steamer's wake lay like a ruled line across the sea floors. If the weather continued fine——

BUT the barometer had something to say about that. It was falling steadily: too steadily for the time of year. One morning the glassy sea floors were troubled by a purposeful swell that ran with weight from the west of north, as indication of the troubles brewing beyond the skyline.

"Right in our teeth when it does come," said Brentwood bitterly. "But we must make the best of the fine weather whilst it lasts, Mac."

During the next twenty-four hours the Wanama exceeded her previous best day's run by thirty-two miles; but the sea was already crisping, white caps were running in a threatening procession towards the sturdily trudging bow, and the northern horizon was fringed with steel colored, ragged clouds. The sun set in a bewilderment of crimson and gold and violet, and the afterglow held a menaçing yellowish light. The barometer continued to fall with merciless steadiness, and the summit of the column of mercury grew concave.

Brentwood, against his better judgment, informed Maisie of the massing odds. "Hold on to life as tightly as you can, dear girl," he said thick throatedly. Maisie rubbed her white lips with a hand that had lost its steadiness and, when the color came, smiled.

"I've not felt so well for a week," she lied bravely. "And if the pain is bad sometimes, it's not more than I can bear. Look, I'm laughing."

The Wanama dived slowly into the trough of a swell, and the jar of the racing propeller shook the woman where she lay. Brentwood went on deck to make such arrangements as were in his power for the easement of the ship; and his wife had recovered from her faint before he returned. Being an experienced seaman, one very wise in weather lore, the skipper of the Wanama refused to blind himself to the possibilities. The indications showed that the steamer was in for a gruelling; possibly as bad a bout of weather as she had experienced since first she left the launching ways, with the spilled wine still wet on her bow. He turned his face towards a sky from which hope had been wiped as by a sponge, and cursed himself in that he had ever known sufficient folly to bring his wife into such danger as now threatened her. He blamed himself for all the happening: but for his selfish desire to share Maisie's company she had been snugly ashore; within reach of skilled attention—slim fingered surgeons could have ministered to her, instead of a many thumbed blunderer who had nothing but deep love and willingness as an equipment. There was so little he could do—so little, except to drive the ship headlong towards the port of salvation. This he vowed to do —no matter what happened in the result.

MEANTIME, he racked his brains to devise means for his wife's easement. The ship's store of drugs was pitifully limited; he used the pain killers to the best of his ability. Occasionally he opened the instrument case and fingered the shining tools therein, wondering how any human being could possess courage and skill sufficient to employ them in their rightful work; wondering whether the time would ever come when he would be forced to essay a task, the mere thought of which turned his blood to ice.

That night, studying his wife's sleeping face by the indifferent light of a shaded candle, he told himself that death's shadow rested there; and he spent the hours of darkness between the bridge and the engine room, uttering appeals to all men he met to do their damnedest—their damnedest, because on them rested the life of the suffering woman. By dawn the Wanama was pitching evilly into a boiling head sea; and there was a moaning cadence in the growing breeze that told a certain tale of the unleashed forces beyond the green blue rim of the lifting sea.

The second engineer and the carpenter between them devised a cunning cot that should so absorb the shuddering vibrations of the racing propeller as to permit Maisie to lie in something approaching ease; and the easement of her pain caused her face to brighten and a tone of hope to come into her voice. Brentwood promised incoherent rewards as the two inventors flushed and looked ashamed. The chief engineer, displeased with the youth of the fourth, insisted on keeping that youngster's engine room watch in person, so that the throttle might be properly tended and the terrible racing—that meant a certain loss of speed—be reduced to a minimum.

But the weather worsened steadily; the gale was now growing monstrous; its scream was as the scream of laughing furies. Steady processions of white combed waves galloped over the Wanama's plunging forecastle head, and clean swept her decks. White water swirled through the clanking washports; bitter spindrift rattled against the bridge dodgers; the sky veiled itself in livid, ragged edged masses of cloud, from beneath which the ferocious squalls came roaring, to lay irresistible hands on the laboring fabric and thrust her back whence she came. Presently it became necessary, lest irremediable accident should arise, to lessen the impetuous beat of the engines and slow down—the Wanama was doing herself more harm than good by thrusting into this crashing smother.

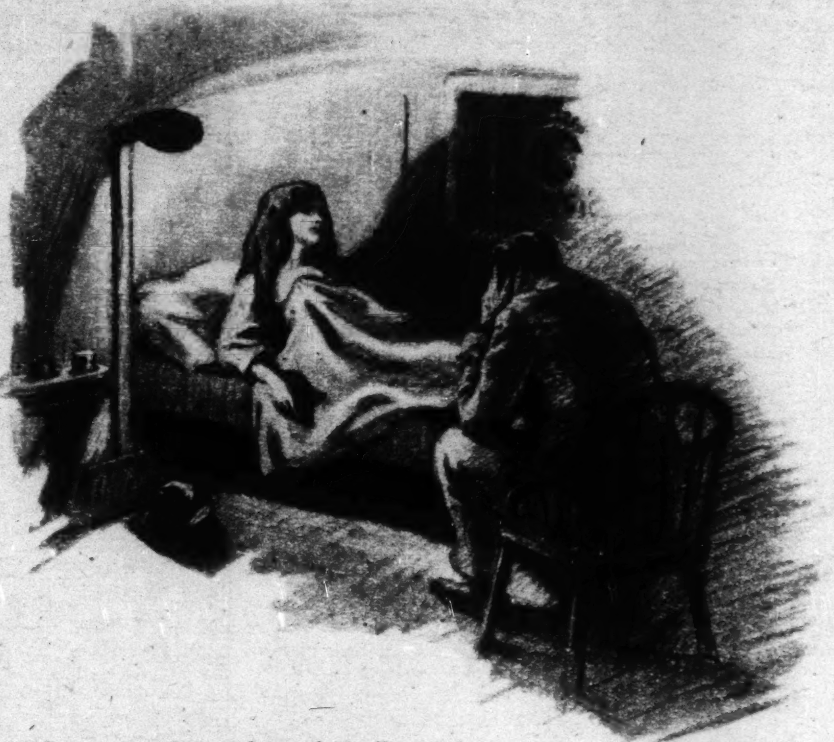
Brentwood studied the last day's run with gloomy eyes. On the average the ship had made a bare ten knots per hour, and every succeeding hour meant a further diminution. He turned from his calculations to the barometer—there he found not even the thinnest thread of hope. If anything, the weather would grow worse—they were in for a gale that might become historical.

With this knowledge in his soul he went below and talked cheerfully to the woman who was growing dearer to him as hope receded. He was at the best a poor liar: but he kept his face in shadow and averted as he spoke a wonderful tale of speed; of improving weather. All that was really necessary was that Maisie should keep in good heart and have faith in her husband and his ship. She must not let her spirits droop: he was convinced that she had a better color and that her eyes were brighter. He rested his hand on the side of the cot when he made this statement; and when he left the cabin Maisie laid her lips on the spot where the damp of his fingers still remained.

Worn, salt soaked, haggard, Brentwood discarded his useless oilskins after an unbroken thirty-six hours on the bridge, what time he had toiled like a maniac to bring the Wanama from the gulping throat of death to the sweeter openness of life; and, slipping off his sea boots, tiptoed into the presence of his dying wife. She was dying, he knew, when he saw her face. The hours of his absence had brought an affrighting change; though she was now asleep it was, indeed, a sleep that was own brother to death. He gulped sickly. But there might still be a chance. The weather was still as bad as it had been at its worst; but there were hopeful signs of an improvement on the morrow. Given a spell of smooth water and light winds he would drive the Wanama in such a fashion as should astound seafaring humanity.

He would permit nothing to stand in the way of a successful issue to his agony. Only one thing mattered—this truth hammered into his numbing brain with merciless strokes that shook him where he stood—that Maisie should be given her chance. He had spent pain racked hours on the bridge remembering the golden days of her health; muttering incoherent thanks to God for the happiness that had been his, and—yes, Maisie's.

IN his own fashion he thought to appease his Creator's wrath by this sacrifice. He had made vows, reckless vows—offering to sacrifice everything if only Maisie might be saved. And he'd do it, too, by God! Let him have a chance and he'd show what a man could do with a ship—the age of miracles was not yet passed. He repeated his vows, but broke off short in the repetition as the bridge whistle sounded. Maisie stirred uneasily; cursing, Brentwood snatched the whistle from the tube.



"So you've been—been lying."

"Quiet, you fool!" he hissed.

"Come up, sir, please," said the second mate, and there was a fresh note in his voice to tell of some great excitement. Brentwood would have questioned further but for the stirring of his wife; and this was her first sound sleep for many hours. Muttering anathemas on the head of the inconsiderate officer he passed into the outer cabin, donned his clammy oilskins and sea boots; dashed his sou'wester earflaps under his chin, and left the comparative calm of the cabin for the howling inferno of the deck.

Solid water surged past his legs as he closed the door behind him; a sharp edge of wind hurled spray clipped him painfully in the eyes and teeth. The darkness was baffling; until a sharp zig-zag of lightning ran down the shrieking sky, to show him his bearings. He clawed at the hand rails of the bridge and hauled himself up.

Going, he thought in a detached way that the second mate would get his walking ticket at the end of the trip. He was a weak nerved young idiot who thought the weather was growing a bit worse and hadn't the pluck to see it out alone. That was it—the terrible loneliness of the storm had frightened him. He was a steam trained sailor; not one of your old stick and string kind, who'd rather die than admit to ordinary human weaknesses.

"Right enough, it is blowing a bit," gulped Brentwood. He found it necessary to drop on hands and knees and crawl across the bridge to the weather corner; to stand upright against the yelling ferocity of the wind was beyond even his iron strength. Then he hauled himself upright behind the dodger, clawing at a human arm to aid himself; he bawled into a remote ear: "What's wrong? Getting seasick?"

"THERE!" bawled back the watch officer. There was a suggestion of an outflung, pointing arm. Beyond showed an infinitely thin and unreal wisp of yellowish light that was climbing—climbing, with a mysterious wilderness of ragged cloud in its immediate vicinity. Then the wisp disappeared, greater darkness fell, to be relieved by a falling trail of vividly colored stars.

Hardly had the last star burst and died than a trail of ragged light, almost blinding in its intensity, shattered the gloom. The terrible lightning appeared to hang suspended between sea and sky; for appreciable seconds the horrible pall of night was parted. A ghostly sheen ran along the boiling tumble of wave crests, and the blackness on either side appeared even more intense by contrast. It was, Brentwood thought dully, as if the gates of the pit itself had suddenly opened to reveal the horrors beyond. He was raising his dripping hands to rub his dazzled eyes when the watch officer tugged at his arm.

"There, sir—there!" he yelled. The ship was plain to behold, staggering there in the hissing, bellowing hell broth. A sailing ship, evident to the seared sight; for even after the monstrous brilliancy of the lightning had vanished, the picture itself was photographed on the watchers' retinas. Their brains had been sensitive plates, recording realities for future guidance. A sailing ship in sorry case, with main and mizzen masts gone by the board, helpless on her beam ends, with huge watery avalanches streaming and thundering over her; she stood for all an embodiment of all the tragedies the devouring sea had ever consummated. Forlorn she was, piteously helpless. Case hardened as he was to the rigors of deep water, troubled to the deeps of his soul by his own private agonies, Brentwood knew a wave of pity shiver through him; he gulped.

"Poor devils! My God!" Then the darkness fell like a solid thing; it was as though the Wanama plowed her tortured way through solid indigo. There was now no single glimmer in all the ravening gloom, save for the sudden sparkle of spindrift as it came flying into the glow of the swinging masthead light. Until a pallid blue flicker showed ahead, died down, gathered strength, blazed out, illuminating the upleaping wave tops and adding to their monstrous menace.

"Blue light!" said the second mate. "She's seen us, sir. Shall I—shall I answer?" He was answering the instinct of the sea, that bids a man strive to the uttermost to succor his fellows on whom the greater trouble has fallen; the blessed spirit which laughs at danger and difficulty and forgets to doubt human ability. There are no human limitations recognized by the real sailor when precious lives are at stake.

He commenced to warp himself towards the wheelhouse where the signal rockets were stowed, but Brentwood's hand closed vicelike on his stiffened arm.

"Wait!" Almost before he understood his own action, less than half conscious of what he was doing, the skipper moved to the switch box and extinguished mast head and side lights. The lurid danger of the strugglers out there beyond had not sufficiently impressed itself on his conscious brain to blind the subconscious mentality of the root idea of many days. He was working to gain time—he was racing against death; every minute counted.

"Mustn't raise false hopes—impossible—can't do anything!" he heard himself shouting against a covered ear. Speaking, he understood that he was justifying his action to himself more than to his subordinate. If it hadn't been for Maisie—but there was Maisie!

"Can't you see?" he roared. "Impossible! In this seaway—boat couldn't live—it couldn't live. Night time." He spat the acrid salt from his lips with an oath.

"We could try." There was indignant reproach in the junior's tones, unnaturally raised as they were. This was entirely against the law of the sea as he had learned it through the strenuous days of his youth. He was not long since out of sail himself, spite of Brentwood's belief that he was merely a steam trained man. He could picture and understand the agonies that were being suffered out in the void of night. Another blue light blazed out; by its flare intimate details of the wreck could be observed.

DURING the existence of the unnatural sheen the watchers saw the single remaining mast crash overside and saw high, white water leap up triumphantly to smother the sheer hulk.

"She's going—too late!" gasped Brentwood, wondering dully why the sensation of relief in his heart should be so pronounced. But after a lapse of moments the green blue light showed again: the windjammer was still alive, still battling furiously against the appalling odds.

"Aren't you going to try?" the second mate asked indignantly.

"We can't do anything—you're young—don't understand. Insuperable difficulty—risking other lives foolishly——" Brentwood did not know what he was saying, except that it was necessary to convince this skeptic of the entire unreason of his mad brained suggestions. To stop the Wanama, to spend precious hours in an utterly futile attempt at a rescue that no human being could effect, while his wife was hanging on to dear life minute by minute—he must convince the youngster.

He yelled explanations. He even explained why he had extinguished the steaming lights and failed to reply to the distress signals. "No use arousing false hopes," he said again and again. "The thing's out of the question—clean out of the question. A madman wouldn't try—he daren't."

"I dare," the youngster said definantly. "At least, we can stop and answer—stand by till daylight. Leaving them like this—it's hellish—hellish!" In fancy the lad saw himself dragging the perishing men from death, ere the closing jaws locked together in their final snap. The romantic element in him was alive and mingling with the desire to succor; personal danger was lost sight of completely. He wanted to do something; this harsh indifference to the needs of fellow seamen stirred hot wrath in his soul.

"We can't—and there's my wife. You've forgotten her." The youngster ceased his protests suddenly, understanding glimmering at last. He had forgotten dying Maisie and her need. But that smoldering resentment against circumstance did not cease to tear him.

"It's hard, sir—it's hard."

"All life's hard, my son. If there'd been a single chance we might——" Brentwood decided not to carry on with that line of argument; because he was uneasily aware that there was a fighting chance. He had, in youth, engaged in rescue work no less difficult than this; he had taken part and lot in performing some of those ocean miracles of which the placid, earthbound world knows so little. Nothing was impossible at sea, when the cool daring of seamen of the right sort—such men as manned the Wanama—was taken into account. Another blue light flared out and remained unanswered; as though those on the wreck had given up hope of immediate assistance, a rocket soared afresh into the lowering clouds. Fearful lest a further lightning flash should blaze across the night and reveal the full plight of the sailing ship, afraid lest his iron resolution should waver, Capt. Brentwood issued curt instructions to his junior to proceed on his course, and went below wearily to his cabin.

WITH the screaming outer clamor deadened by closed doors, his greater thought turned immediately to his wife. He had done right. "Whom God hath joined—" It was laid down in Holy Writ that nothing must come between man and the wife of his bosom. Those sufferers were strangers, men he would have passed unnoticed in the streets, but Maisie—she was Maisie, the most precious possession he had ever known. Yes: he was quite right, he decided, as he ridded himself of the oilskins and seaboots and tiptoed into the inner cabin. Very quietly, holding his breath, he moved to the side of the cot where she lay. She was awake; her eyes fixed themselves on his face. She reached up a thin hand and touched his sleeve.

"My man!" she whispered, and, speaking, her lips twisted with the pain wakefulness had brought. He clutched that restless hand as though he would crush the bones; his chest heaved spasmodically.

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

He licked his salted lips and stared hard at a picture on a distant bulkhead, whilst his heart slogged furiously in his breast.

"Nothing," he said. "Bad weather makes a man anxious. You, too—I'd hoped you would sleep on, right through the night. Cheer up—we're doing a little better now—hurrying, eh? We'll have you home and in safe hands before you know——"

He was thinking that he had done right. It mattered more that this one woman should be saved—he was sure that she would be saved—than that all those unknown men out in the night's wildness should be dragged from death's teeth. Windjammer men they were—men who hardly mattered in the great scheme of things. If their lives were saved they'd simply get drunk——

Argument after argument presented itself to his brain. And it was impossible that any one should know of the Wanama's action in the matter. No one could tell that it was the Wanama that had passed shadowlike through the night. There need be no entry in the ship's log—he would see to it. Looking at it from that point of view, the thing was safe as houses. And the weather was certainly too atrocious to permit of an attempt at rescue. By dawn that weather might abate, and then he could shove the Wanama through it for all she was worth; make up lost timing—get home in time. He'd done right—any other man in his position would assuredly have done the same.

"What is it?" The thin hand tightened on his sleeve. "Look at me. There's something wrong——"

"It's nothing. How's a woman going to understand? It's nothing." Under the tan and the sea grime his face flushed, embarrassment showed in his manner. Not for nothing had he said that Maisie could read him like an open book, and the agony of her body appeared to give her soul a greater detachment still. "You see, with this bad weather, sweetheart—fear of being too late——" He stammered, tried to release his cuff from the detaining fingers, cursing his telltale face.

"What's the real truth?"

WITH cold sweat beads mingling with the undried brine on his forehead, he told the truth, against his better judgment. In the telling—and he was curtness itself as he spoke—he endeavored to make light of the tragedy. "There'll be another ship coming along—we're right in the track. Besides, that ship isn't as bad as she thinks she is. They've lost their heads." His voice failed to carry conviction. He repeated his words, with even less conviction, because of the accusation in Maisie's eyes.

"It means losing you," he concluded gaspingly.

"Now, tell me the real truth. If I wasn't here what would you do?"

"Try my damnedest!" he said, speaking on impulse. And there was a note in his voice that caused Maisie to smile quietly.

"So you've been—been—lying?"

"It isn't lying. I've you to think of. You mightn't understand all you mean to me—and it's pretty nearly impossible."

"It is altogether impossible. Look at me. Wait." She raised herself on an elbow and drew her face closer to his face, her eyes searching his unsteady eyes. After a moment Brentwood looked away.

"Go and try," said Maisie, sinking back on the pillows. "You've got to try."

"I won't—I can't. I won't do it. Your life means more to me than everything else. Things up on deck are worse than I told you. And every minute counts for you. Think I'm going to lose you so long as there's a living chance? I won't——"

"You're going to let me stand in the way of your duty! Shame on you! What would men think of you? I'm only one woman—we've no children. Go and do your best."

"You don't know what you're saying. It might take hours—days. Days! We're running against time as it is—every hour tells. We can't try anything before daylight, and that's six hours away. We're going on."

But his voice was wavering, and Maisie laughed a little.

"You're going to rescue those men, husband mine," she said, quietly triumphant. "Do you think it would help me to know that my life had been bought at the price of theirs? Could you look people in the face afterwards, knowing that you'd left men to drown?"

"If I had you safe, yes," he said stoutly.

"That's all you know. I know you better than you know yourself. Go and try." And, after many arguments, Brentwood went and tried.

THE rocket that shot upwards from the Wanama's bridge was answered by another rocket from the wreck. Fresh blue lights flared; a tar barrel was ignited.

"Morse him—there'll be somebody aboard able to read it—that we'll stand by and try rescue at first opportunity," said the skipper into the second mate's ear. The tiny lamp dotted and dashed in obedience to the hand on the key. After an eternity of waiting there came a reply that would have been grotesque under other circumstances. Unfitted with signaling gear, compelled to improvise with a wavering oil lamp and a scrap of sail cloth, the sailing ship said:

"Don't hurry, but we're drowning."

Brentwood, forgetting his own personal anguish now in the clean seaman's desire to save life, determined, once embarked on the venture, to conquer the destroying sea, took the Wanama closely to windward of the wreck, that she might benefit by the shelter of his lee. Followed a period of galling inaction, until that inaction became unbearable. By now all hands of the Wanama were clustered on or under the bridge, drawn out of their bunks by the adventure that promised.

"Looks to me as if the sea isn't quite as bad as it was," the chief mate ventured after a while.

Actually that sea was boiling maelstrom, impossible to describe in written words drawn from a dictionary compiled by men who have never witnessed the ultimate wrath of ocean.

"With a drop of oil——" said Brentwood; all the sailor now. "Think you could manage it?"

"I'm willing to try. Give me a lee as much as you can, and then——" They spoke spasmodically, the words clipped from their lips by the fury of the wind; gasping and spluttering as the spindrift cut them in the teeth.

"Right—if you can get the men to try." The mate shouted, men appeared. There were no melodramatic speeches; when volunteers were called for the response was immediate. The difficulty was to select, not to persuade.

"Thought you wasn't never goin' to start, sir," said one deckhand. "My feet was gettin' colder an' colder wi' waitin'. Here's one for a start."

Brentwood summoned engineers and carpenter; there were quick discussions. Yes, there was oil available, plenty of it. With one drumful trickling out of the forward scupper, and another aft, a film could be spread over the sea that would still the greatest fury of the ravening combers.

"Right; go when you're ready," said Brentwood, wishing that his duty did not pin him to the bridge. The sailor in him clamored for permission to join fortunes with the stalwarts who were risking everything in obedience to the blessed sea call. The husband in him was for the nonce forgotten; as it remained forgotten what time he threw the laboring Wanama closer and closer to the wreck. His brain was exercised with a thousand intricate problems, and he dared not think of Maisie lest he lose his nerve. He forced himself to an utter detachment of mind and soul, concentrating every energy on the salvation of the wreck's crew.

AFTER a while of preparation a signal was sent to the wreck, indicating that rescue was now to be attempted. The answer was another flaring tar barrel, to serve as a guide in the bellowing blackness. Across the uncertain yellow gleam thrown on the water the Wanama's lifeboat set out. It was a good boat: one of the best, easily capable of holding the entire crew of an average windjammer. There would not be more than five and twenty of them at the most; sailing ships were economically manned. And, although certain of the Wanama's men were suffering from crushed fingers, gained when the boat was being lowered, their hearts were sound. They pulled like the heroes they were, and Brentwood stared at the dancing trifle, his throat parched, his eyes hot as though live coals were blazing in their sockets.

"It can't be done," he said. "I'm a fool to try it—a damned fool!" The flare of light burned out; darkness fell again, so that it was only possible to imagine what was transpiring outboard.

"If we'd only a searchlight——! Get an oil cask on deck and light it—they must have light!" But before the blaze showed on the Wanama's deck fresh light appeared on the wreck; it increased, it faded out and leaped up again. The golden track appeared afresh across the oil smoothed water; the lifeboat, looking like a distorted spider, was appreciably nearer.

Then the boat was lost to sight in the shadows, until a monstrous flash of lightning revealed it again, struggling desperately, nearer to the wreck's stern.

But it was growing towards full daylight before the laden boat left the sodden wreck. Thin suggestions of the dawn showed under the cloud banks; the surrounding sea was revealed in all its wildness. There was no comfort to be gained from the outlook: the storm had not yet blown itself out. Brentwood had prayed for light; now he felt disposed to pray for a continuance of the blackness, that imagination might breed a hope that reality sneered at.

BROAD daylight now; and the Wanama moving down to leeward of the wreck, in order to pick up the boat. A laden boat, this, as viewed through the spray dimmed glasses, a squelching, sodden boat, pursued by high running graybacks that poised terribly above the trifle, that fell and smothered it with far-flung spume, that receded to show the gallant craft still alive, the oars moving spasmodically, men baling—baling like demons!

Increasing daylight; with trivial rifts showing between the lowering clouds, and a single heartening ray of sunlight striking a note of hope across the gray and tortured immensity of the sea. The boat was coming—it had won.

"God, look at the wreck!" The second mate gripped the captain's arm, and through the crash and clamor of storm Brentwood could hear the uncontrolled chattering of his teeth. He turned and stared, he felt suddenly sick. For the wreck was going—going fast. Wave after wave broke over her; she was like a rock attacked by a wind hounded tide. Spray enveloped her; she emerged, to disappear again. Then her stern, that had been hammered pitilessly by the tangled wreckage overside, sank deeper, her bow lifted—lifted. A greater wave roared on; it sprang exultingly; it fell. In the whirl and smother the ship went down.

One by one the survivors were hauled aboard the Wanama. This in itself was no light work, but by comparison with what had gone before it was child's play. They came to deck gasping, cursing, praying, according to how their emotions seized them; they were hurried below to the comfort of hot blankets and steaming soup and coffee, for once he had determined on the attempt Brentwood had spared no single precaution. The men of the Wanama, aided by the stout hearts amongst the windjammer's crew, attempted to salve the worthy boat, but it was hurled against the steamer's plates and crushed like an eggshell in the effort; the men who had remained below to hook on the tackles came scrambling up the swiftly thrown lines like drowned rats.

A hard faced man, gray, with salt weariness showing in his eyes, gained the Wanama's bridge and extended a hand to Capt. Brentwood.

"It was good work," he said thickly. "Good work—thought you'd abandoned us. Don't know that I'd have blamed you if you had." He coughed, his hold on Brentwood's hand tightened. "You've done better than——" He evidently intended to say more, but instead he pitched heavily against the Wanama's captain, slid down him, and collapsed unconscious on the streaming deck.

"Look after her," Brentwood told the second mate. "Go your course again; full speed ahead. I'll look after him." He was a strong man, and without ado he gathered up the limp, thin figure in his arms and staggered down the ladder. There were several men in the saloon, gathered about the snapping fire in the stove, and to them Brentwood passed the wreck's captain. He had remembered Maisie now; he was aching with eagerness to spend every minute he could snatch with her, knowing in his own mind that she must die. Those precious hours spent in rescue must have swung the balance to the side of death.

"Let me look at him," he heard one of the men in the saloon say, as he stumbled into his own cabin. Maisie was again asleep; but there was now a smile—a pain free smile on her pallid lips.

"I want to give you my thanks," said that man who had spoken in the saloon, rising and extending a thin, delicate hand. "I am proud to know you, captain. Men like you are a credit to the sea. Capt. Wedgeworth is coming round—he was fatigued only. The responsibility, you know——" He dissolved into platitudes which Brentwood hardly heard.

"It was touch and go," Brentwood said. "I'm glad we managed to get you in time, Mr.——"

"I AM Sir Thomas Littlejohn, captain. A passenger in the Wildfowl. Advised to take a long sea voyage for my health—and although this has been a trying experience, I am a strong man again." Brentwood gasped.

"You're Sir Thomas Littlejohn? You're——" He realized, like a man emerging from a trance, that his hand was grasped by the most famous surgeon of the day. The name of Thomas Littlejohn rang down surgical history like a bugle call: a man who was as nearly infallible as man could be; a man almost divine in his power of healing.

"Yes; and I owe you my life—why, man—you're ill, too." Brentwood's hand was at his throat, because of the choking there.

"No, no. Not me—my wife. She's dying——"

As the surgeon emerged from the cabin a strong waft of chloroform accompanied him. He laid a basin on the saloon table and commenced to wash and dry the instruments methodically.

"Well?" asked Brentwood, clawing at his arm.

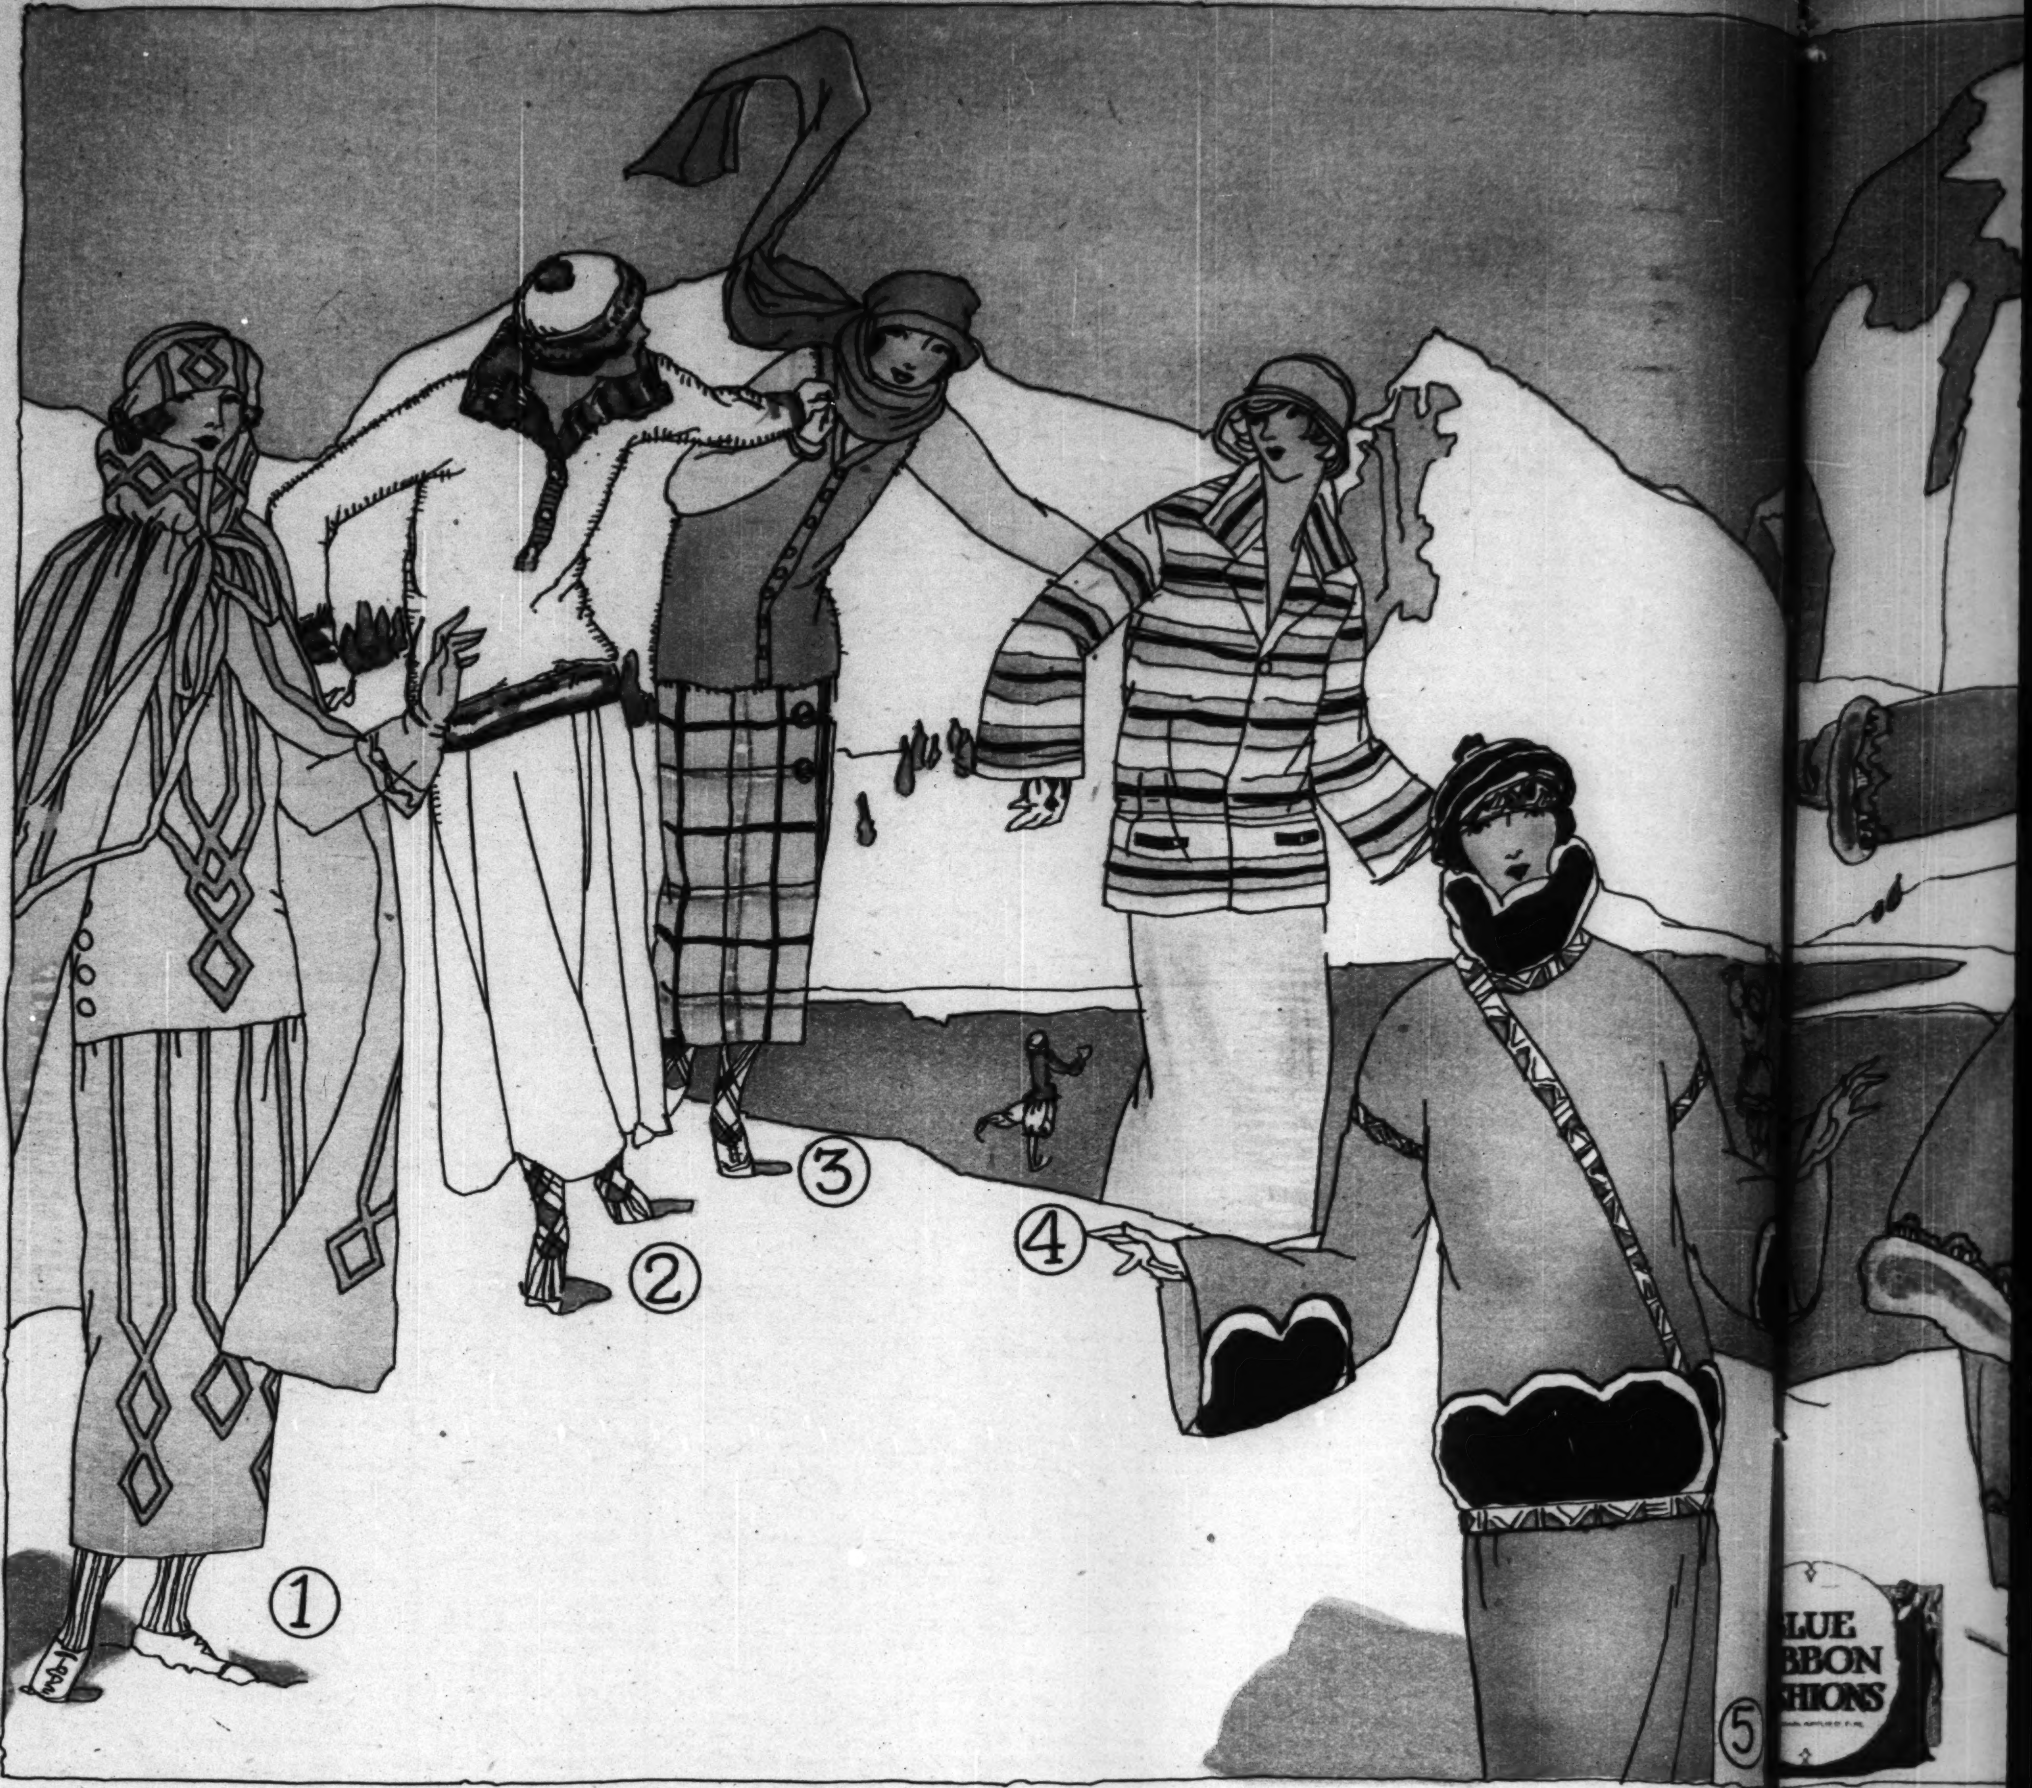
"I think—I hope she will live, my friend. So far as I can see the operation has been successful. Done under difficulties, eh? I've never worked under such conditions; but—what have I seen of life? Your instruments are medieval, captain—but your second mate is a born anesthetist. As cool as a cucumber—never saw such nerve. You sailormen stagger me. The bigger the emergency the bigger your pluck. It's wonderful! I think I must have learned something from you and the sea. Otherwise I'd never have attempted to operate under such conditions. As it is—get hold of yourself, captain! I'll wager my professional reputation that your wife will live, always excepting complications, and I see no reason why they should arise. Hold up, man!"

"You—mean—you mean——?" gulped Brentwood thickly, still clawing at the surgeon's arm.

SIR THOMAS LITTLEJOHN tapped Brentwood's sleeve with the half of the forceps that he had just wiped. There was a note of solemnity in his voice as he said:

"I mean that it was a question of hours, my friend. Twenty-four at the outside. She couldn't have lived longer—it was impossible. How long before we make our port?"

"A week, at the best we can do," said Brentwood. He laid his forehead on his arms as the big sobs shook him.



THE SNOWLINE BRINGS OUT A W SPO

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

WE'VE outgrown the dilettante stage in our winter sports. We've come to realize that snow is real, snow is earnest, and that the skin is oft its goal. Consequently the designers both here and abroad have set themselves to the task of seeing that we are more fabric bound than snow bound. For us they have devised all sorts of the most marvelous waterproofed materials—gabardines, finely woven woolens, and leathers. So thorough is the experiment that often even the coat's silk lining itself is waterproofed.

These garments have been created in response to a demand that has widened constantly in the last ten years. Before that time the group of women who skiied and tobogganed and snowshoed was limited to that privileged society which could go to the Swiss winter resorts or else to the Adirondacks. Nowadays these recreations, the most life giving in the world, are often sought right at our back doors. All that we need is some climate and an altitude. New York City is especially representative in this modern zeal for the sports of ice and snow, and every winter week-end sees a multitude scurrying to the handiest of the adjacent hills and fields and ponds.

Undoubtedly the type of winter sports costume which is most universally serviceable is the knicker suit worn with golf stockings. These come today in the waterproofed materials — as well as in those less highly endowed — and their smart coats are frequently trimmed with leather. Sometimes a muskrat collar adds the finishing touch. In place of the coat a combination of jerkin and cape is often essayed. However, this is obviously a far less practical garment for the woman who really wants to use her muscles than is the coat. For even if our only winter sport be a long walk, we don't care to be the mast for a flapping sail of a cape.

If one has the wherewithal, this costume occupies only one niche in our winter sports wardrobe. For the designers have concentrated upon specialized wear and the fashionable debutante of today has a skiing outfit which is as different from her skating wear as is that from her riding clothes. It is some of these variations which I show on this page.

One of the outstanding features of a number of the very newest skiing costumes is the presence of long trousers. Never having skimmed down the snow-clad side of a mountain, I myself do not realize just what benefits these confer. However, it is said that they were devised at the suggestion of somebody who seems to occupy the chair of skiing, so we won't dispute them. At all events, here they are—long, tight cylinders which are built rather in spirit of Henry Clay's pantaloons than in that of our modern male. Sometimes they are fitted into clips about the ankles. Sometimes they are unanchored and don't come quite to the ankles.

The most surprising of these models which I have seen—one imported from London—was engineered of blue, waterproofed duvetyn, fitted into clips about the ankles and buttoned on to the matching, long sleeved bodice at the waist line—for all the world like one of those Dickens suits for small boys. This was accompanied by a matching skirt of self-fabric. Indeed, we concede this Victorian appendage to many of our sports clothes, including, of course, the knicker suits.

I show at the right a very stunning skiing [illegible] suede incorporating with [illegible] in gray caracul a set of [illegible]taloons. This suit, which [illegible] well for skating as concede this Victorian of our sports clothes, , the knicker suits. t a very stunning skiing costu suede incorporating with its d in gray caracul a set of th aloons. This suit, which wi s well for skating as for the sport which inspired it, is followed by more trouser scenery above the snow line. Here the essential element is composed of brushed wool in canary color and is accompanied by a black and white sweater in block design. The cap and scarf match the trousers. A last policy against Jack Frost is taken out in great gauntlet gloves, which may be of either white leather or white brushed wool. Those of the latter material are, by the way, very popular at present.

Although these small caps are decorative and are often included in sets assembling brushed wool sweater, golf hose, and scarf, they are really not ideal for the snowy sports. A hat with brim or visor is, on the other hand, the thing needed to protect the eyes from that dazzling glare of the sun on a white expanse.

Whether we ski or toboggan is now much more problematic than whether we skate. For even if our environment is against the former, the city rinks provide an outlet for the latter urge. These rinks have made a special costume almost essential to the enjoyment of a city winter.

The wall motto of the rink seems to be "Watch your steppe." For the Russian note is the one most frequently sounded in this attire. These Russian affairs are made up in velvet, in corduroy, and in velveteen, and they nowadays often ally knickers laced at the knee with the characteristic blouse of the Volga.

Very much in the latest note is model No. 6, one which may be either of flannel or of any of the materials I have just mentioned. It is trimmed with moleskin and red embroidery and has an adorable hat to match. Although this costume exploits a skirt, the same tunic will consort happily with the more practical knickers.

Either for skating or for less strenuous preoccupation with the winter week-end in the country is the next model, one of wine colored duvetyn trimmed with seal and with very stunning embroidery in blue and white. The increasing city fashion of seeking sanctuary in some country place over Sunday makes a suit like this almost indispensable. In the same spirit, too, are the various modish knitted wool suits, many of them trimmed with fur. A large group of these latter includes the ever fashionable cape. Thus at the extreme left we find a long and graceful model of this outer garment matching the frock and hat of beige knitted wool with a design of rust red interwoven into the cloth.

Even in the most practical of the skiing and tobogganing costumes we find nowadays, in place of the neutral tints which used to usurp this domain, a wide prevalence of color. Wedgwood blue, canary, bright green—all these are released even in those waterproofed gabardines and woolens of which I have spoken.

Testimony to this freedom of the rainbows in our winter sports is given by the jaunty jacket numbered 4. Made of white wool traversed by black and green woven stripes, this represents a wide range of coats designed for winter sports occasions. Among these all types of leather jackets have especial prestige. There is also a chamois coat to which is given the vivid and deserved title of "wind breaker."

The last models on the page are No. 2, a white and blue slip-on sweater which can be buttoned up high at the neck (attended by a matching cap), and No. 3, a brick colored sleeveless golf sweater worn with a sleeved beige sweater and a smart wrap-around skirt of Scotch overplaid.

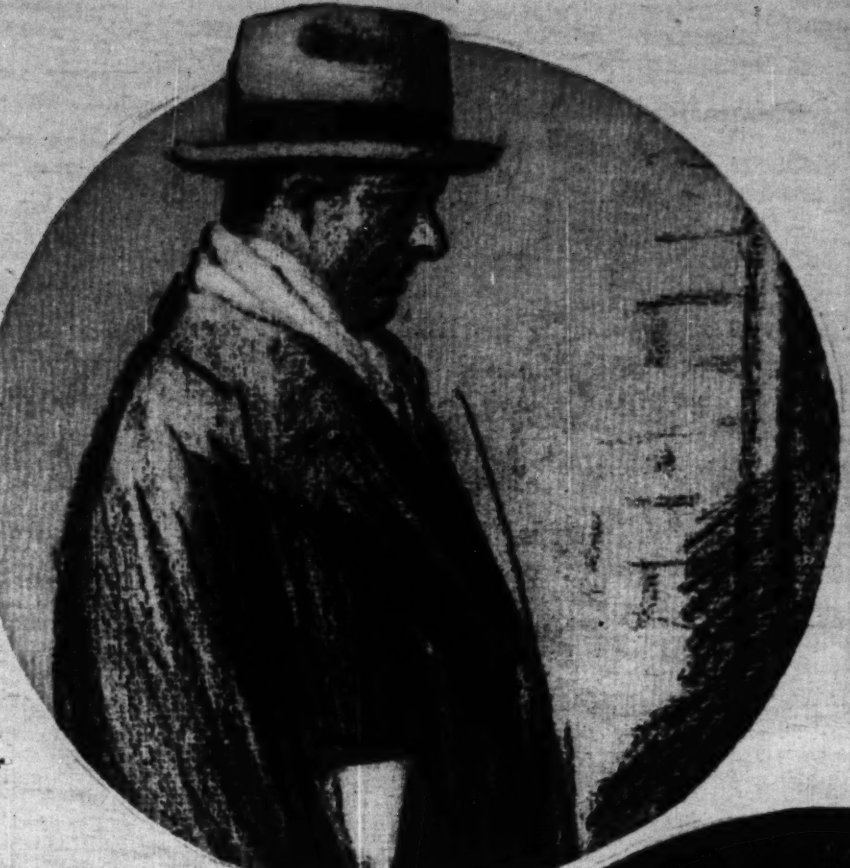
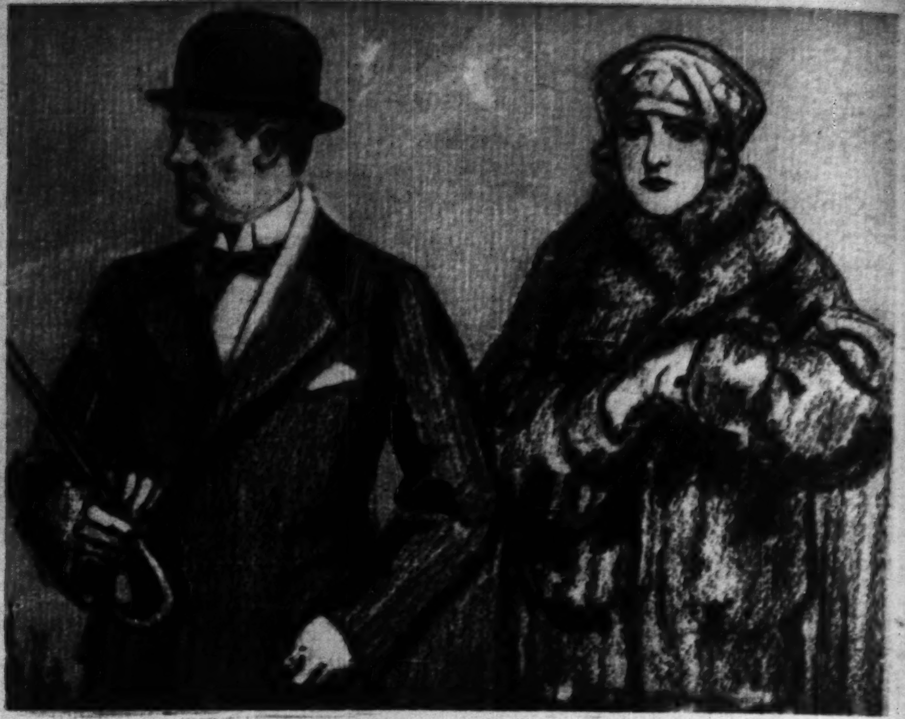
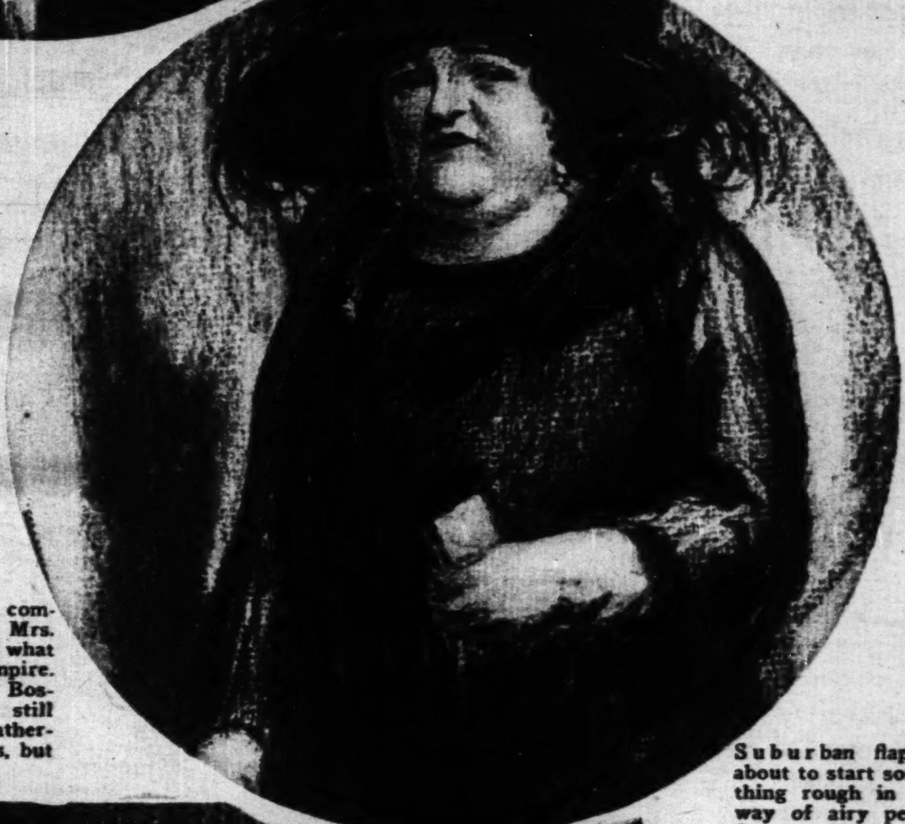
TODAY'S GOW EWED FROM THE BACK.



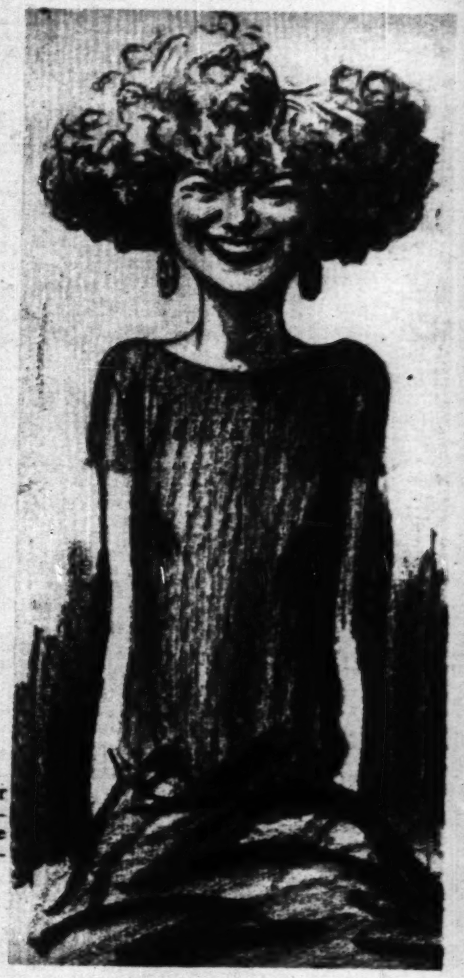
Real estate promoter deep in thought pending the arrival of the 4:58 train back to town. He has been looking around Elmdale Manor with a view of making three houses grow where but one house grew before.



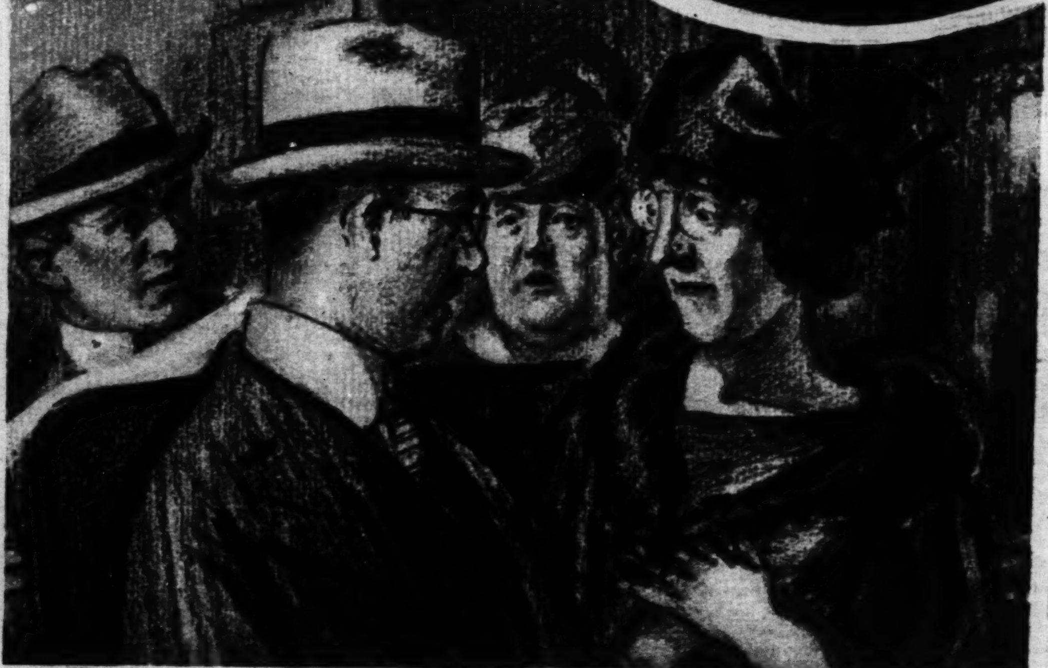
The suburbanites who tell in glowing terms how "you get so much more out of life living in the country"! Local statistics show, however, that out of a possible seven they average five nights a week in the city.



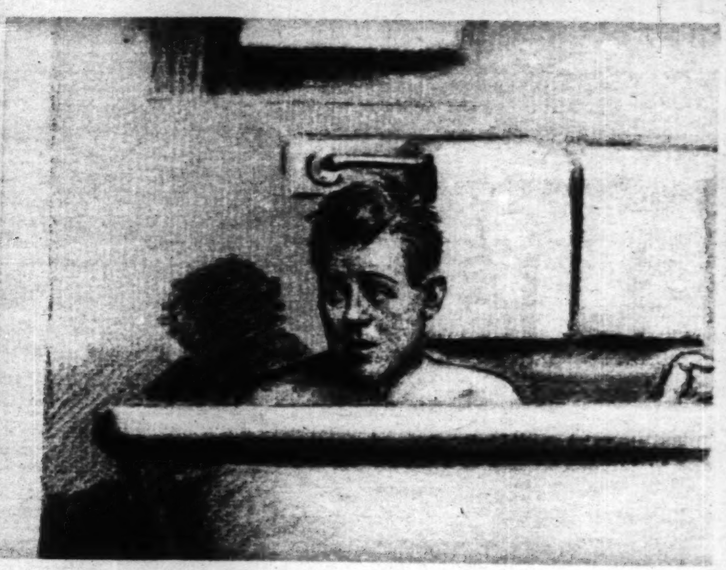
The local celebrity. No suburban community is without its celebrity. Mrs. Howard Burpee is to Elmdale Manor what Ellen Terry is to the British empire. Mrs. Burpee used to sing with the Bostonians in the early nineties and still sings "Oh, Promise me" at select gatherings. Mrs. Burpee was in the chorus, but that is a minor detail.



Suburban flapper about to start something rough in the way of airy persiflage.



Two members of the Little Theatre group go through their lines on the train. They are giving a Eugene O'Neill drama on the February bill, and everybody is working day and night to be letter perfect. Miss Weldon, who plays a drunken barmaid, is speaking. "I ain't a bad gel, I ain't, Gawd knows I tries to do me best fur you," says she, omitting the "tempest of sobs" demanded in the script, whereupon Mr. Holloway, who plays Joe, says just as rough as can be, "Stop yer grizzlin'! an' op' it aht of 'ere!" (Great show of interest from the seat behind.)



The week end guest. "Now this is your room," they said, "and this is your bath, and you are to have it all to yourself." No one who has visited in the suburbs will believe this for a minute, so bar every door. At just the wrong time some member of the family will remember something she forgot to take from the medicine cabinet.

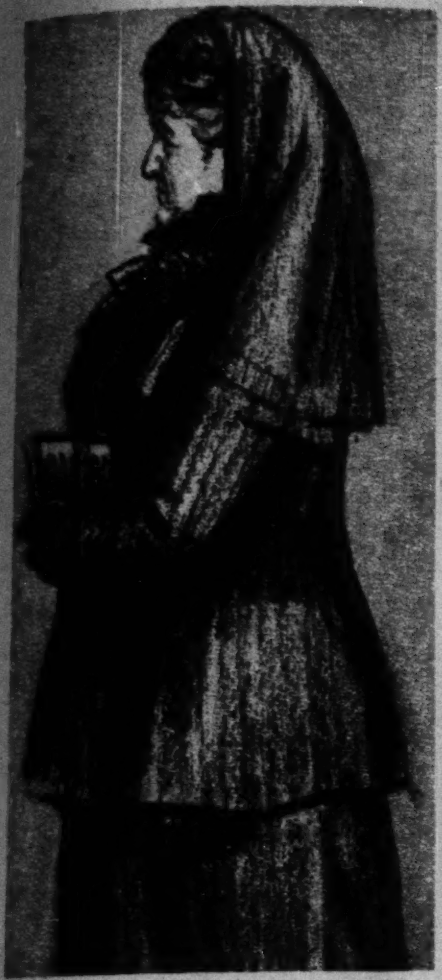
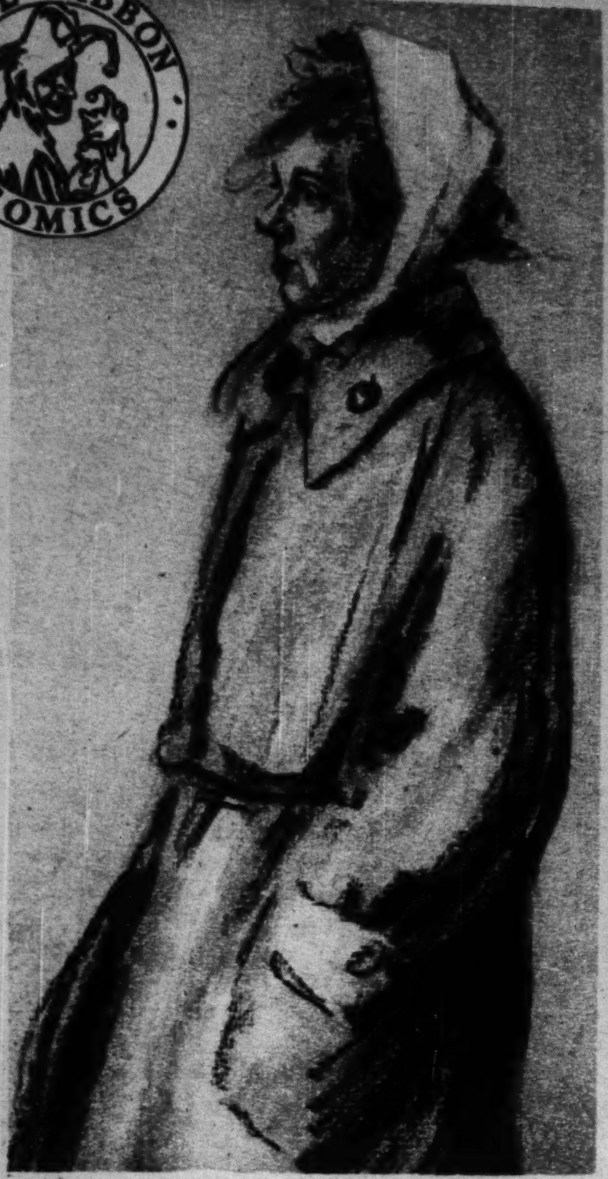
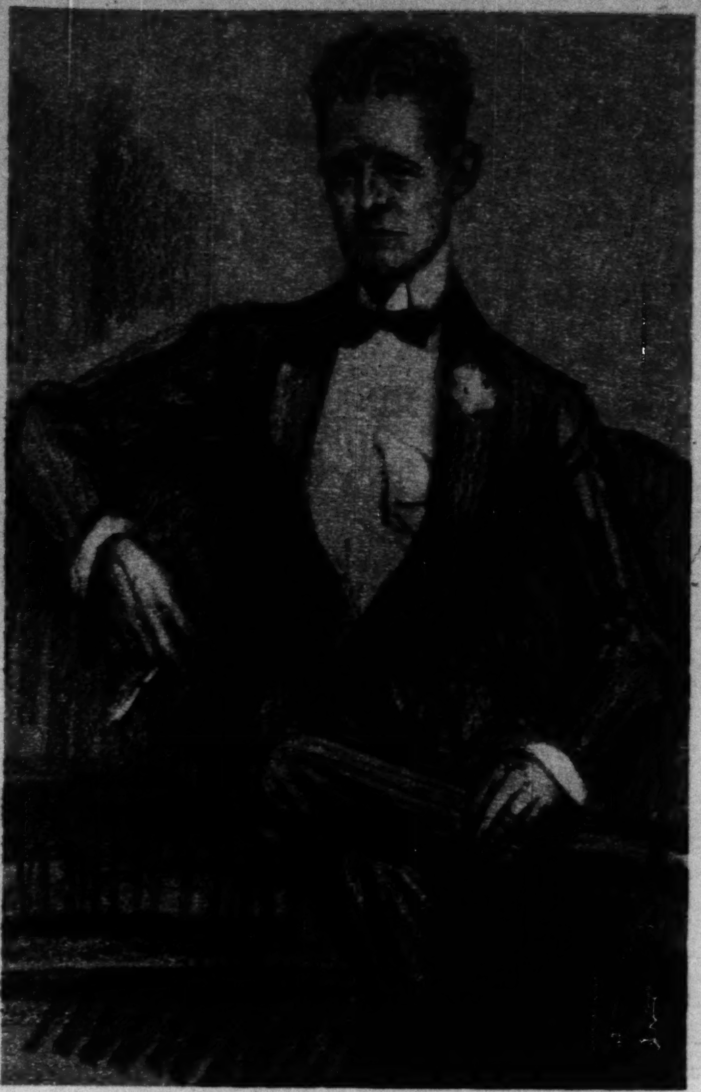
BLUE RIBBON COMICS



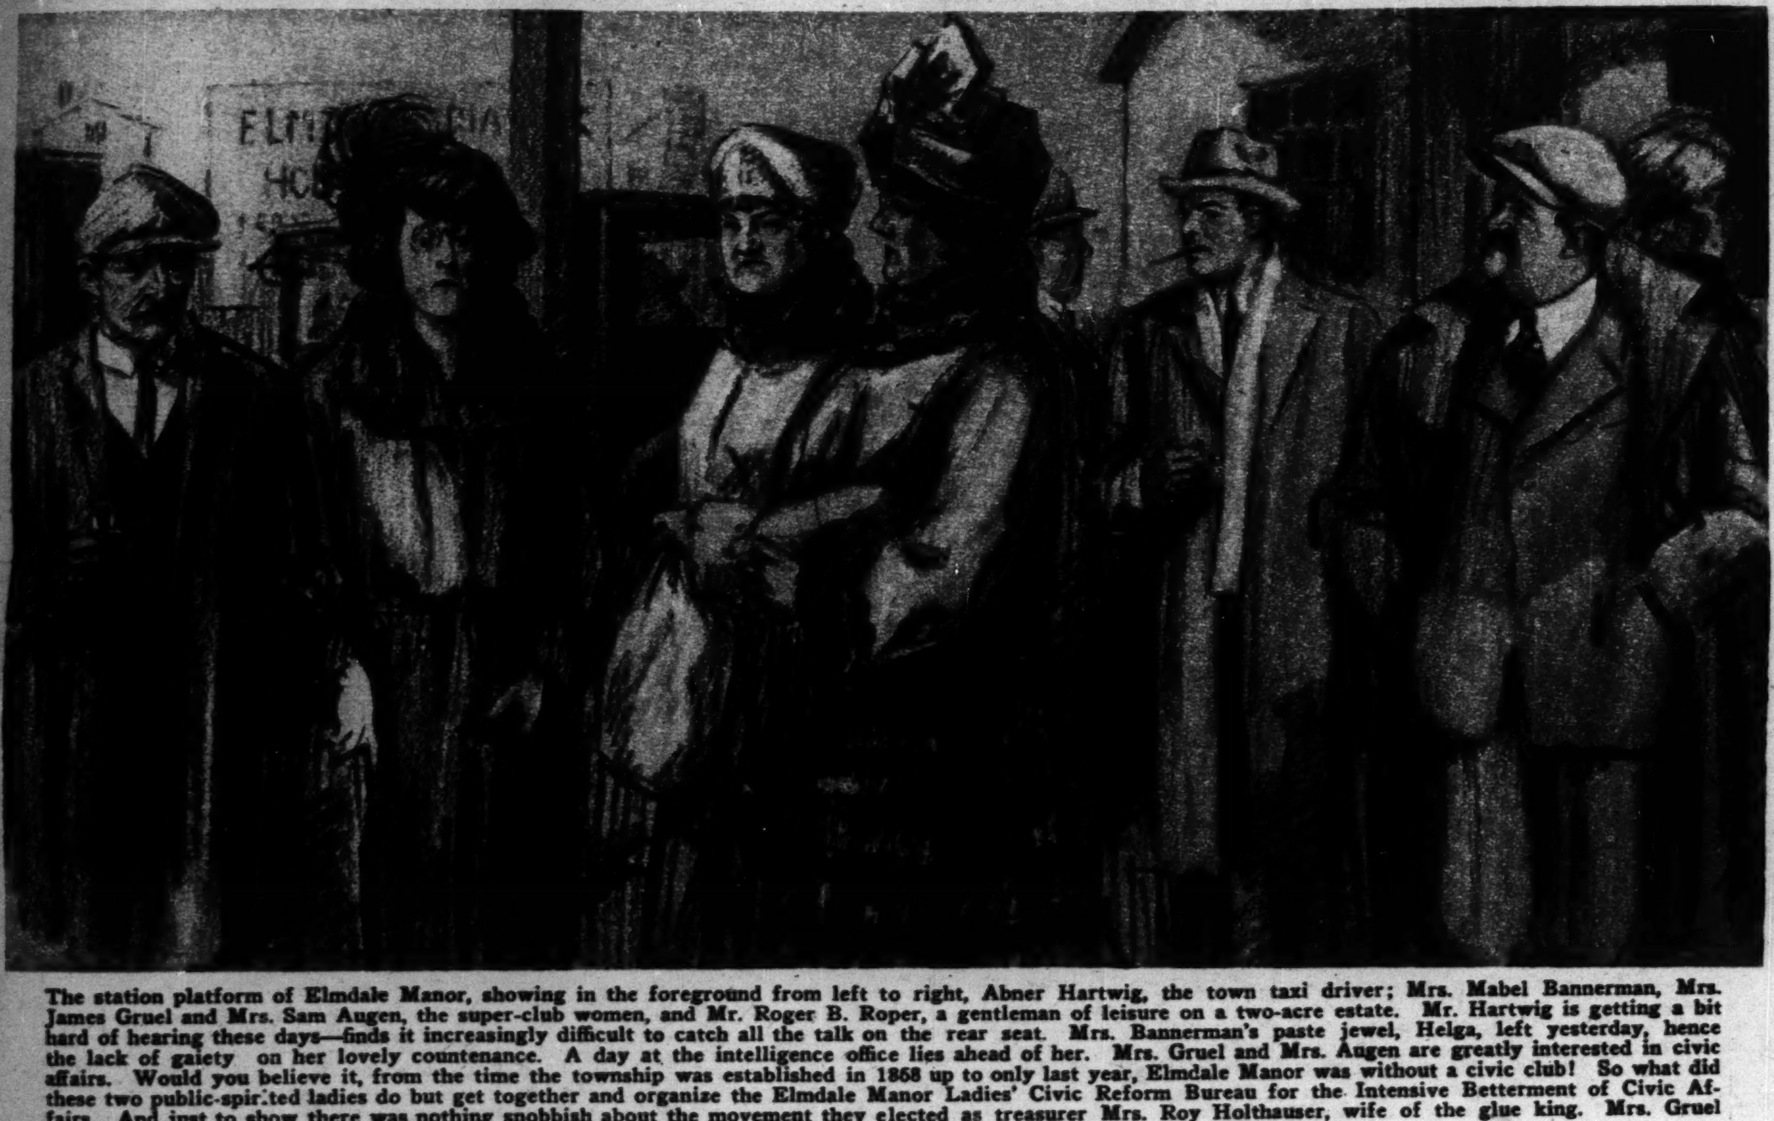
The old resident who lived in Elmdale Manor long before it was a suburb.



"Always pick a girl named Daisy, for daisies won't tell," so ran the old ditty, but it doesn't always work. Here's Daisy, Mrs. Horton's waitress, running over to tell her bosom friend, Gerda, how Mrs. Horton called Mr. Horton no more nor less than "an old caper cutter," and how Mr. Horton in return swore something horrible!



Marshall Kohlrobbi, leading man of the Elmdale Manor Little Theatre movement, is thought by many, including the critic of the Elmdale Manor Argus, to be the coming John Barrymore. He is always being "borrowed" by other Little Theatre movements. Marshall is at his best in English comedy of manners. In fact, Mrs. Jim Hoegate, who plays leads and used to be on the professional stage herself, says that Marshall's stage presence is really remarkable. Off stage Marshall is awfully English. Calls everything "Old Dear"—his hostess, the waitress, the cocktails, and the bridge score.



The station platform of Elmdale Manor, showing in the foreground from left to right, Abner Hartwig, the town taxi driver; Mrs. Mabel Bannerman, Mrs. James Gruel and Mrs. Sam Augen, the super-club women, and Mr. Roger B. Roper, a gentleman of leisure on a two-acre estate. Mr. Hartwig is getting a bit hard of hearing these days—finds it increasingly difficult to catch all the talk on the rear seat. Mrs. Bannerman's paste jewel, Helga, left yesterday, hence the lack of gaiety on her lovely countenance. A day at the intelligence office lies ahead of her. Mrs. Gruel and Mrs. Augen are greatly interested in civic affairs. Would you believe it, from the time the township was established in 1868 up to only last year, Elmdale Manor was without a civic club! So what did these two public-spirited ladies do but get together and organize the Elmdale Manor Ladies' Civic Reform Bureau for the Intensive Betterment of Civic Affairs. And just to show there was nothing snobbish about the movement they elected as treasurer Mrs. Roy Holthauser, wife of the glue king. Mrs. Gruel and Mrs. Augen have what is known as a keen grasp on affairs of the day. Mr. Roper goes in for sport clothes and asthma.

AWARDED HONORABLE MENTION

ON June 10, 1922 The Chicago Tribune was seventy-five years old. In honor of this occasion it was announced that prizes amounting to $100,000 would be awarded for designs for a monumental new home to be erected in front of The Tribune Plant.

THE ROOM ON THE ROOF

The Story of a Crime in a Skyscraper - - - - - - by Will Payne

WHAT HAS HAPPENED THUS FAR:

NATHANIEL HARWOOD, a handsome lawyer of 43, has dissipated most of the big fortune left him and his daughter by his wife. To recoup he practically engages himself to Mrs. Letitia Belknap, a widow worth ten millions. Then Adolph Krom and a "Professor" Steinman interest Harwood in an invention to produce motion pictures in natural colors and in relief. This invention they have stolen from their former employer, Simon Curlin. Harwood installs the pair in the room on the roof, a curious retreat above his offices in a Chicago skyscraper. Later he takes the workmen to Slow River, Mich., his home town, and establishes their plant in an old factory.

In Slow River he meets young Elizabeth Malden and falls in love with her. Elizabeth sees Simon Curlin and his nephew, Robert Whiteside, ejected from the Slow River factory. Whiteside interests her. After the battle Elizabeth finds a revolver dropped by Curlin. She leaves it in a desk in the shop.

Elizabeth goes to Chicago as Harwood's secretary. His sister, Sarah Otwell, introduces Elizabeth to society. Harwood proposes and Elizabeth accepts him. Mrs. Belknap, angered, summons Harwood and shows him she knows of his financial difficulties.

Exploring the room on the roof, Elizabeth finds Curlin and Whiteside trying to break into the safe. Whiteside tells her they are seeking a camera and plans stolen from his uncle by Krom and Steinman. Elizabeth permits them to depart. Steinman disappears. Krom reappears in Chicago and shows the new pictures for Harwood. He demands the lawyer buy his interest at once, for $250,000 cash. Krom relates that in a drunken frenzy he killed Steinman and buried the body in the Slow River factory.

Harwood pays Krom $30,000 on account. The lenses are intrusted to Elizabeth, who is to hold them from both Harwood and Krom until the patents are secured. Fearing lest Krom go on a spree, Elizabeth permits him to take her to the theater and to supper. Whiteside warns her against Krom, but Elizabeth rebukes him for having Krom shadowed.

Krom sees Harwood kiss Elizabeth and believes she is leagued with the lawyer to defraud him of the invention. He plans revenge. Harwood persuades Elizabeth to turn the lenses over to him, as he wants an expert to pass on their worth before further dealings with Krom.

She does so, but pretends to have forgotten the combination when Harwood asks her to open Krom's safe in the room on the roof. Krom phones Elizabeth that his eyes are affected and that he is confined to a darkened room in his hotel. She goes there to get his technical description of the lenses, which they need to secure patents. Leaving his room, she runs into Robert Whiteside eavesdropping at the door.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

"He's Dead! Put That Down!"

THERE is something about the idea of being spied upon—of an eavesdropper—that arouses a natural resentment under any circumstances. Elizabeth felt that resentment, as the flash of her eye and the lift of her chin plainly showed. Her very pose demanded explanations and apologies; or, perhaps, simply threw Whiteside out without waiting for explanations.

But he did not apologise. There was a dogged misery in his eyes which seemed to make apology superfluous.

"I knew from the detective's report that you came here Saturday," he said, with a kind of hopelessness. "I was afraid you'd come again—and you did. You know it's no place for you. They know it, too." Whoever "they" might be. "It makes me sick. Nobody else cares about you. All they care about is the money. But I care."

There was misery in his voice; altogether he seemed so wretched that attacking him was something like striking a cripple. But her self-respect required that she strike. To be spied upon this way! Insulting!

"I've a mind to go back," she said. Indeed, she did have a mind to go back—to knock on the door and tell Krom that she was coming back to read the newspaper to him, to take dinner with him, to spend the evening, if she hadn't had that theater engagement. No self-respecting young woman could tolerate this idea of needing to be spied upon and saved from ruin! Decidedly she did have a mind to go back to Krom's room.

"Krom's no more sick than I am," said Whiteside, in the subdued voice he had used before. "He's been talking to my uncle today."

"I don't believe it!" said she. "I'm going back!" She seemed on the point of turning again to Krom's door.

The misery was still in the young man's face—and something else now. He was looking at that door. It was suddenly clear to her that he was forming an intention of his own.

"We may as well settle it; he's got to let you alone," he said, and put forth his hand toward the door knob. His intention was to go inside and give Krom a licking.

She caught his hand. The necessity of subduing her voice brought a little break in it that sounded almost like a sob as she cried: "Don't you dare! I'll never forgive you! Come away!" She fairly pulled him down the hall.

"How dare you treat me so?" she demanded, with that little catch in her voice. "What have I ever done to you? What right have you to interfere? I'm here on business." She was trembling, and he perceived that in an instant there might be a mist of angry tears in her eyes. It somehow flattened him out; punching Krom's head would settle nothing.

"Forgive me," he said unhappily. "It makes me sick. Nobody cares about you."

And as he subsided she gained control of herself, demanding: "Have you never heard of minding your own affairs? What right have you to spy on me? I tell you I'm here on business. If you ever do it again I'll never speak to you!"

He made a gesture, both of protest and helplessness.

"You go down; I'll follow," she commanded.

He hesitated over that a moment, but she had said she would follow; her eyes made it a test. He plodded heavily away, dejection in his big figure, and went down the stairs without waiting for the elevator. When she left the Ellenborough a minute later he was on the sidewalk—perhaps waiting to see that she had followed? She stopped in front of him, her voice perfectly controlled—and so much softer, it seemed!—but firm:

"You must never do this again, Mr. Whiteside. I can't allow it."

The words were uncompromising and her voice was firm. Yet there was something behind words and tone; a mother who had spanked a child might speak so when her temper had subsided.

He gave a wry little smile and replied, "I'll be good."

A minute or so later she was getting into a cab; and in spite of herself his words sounded in her ears: "Nobody else cares about you, but I care." She had cast this young man out, but somehow he was always coming back.

LEFT to himself, Krom presently found consolation in whisky and water and cigar. He didn't know definitely that he was shadowed, yet he played his rôle carefully, keeping to his room all the remainder of the afternoon and early evening. About eight o'clock another knock sounded on his door. From the gentle sound one might, perhaps, have inferred something deferential. Krom was so sure of the knocker that he went to the door without bothering to put the bandage over his eyes.

Peter Green was there, his pugnacity subdued in the presence of Krom, like a cross grained dog in the presence of its master. Peter Green, in fact, had conceived a tremendous impression of Krom. He slid into the room, something catlike in his actions in spite of his massive, bandy legged figure. There was a kind of alert deference in the way he combed his mustache with thumb and forefinger, as though he were waiting to jump through a hoop at the word of command. Krom warmed and expanded before Peter's deference. Before Harwood and Elizabeth he played a servile rôle, but before Peter he was the hero. Expansively, like an indulgent patron, he got Peter a drink of whisky and water and a cigar, beaming at him.

"Got it all fixed up, eh?" he said genially when they were comfortably settled over the creature comforts of liquor and tobacco.

"Yes'r; yes'r," Peter replied, in quick utterance about which also there was something catlike. "This shack, now, is all snug and tight, like I told you. I nailed up the back door myself. Storm door in front; good hook and staple on it; anybody can lock it from the outside."

"Stands all alone?" Krom inquired, like one making sure.

"Yes'r; all alone," Peter assured him. "Near half a mile to the next house. The shack, like I told you, was kind of a tenant house. This man's been livin' in it couple months—a bachelor. 'S all right with him. Tom knows him well. You can bank on him. He cleared out this afternoon."

With a black and broken finger nail he traced a route on his hard palm: "Here's the depot at Nariposa. You strike right off this way on a dirt road and you turn to the left at the little white schoolhouse there; then follow a windin' road—rough and sandy—about three miles, till you come to a big elm in the road. Wagon track branches off there. Can't drive a car very far on it—have to walk quarter of a mile to the shack. But Tom understands all about it. He'll be at the Nariposa depot in his flivver to meet you tomorrow night; take you right there."

"Did you put the lens where I told you?" Krom asked.

"Yes'r; kind 'a' stickin' out from under the bed; see it the minute you step in," said Peter. "Tom'll leave a light burning in the shack and things kind of mussed up. Soon's you and the girl step inside he'll hook the storm door from the outside and beat it."

"Sure I can depend on him, eh?" Krom remarked, as one ruminates aloud.

"Yes'r; sure," Peter replied, with conviction. "Hundred dollars cash, and Tom don't give a damn. He's a good scout, Tom is. I know him like a book." Peter was industriously combing his mustache.

Krom was smiling expansively. "I ain't going to hurt her—really," he observed. "But I'm going to throw a damn big scare into her. I'm going to give her plenty to think about. And when she gets back here next day she can explain it to this bird Harwood any way she pleases. Let's see, now, if you got that telephone message right."

"Yes'r; I got it right," Peter declared. "Five o'clock tomorrow I call up this room. Girl comes to the phone. And I say, 'Is Mr. Krom there—Mr. Adolph Krom?' I'm talkin' kind of excited, and I go right on. 'There's a man here says his name is Steinman,' I say. 'Doctor says he can't live only few hours. He's mighty anxious to see Mr. Krom before he goes off,' I say. 'He says he's got something very important to tell him. He come to my house last Thursday,' I say, 'and I took him in, for he looked kind of sick. He didn't want a doctor, though, and I thought maybe he'd pick up. But today he was took bad and I got a doctor. Doctor say he can't live long, and he's mighty anxious to see Mr. Krom—asked me to telephone right away. My name's Johnson and I live four miles out of Nariposa. If Mr. Krom'll come to Nariposa on the evening train—gets there about quarter past nine—I'll be at the depot to meet him and take him to Mr. Steinman.' That's about the dope."

"FINE!" said Krom with satisfaction—something, perhaps, of the satisfaction of an artist who reviews his work and finds it good. "And I'm blind, Peter, so she has to go with me." He chuckled a moment, reminiscently. "When I had that damn iritis four years ago I thought it was a dead loss; but it comes in handy now. Well, we catch the 5:50 train here and get off at Nariposa quarter past nine. That's only twenty miles from Slow River, so it seems kind of homelike to her. Mr. Johnson is at the depot and takes us to the shack. There's the lens on the floor, so she thinks Steinman must have been there. And pretty soon we find we're locked in, back and front. And I say, 'This is a job that Curlin has put up on me. I wish I had a gun. Maybe he's coming in here to cut my throat'—and so on."

He put a hand up to his mustache and choked a little as the situation in the shack came up in imagination. "So we gotta stay there quite a while. We stay there a while, locked in. But I ain't going to hurt her—really. That motion picture stuff wouldn't go in real life. I ain't going to hurt her, really; but I'm going to throw a damn good scare into her before we're through."

"Yes'r," Peter repeated, parrotlike. With a cruder imagination than Krom's he had some doubts about the essential innocence of his companion's intentions, but he dutifully kept the doubts to himself.

Slowly stroking his mustache, behind which a satirical grin lurked, Krom said, "This bird Harwood is a——" His opinion of Harwood comprised several words, none of them printable. "It's a great little game, Peter; and I guess, when it's all over, they'll all of 'em have reason to remember Mr. A. Krom!"

"Yes'r," said Peter, as Krom expanded in the admiration of his follower.

"And don't forget," Krom added genially, "that there's a thousand bucks cold cash in it for you!"

Peter rapidly combed his mustache with thumb and finger, but found no words. Krom, he almost reverently believed, could trim anybody, which was Peter's ideal of supreme human ability. But the most wonderful thing of all was that Krom proposed to produce a thousand bucks, cold cash, for Peter Green!

This was what Krom's pondering had finally come to. All other modes of vengeance seemed tame to him in comparison with that stock motion picture situation of a girl locked up somewhere in the power of her enemy. True, he couldn't quite make himself into a motion picture villain, for he was acutely aware that Nariposa had a background of sheriffs, jails, courts, penitentiaries, gallows, and so forth, which motion picture villains seemed unconscious of. He repeated to Peter Green that he wasn't going to hurt her, really. But the raw colors of the motion picture situation irresistibly appealed to him. No other vengeance that he could think of would be satisfying. Locked up with her, away from everybody else!

She would be in his room at five o'clock next day and get, at least, a part of the telephone message herself, standing by, probably, while Krom took the remainder of it. They'd just about have time to catch the 5:50 train. With Steinman on his deathbed he didn't doubt that she would go, especially as Naripose was only twenty miles from Slow River and so sort of homelike to her. If she were going to Slow River she would take that same 5:30 train. He didn't doubt that she would go with him, as his bandaged eyes made him helpless.

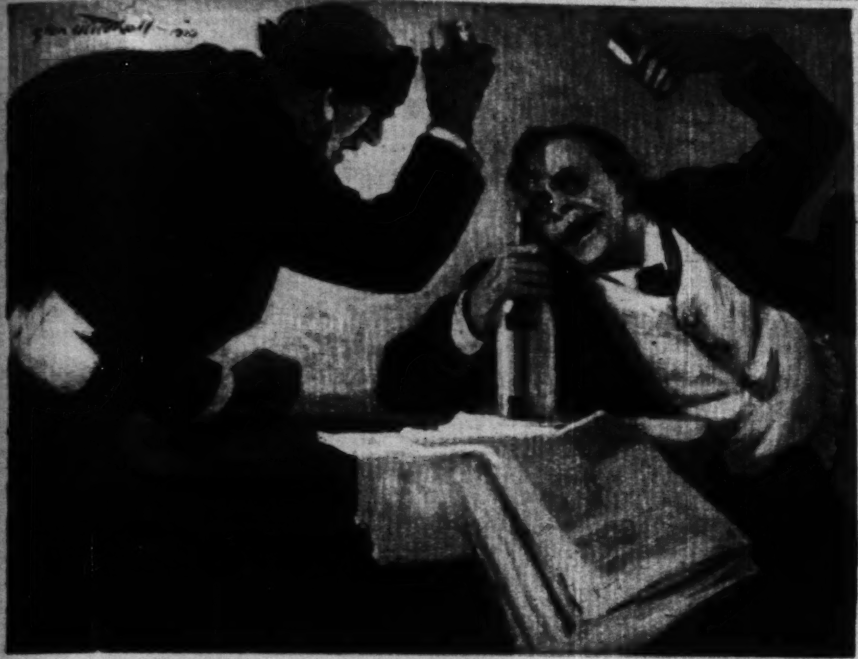
And he had another satisfying thing to think about. Tomorrow, he foresaw, was going to be a satisfactory day for A. Krom. The flattery of alcohol was in his brain now. Expansive, triumphant, beaming, he lifted his glass and announced:

"Tomorrow, Peter, I settle up with this bird Harwood, and I settle up with the old goat Curlin, anad I square accounts with this young lady. Here's luck!"

He cursed Harwood again, with a sort of sulphurous geniality—having a cause of resentment which he did not care to explain to Peter Green. The lawyer, he affirmed to himself, was a natural born double crossed sucker; yet someway he wouldn't "shake down" properly—hung on to his money, insisting upon having a clear title to the patents before giving up more than a mere $30,000. That stubbornness, not to be expected of a natural born sucker, was exasperating. Krom took it out in cursing him—smiling broadly the while. But besides the $30,000 he was going to take vengeance on the lawyer in respect of Bess.



"Tomorrow, Peter, I settle up with this bird Harwood. Here's luck!"

And he had another string to his bow. "Tomorrow," he repeated, "this old goat Curlin gets the boot in the belly right along with Nathaniel Harwood, Esquire. I'm going to trim him till he howls. An old lobster, toting a gun around in his pocket! Well, if he tries anything in that line with me he'll get a surprise." With a chuckle he reached to his hip pocket and exhibited a black automatic pistol. "I'd like to see him start any of that stuff with me!"

Peter, remembering when the "lobster" had leveled a weapon at him, looked approvingly at the murderous instrument in Krom's hand, nodding briskly and asserting, "Yes'r; that's the ticket!"

"Tomorrow's my lucky day!" Krom gurgled, expanding in Peter's admiration and warmed by alcohol. He and Peter finished their glasses.

ON the morrow, which Krom thus toasted, Harwood was not at the office when Bess arrived at the usual hour, and she found that something had happened to the office — to everything, in fact. This rich little cabinet, in which she had so delighted, was not delightful now. Harwood's spacious and luxurious room had lost much of its charm. There was a queer sort of tawdriness, as though the rooms had grown dingy over night; everything had a vaguely bedraggled air. All evening, even at the theater, she had puzzled over it. After all, why had Nat done it? He knew she was in honor bound to Krom regarding the lenses; the bond, so to speak, had been sealed and signed in his presence. He knew she had received the combination of the safe in confidence from a blind man. Why had he done it?

Evidently Nat didn't understand how she felt about it. She wondered if successful men were that way—insensible to such feelings as hers about the lenses and combination. Perhaps, in order to be successful, they had to ride over such things roughshod. But that took the shine off the success! She was as severe with herself as with Harwood. She had yielded when she should have resisted; finally she had lied to him about the combination, pretending she couldn't remember it. How silly! Riding through roughshod was better than just floundering around in the mud.

Prof. Kersten, she understood, was to appear soon and take the lenses for an expert examination. At any rate, then, they would soon know where they stood. Very likely Nat was somewhere or other with Prof. Kersten now—perhaps had already taken the lenses to him.

Half an hour or so passed. Then a stocky man wearing a derby hat and carrying a battered brown bag came into her cabinet and introduced himself: "I'm from the Holder Safe company. Mr. Harwood sent for a man to open a safe."

So Nat was really going to have the safe opened! "It's upstairs," she said. "I'll show you."

FROM Harwood's desk she got the key to the padlock which fastened the door at the head of the iron stairs and led the stranger up there. But the door was not locked—the padlock, opened, hung in the staple. That gave her a little start, because it seemed to her that Harwood had locked this door on the preceding afternoon. He and she had gone up to the roof room to open the safe, and she had told her foolish lie about not remembering the combination. She had left the room first, Harwood at her heels; she remembered that distinctly. But it seemed to her that he had paused an instant, here at the head of the stairs, to lock this door behind him. She hadn't actually seen him lock the door, but she seemed to remember that he had paused there—something like the click of the lock.

Since then—during office hours at least—nobody had gone up to the roof room by way of her cabinet. But Simon Curlin and Robert Whiteside had once got up there without passing through her cabinet—entering the little stairway room from the public corridor. Either they had keys to the door from the stairway room to the public corridor, and to this padlock, or some traitor in the office had unlocked the doors for them.

That was what gave her the little shock at finding this door unlocked. Could Curlin and Whiteside be in the roof room again? She opened the door and heard a small but sharp sound as though something had fallen. A bit of metal, two inches long by an inch wide, lay on the floor in front of her feet. Certainly it must have fallen from somewhere as she pushed the door open. But a great wind was blowing, booming across the roof, pushing and rattling at doors and windows. The wind might somehow have dislodged this bit of metal. With a little tingling in her nerves she went down the passage and opened the unlocked door to the roof room. As she stepped in a glance showed her, however, that the room was empty. She went over to the safe, saying: "This is it."

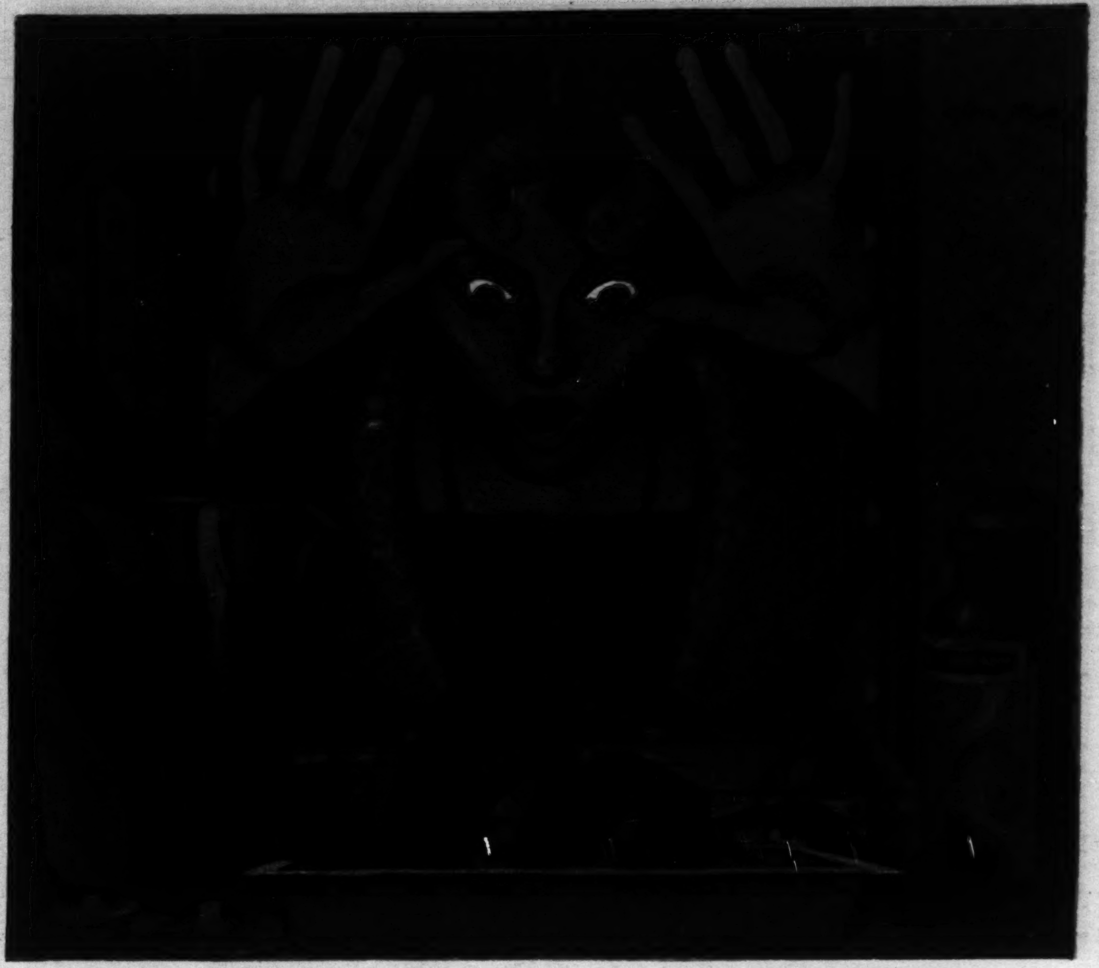
The man surveyed it and asked, "Have you got the numbers of the combination? I believe the message was that you had a combination, but it wouldn't work. Sometimes they have the right numbers, you know, but in the wrong order."

She gave him the same numbers that she had used the afternoon before—36, 19, 7, 24—then said to herself, "I might just as well have given him the right number, 42, instead of 24." But it seemed that she must play out her tawdry rôle of having transposed the last number. He wrote the numerals down and stooped over the nickel plated disc. She turned away and went over to the work bench. It rather seemed to her that things had been disturbed here—moved about. But that was only a vague impression—nerves, no doubt. That great, booming wind, roaring over the roof, shaking and rattling things, was enough to make one nervous.



All was indistinct inside, and all bathed in the color of blood.

The door in the west wall, which gave to the roof, was securely locked; certainly nobody could have come in that way. She walked over to the improvised dark room in the corner and looked through the panel of red glass in its door. All was indistinct inside, and all bathed in the color of blood. Without touching the door she turned away. Silly; but she never had liked that improvised little room with its darkly bloody hue.

At any rate, there was nobody in the roof room except herself and the safe expert. Her impression that Harwood had locked the door at the head of the stairs the day before must have been wrong. The expert was on his knees in front of the safe now, carefully turning the nickel disc with delicate fingers, and listening, his ear close to the lock. She left him at his burglarious task and went downstairs, the boom of the wind in her ears.

HARWOOD had not returned, but he came in about eleven o'clock, briskly—that bright, pleasant, competent air in his bearing and in his cheerful greeting:

"Morning, Bessie! Safe man here yet?"

"Yes; he's been at work an hour," she told him.

"I'll see how he's getting on," Harwood replied—so alert and amiable! He went at once to the door in the west wall and disappeared.

A few minutes later he returned, smiling, saying: "He's working away at it; thinks he can get it open all right without drilling it. Clever chap, apparently. Kersten's coming as soon after one as possible. We'll soon get this knot untied." He emphasized it with a smiling little nod and went on into his room.

The business of the office went on for an hour. Then, about a quarter past twelve, the safe man opened that west door and stepped into the cabinet, hat and coat on, bag in hand.

"It's open," he said. "You had the last number of the combination transposed. It's 42 instead of 24. Better write that down."

"Yes, I will," she replied, and duly wrote "42" on her blotter. She went in to tell Harwood that the safe was open.

"Fine!" he exclaimed, springing up. Evidently he meant to examine the safe's contents at once. He did not suggest that she accompany him, and she did not wish to—for that brought the tawdriness all back again. She watched him alertly disappear into the stairway room and wished he wouldn't. Krom was already dictating the technical descriptions to her. Why couldn't they have waited a little longer and kept the record cleaner?

THERE was a strong excitement in Harwood's nerves as he ran up the iron stairs. He had no faith in Krom, toward whom he felt only an angry contempt—which was heightened and sharpened by the fact that the blackguard had taken Bessie to dinner and the theater and was getting her down to his dingy hotel to dictate to her. It was quite true that Harwood had assented to that—his own position being so precarious that he was fairly obliged to keep as many strings as possible on the inventor. All the same, he charged it up angrily against Krom. But along with his contemptuous distrust of the blackguard he had a firm faith in the invention. He'd seen the pictures with his own eyes. Krom had the right stuff; the problem was to keep him from running away with it.

Now Prof. Kersten was going to take it in hand. The professor, undoubtedly, would understand the apparatus and know exactly what to do with it, making Harwood almost independent of Krom. He proposed to deal most honorably with Krom, giving him the one-third of the royalties to which he was entitled under their preliminary contract. Only he'd bring the fellow to book now and stand for no tricks!

Excited, he ran upstairs and into the roof room. The safe stood open. He squatted before it. This black metal object was, of course, the picture projecting machine. He lifted it out and saw at once that the safe contained nothing else. That was somewhat disappointing. He'd hoped the camera would be there. True, Krom had said that the projecting machine was upstairs and the camera was "safe"—which would imply that it was elsewhere. But Krom was such a liar; Harwood had hoped to find the camera there.

He looked the machine over with inexpert eyes, unable to form any opinion about it; except that he was quite sure it was the same machine from which the pictures had been projected when Krom exhibited them to him. There was no lens in it, however. He fumbled over it rather helplessly and discovered that it contained no film. That was more of a disappointment. If the film had been there Prof. Kersten could have seen the new pictures at once. No doubt Krom had the film somewhere, with the camera, "safe." Well, that was disappointing. But, after all, both Steinman and Krom had said the lens was the real thing; and he had both lenses. Kersten could tell by them.

Harwood wondered whether Kersten would have to wait to make a camera, then take some pictures. That would mean a delay. But probably the professor could rig up some sort of apparatus to test the lens on short order. Harwood quite decided that Kersten could do that — two or three days, at most. He examined the safe to see whether or not it contained a secret compartment, and decided that it did not. Surely Kersten could tell in two or three days.

Just a bit disappointed, he went downstairs. Bess was not in her cabinet, but a penciled note lay on her desk: "Going to lunch." It was only 12:35 then—early for her to go to lunch—but he thought nothing of that. Kersten had said he would come as soon after one o'clock as possible. Harwood's nerves were wound up now; he wished to lose no time after the professor came; so he sent an office boy downstairs for a bottle of milk and a sandwich. And while the boy was gone he went to the vault, off the big front room, and got out the lenses which Krom had left in trust with Bess.

At his desk he took them out of the pasteboard box, unwrapped the green flannel cloth, and admired them, with fervor. Much money — millions — lay in those shining squares. Harwood stared into their crystal depths with a strong fascination, lifting and turning them a little this way and that. As he stared they seemed mysteriously full of light—great stores of light compressed. He got the magnifying glass out of his drawer and looked through that with a hotter thrill as the myriad lines of color appeared in the lens. Surely that was something wonderful; there must be millions!

He drew the cloth over the lenses as the boy came in with his milk and sandwich. But he ate and drank with an absent mind. Just what was Kersten going to say about it? Old Curlin—could he, in spite of Krom's assertion, have some sort of hold upon this invention? No doubt the old man would be bobbing up with a law suit over the patents if he had the least ground to go on. Harwood wished he had better evidence than lying Krom's word that Curlin's camera was really smashed and out of the way.

He finished his luncheon and turned again to the fascinating lenses. Which one of them went in the projecting machine, he wondered—and would either of them really fit that machine upstairs? That question tantalized him.

Bess had suddenly decided to go to luncheon early. That rifling of the safe upstairs—for it seemed to amount to that—pulled at her spirits. Why did Nat do it? She couldn't quite keep Krom out of her mind—blind and helpless and trusting to her. It would be pleasanter away from the office than inside it, so she scribbed a note and went out at half past twelve. The disturbance and tension in her mind left no particular enthusiasm for food, however. The boisterous wind, tugging and thrusting at her as she walked, seemed to match her mental state. She stepped into a dairy lunch and was on the street again in twenty minutes—adrift, in eddies, her thoughts always swirling back to the office where Nat was rifling the safe and where Prof. Kersten was soon to appear and carry off the apparatus. She loitered on toward Michigan boulevard, stopping to look in a shop window, without caring much what it contained—feeling a pull toward the office, along with a repulsion. Presently she turned decisively and walked back.

Coming into La Salle street, she noticed by the clock on the Board of Trade that it was twelve minutes past one. Unhasting, but undeviating, she went on to the Belknap building, turning in at the arched granite entrance to that long white tile tunnel, brilliantly lit with electrics by which one gained the elevators. She had taken half a dozen steps there when her heart bounded, for she saw Robert Whiteside stepping into an express elevator—that is, one bound for the upper floors. It was a busy hour, with swarms of office employés coming in from luncheon. The cage that she entered shot upward hardly a minute behind Whiteside's.

SHE stepped out of it on the eighteenth floor, immediately looking to the left—that is, down the long public corridor which ran on that side of the building. The blank door at the further end of the corridor, which gave to the stairway room, was closing. Somebody had just gone through that door from the public corridor into the stairway room; and that was precisely what she had thought of when she saw Whiteside entering the elevator—that he was again going to the roof room in spite of his promise! This was a quarter past one—just the time when she and Harwood would normally be out of the office and when a visit to the roof room would be safest.

She sped into the law office and to her cabinet, her feet moving at the swiftest short of a run. But the door to her cabinet was closed. She put a hand to the knob and found it locked. The door was provided with a spring lock, but it was hardly ever closed. Usually she left it open on quitting the office for the day, and found it open when she returned in the morning. Rarely, when Harwood wished especially to avoid being disturbed, it was shut, and when it was shut the lock caught.

However, she had been furnished with a key to the front door of the office and one to this door; they were in her purse, tied together with a bit of string. She got them out, slid one of them into the lock, and opened the door—solely and hotly intent upon catching Robert Whiteside red handed.

As the door swung open she saw Harwood's back. He was standing at the desk in his room examining something on the desk. An open black bag stood on the desk beside him. He turned at the sound of the door. Bess was already well in the cabinet. She spoke breathlessly:

"He's gone upstairs again! I'm going after him." She was moving quickly toward the door to the stairway, intent only upon the trespasser above.

Harwood had taken a step toward her. He made a gesture, putting out a hand as though to stay her, and called: "Bess!"

'No!" she replied, refusing to stop. "I just saw him go up there. I'm going after him. Leave it to me!" She was already at the stairway door. "I mean Curlin's nephew," she added. With that she disappeared. An instant later she was running up the stairs, her mind all embattled for the coming encounter. The door at the head of the stairs was still unlocked. She pushed it open and hurried into the passage to the roof room. The great sound of the wind outside was in her ears. The door at the further end stood open and as she reached it she heard Whiteside's voice:

"He's dead! Put that down!"

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A SQUIRREL MAKES A SHORT CALL.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

RAP-A-TAP-TAP came a knock at the door of the Teenie Weenie dining hut one afternoon.

"I wonder who that can be?" asked the Lady of Fashion as she arranged the tiny net over her wavy hair.

"Come in," said the General.

There was some scratching at the tiny latch, and presently the little door swung open. A strange squirrel peered in through the door, and the little folks arose to welcome her.

"Won't you come in?" said the General.

"Thank you, I will if I can get through the doorway," answered the squirrel.

The General pulled the small door wide open and held it while the squirrel wiggled through.

"I'm Minnie, Nick Squirrel's friend," said the squirrel. "I thought I'd step in for a few minutes. I met you all one time last summer over by the big tree where Nick lives."

"O, dear," whispered Mrs. Lover into Tess's ear, "that's that funny squirrel who asks so many questions."

"Come right in and make yourself at home," said the General kindly as he closed the door.

"Don't seem to be many of you Teenie Weenies at home?" remarked the squirrel as she squatted near the stove.

"Most everybody has gone skating," answered the Lady of Fashion.

"Nice and warm here," said the squirrel, glancing at the stove. "That stove looks like one of those cans big folks use for tooth powder."

"It is," answered the General. "Makes a mighty handy stove for us. You see we put the pipe in the hole at the top where the powder comes out, and then all we had to do was to cut a couple of holes for doors, put in a grate, and presto! we have a good stove."

"Pretty cute lamps you have," remarked the squirrel. "Made out of acorns, aren't they? What's in those bags hanging up there from the ceiling?"

"O, those are a couple of hams—frog hams," answered the Old Soldier.

"Frog hams!" exclaimed the squirrel. "Do you eat them?"

"Yes, they are very good," said Mrs. Lover as she picked up a dropped stitch in the stockings she was knitting.

"O, dear me," sighed the squirrel. "I never could make myself eat a frog ham. Frogs are such pop eyed, bow legged creatures, the mere thought of it makes my whiskers twitch."

The squirrel spent the whole afternoon with the Teenie Weenies. She asked so many questions the poor little folks were all tired out from answering them. When the rest of the Teenie Weenies returned from skating and even when the Cook started dinner, the squirrel stayed on, so there was nothing to do but invite her to stay for the meal.

"Some folks never seem to know when to go home," whispered Tess to the Lady of Fashion as the two little ladies were setting the tiny table.

The squirrel took up so much room three of the Teenie Weenies had to wait for the second table and it was quite late before the dishes had been cleared away. The squirrel stayed and stayed. The poor Teenie Weenies grew so sleepy they could hardly keep their eyes open; in fact, the Dunce did go to sleep. He fell off the table on which he was sitting without ever waking up.

"It's getting late," hinted Tess and she yawned right in the squirrel's face in a most impolite way.

Grandpa fell asleep and snored loudly, but the squirrel never said a word about going.

When midnight came the squirrel had not gone, so there was nothing to do but ask her to stay all night.

"No, I can't stay all night," said the squirrel and she stayed another hour while the Teenie Weenies had to fairly pinch themselves to keep awake.

At 1 o'clock the squirrel said she must be going, but she spent fully half an hour chattering in the doorway.

"Well, I must be going," she finally said as she backed out of the door. "I've had a lovely time and the next time I come I'll not make such a short visit."

"For goodness sake!" exploded Tess, as the door closed. "That squirrel has been here almost twelve hours and if she calls that a short visit, I hope I'm not here when she comes for a real one."

The Dunce was so sound asleep it was necessary to throw a cherry seed bowl of water in his face before he could be awakened and sent off to bed.

FANTASTIC FORESTS
—Charming Senoritas

Tucson, Arizona, lies in a land of paradoxes.

Grotesque forests of cactus, hermit "showers of gold" flourishing in granite crevices, stubby little barrel-cactus that yield drinking water, and rivers that run underground, are but a few minutes from gardens with green lawns, roses, fig trees and charming vivacious senoritas.

If your heart is eager for open skies, bright days, new experiences, come to Tucson. Golf, motoring, hunting, horseback riding, hiking, or just lazy enjoyment of warm delightful sunshine are yours from now until May.

Reduced Rates

Reduced fares on all railroads, with direct Pullman service via Rock Island, El Paso and Southwestern or Southern Pacific, are now available. Tucson is a city of homes, with good hotels, reasonable rents and citizens who will welcome you. A modest income commands every pleasure and comfort in this city where winter is springtime.

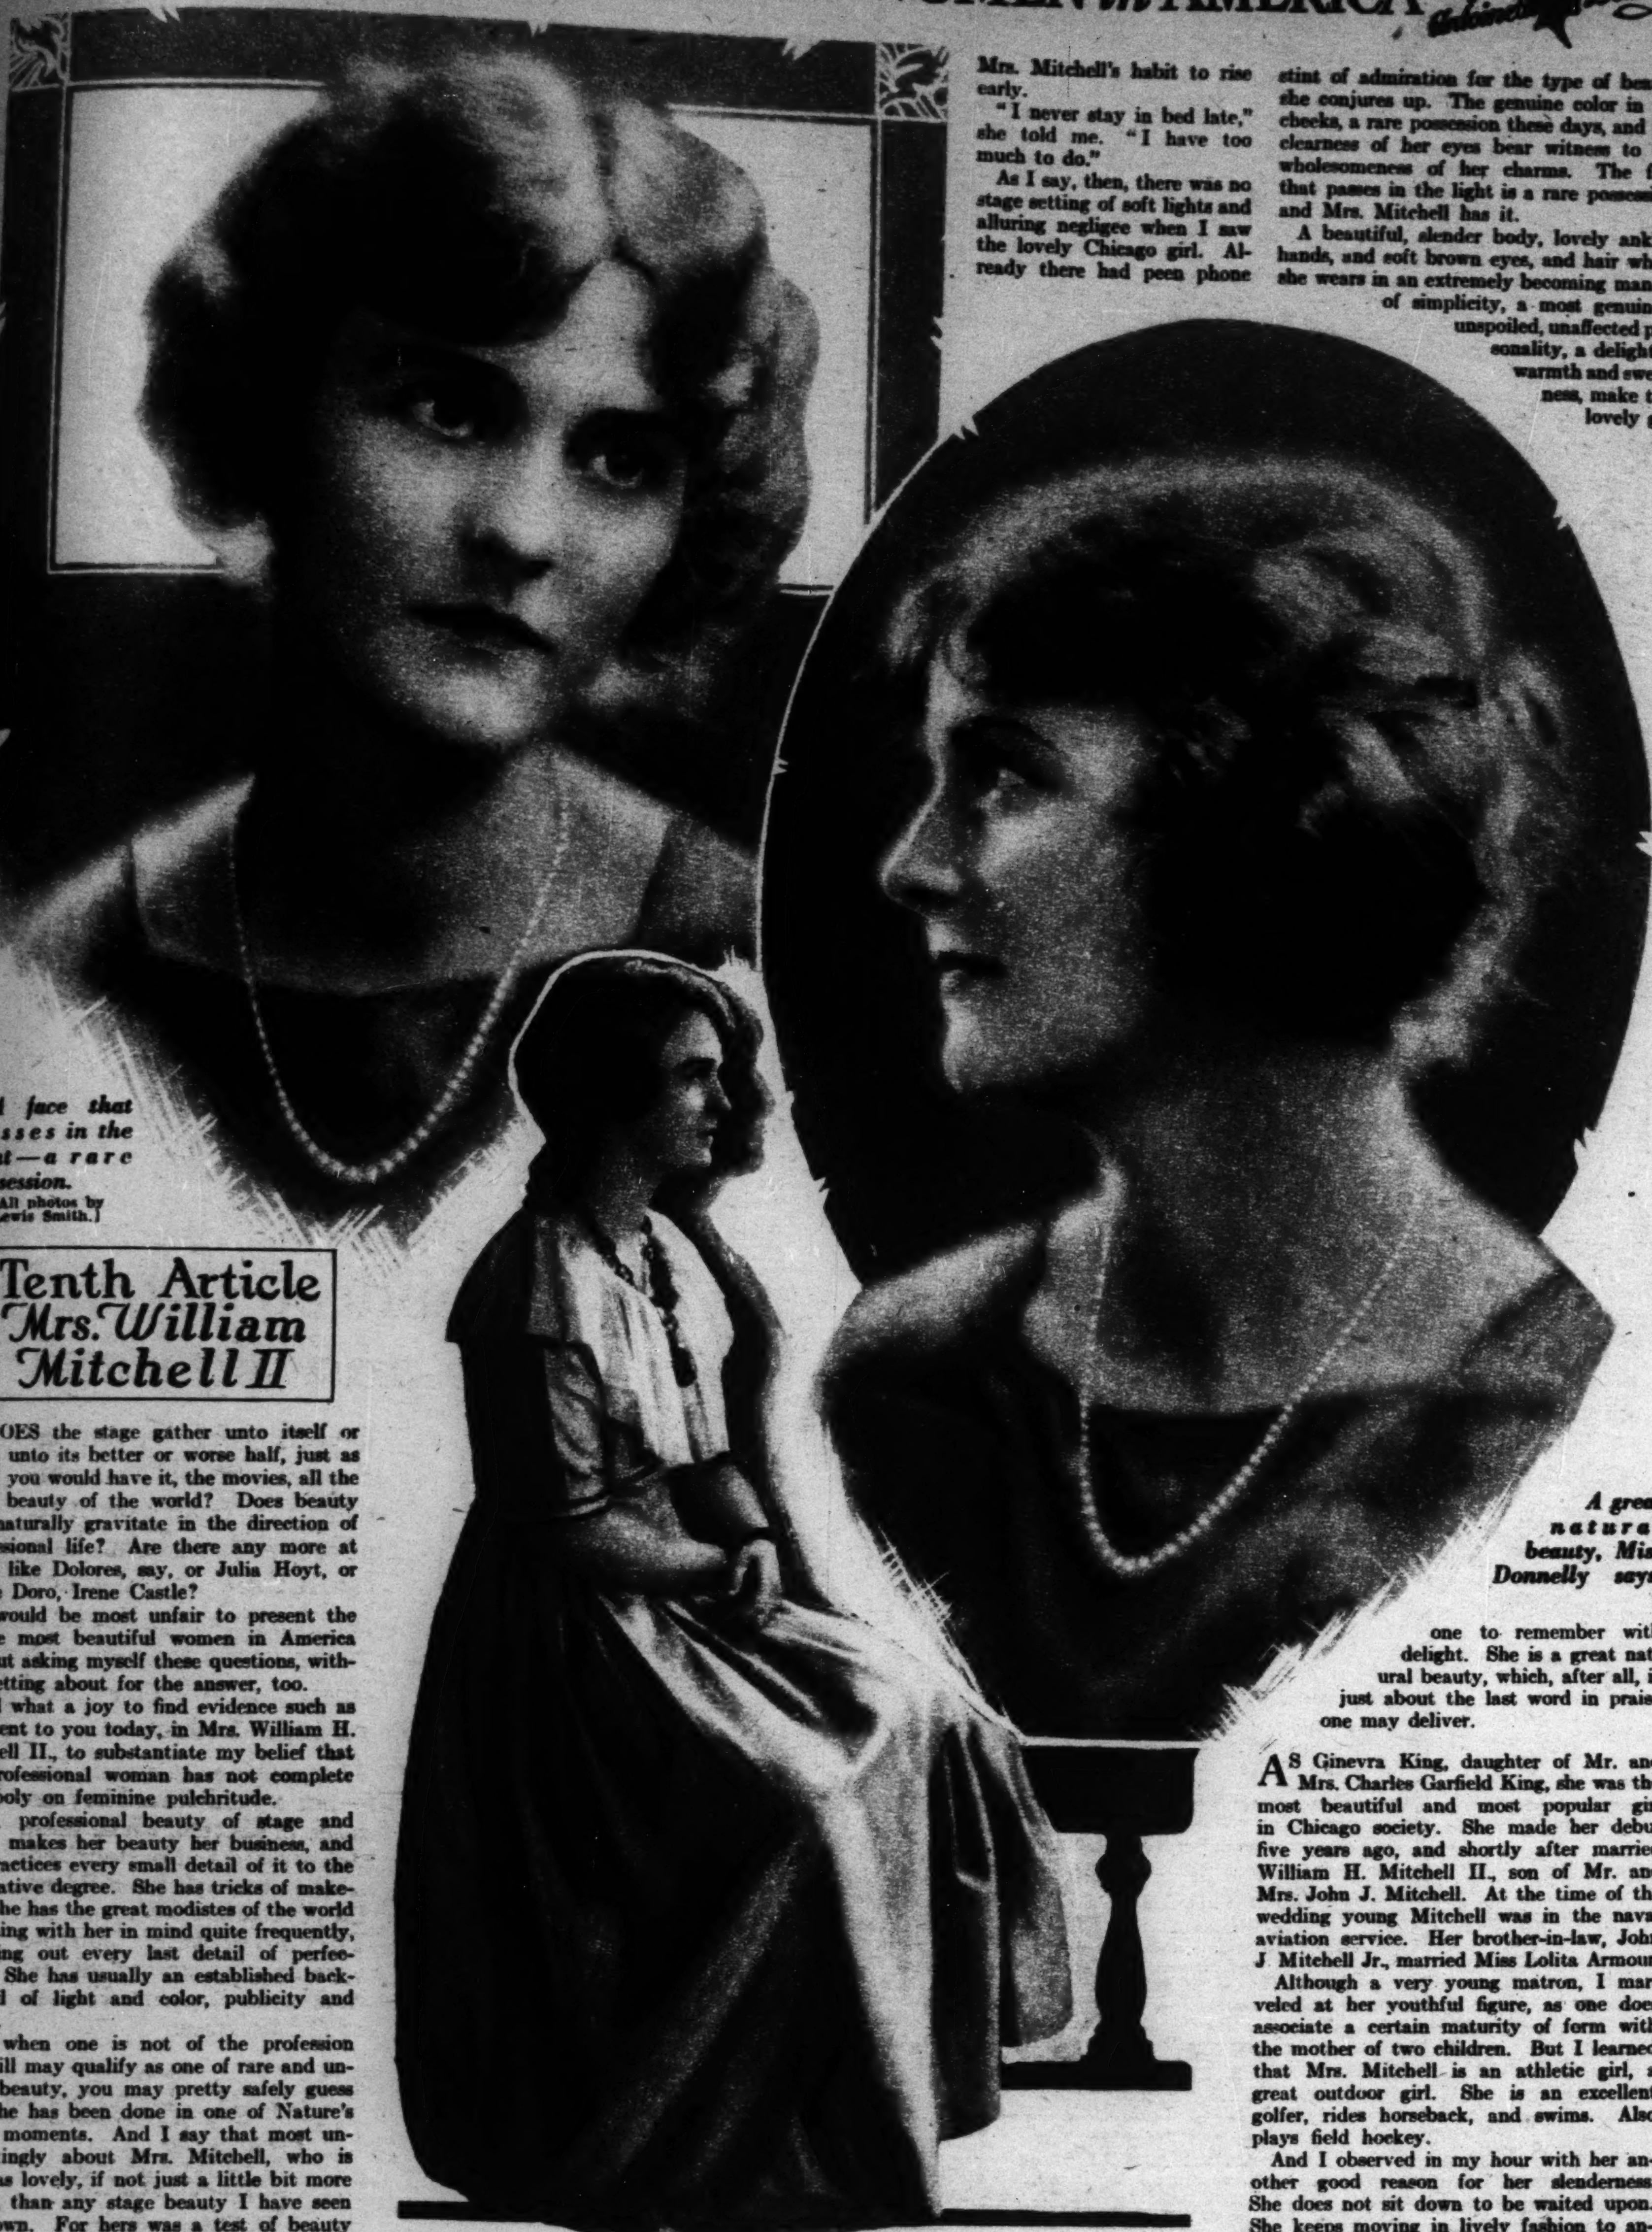
The TWELVE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN in AMERICA

by Antoinette Donnelly



A face that passes in the light—a rare possession.

(All photos by Lewis Smith.)

A great natural beauty, Miss Donnelly says.

A beautiful, slender body—lovely hands.

Tenth Article
Mrs. William Mitchell II

DOES the stage gather unto itself or unto its better or worse half, just as you would have it, the movies, all the beauty of the world? Does beauty just naturally gravitate in the direction of professional life? Are there any more at home like Dolores, say, or Julia Hoyt, or Marie Doro, Irene Castle?

It would be most unfair to present the twelve most beautiful women in America without asking myself these questions, without setting about for the answer, too.

And what a joy to find evidence such as I present to you today, in Mrs. William H. Mitchell II., to substantiate my belief that the professional woman has not complete monopoly on feminine pulchritude.

The professional beauty of stage and screen makes her beauty her business, and she practices every small detail of it to the superlative degree. She has tricks of makeup. She has the great modistes of the world designing with her in mind quite frequently, to bring out every last detail of perfection. She has usually an established background of light and color, publicity and praise.

So, when one is not of the profession and still may qualify as one of rare and unusual beauty, you may pretty safely guess that she has been done in one of Nature's lavish moments. And I say that most unhesitatingly about Mrs. Mitchell, who is quite as lovely, if not just a little bit more lovely, than any stage beauty I have seen or known. For hers was a test of beauty that not one other of my twelve lovely ones would have subjected herself to.

I interviewed Mrs. Mitchell at 9 o'clock in the morning. And if the men do not understand what that means, we women certainly do.

I caught the beautiful Mrs. Mitchell just on the eve of her departure for the east, and the early morning hour I thought was of necessity—that her day was too full for any other moment of interview. But it is Mrs. Mitchell's habit to rise early.

"I never stay in bed late," she told me. "I have too much to do."

As I say, then, there was no stage setting of soft lights and alluring negligee when I saw the lovely Chicago girl. Already there had peen phone calls and business attended, the wants of two adorable children looked after, and a day's work was still ahead.

No makeup, either. There need be no stint of admiration for the type of beauty she conjures up. The genuine color in her cheeks, a rare possession these days, and the clearness of her eyes bear witness to the wholesomeness of her charms. The face that passes in the light is a rare possession, and Mrs. Mitchell has it.

A beautiful, slender body, lovely ankles, hands, and soft brown eyes, and hair which she wears in an extremely becoming manner of simplicity, a most genuinely unspoiled, unaffected personality, a delightful warmth and sweetness, make this lovely girl one to remember with delight. She is a great natural beauty, which, after all, is just about the last word in praise one may deliver.

AS Ginevra King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Garfield King, she was the most beautiful and most popular girl in Chicago society. She made her debut five years ago, and shortly after married William H. Mitchell II., son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell. At the time of the wedding young Mitchell was in the naval aviation service. Her brother-in-law, John J Mitchell Jr., married Miss Lolita Armour.

Although a very young matron, I marveled at her youthful figure, as one does associate a certain maturity of form with the mother of two children. But I learned that Mrs. Mitchell is an athletic girl, a great outdoor girl. She is an excellent golfer, rides horseback, and swims. Also plays field hockey.

And I observed in my hour with her another good reason for her slenderness. She does not sit down to be waited upon. She keeps moving in lively fashion to answer the phone, to recover a stray toy for the young son, and, as I remarked before, she is an early riser with much to do in her busy world.

839 People Wrote to Tell Us Definitely what Boncilla had Done for Them

839 individuals, men and women, told us in just what ways Boncilla had improved their complexions.

447 said that it removed pimples and blackheads.
105 said that it removed their wrinkles and gave the facial muscles a youthful firmness.
47 said it removed the oil from their skin.
119 said it closed the pores.
213 said it gave them color.
45 said it gave them that vigorous feeling.
8 said it took away that sallow look of the skin.
17 said it removed tan — sunburn — and bleached their freckles.

These letters are the greatest evidence we can offer to prove that Boncilla will do everything we claim for it. Every letter breathes sincerity and enthusiasm.

Three Complete Facial Packs Only 50c

The Boncilla Pack o' Beauty is a remarkable value. It contains enough Boncilla Beautifier, Boncilla Cold Cream, Boncilla Vanishing Cream, and Boncilla Face Powder for three to four complete facial packs. The coupon below may be used by those who do not find it convenient to get to the store.

Here Is An Actual Letter

I tried a Package o' Beauty because I had previously tried an expensive face clay and it failed to give the desired results, so I did not want to invest so much in another trial. The powder adheres wonderfully and the creams are extremely delightful to use. But first in my estimation is the clay. My husband and mother both said my complexion looked like a girl's 16 after the first two treatments and I have just passed thirty.

I DIN'T SEE NUTHIN'!
HERE SHE COMES— BLESS HER LIL' HEART— BEEZIE THINKS SHE'S GOOFY OVER HIM, JUST BECAUSE SHE ACCEPTS RIDES IN HIS RACER—WAIT'LL HE LAMPS SOME OF MY FANCY SKATING. HE'LL FEEL LIKE A RUSSIAN RUBLE!
TUT! TUT! STOP QUARRELING— ALL OF YOU CAN PUT MY SKATES ON—HAROLD, YOU FASTEN TH' CLAMPS— BEEZIE CAN TIGHTEN THE LEFT STRAP AND HORACE THE RIGHT!
COM'ON FELLAS—LET'S SHOW TH' QUEEN A FEW FANCY STEPS!
OH, DO!
I PASS, SIMP— I CAN'T!
I GOT A SORE ANKLE!
THEN TH' BURDEN FALLS ON ME—THE FIGGER 8 BACKWARDS FOR A STARTER!
I HAD NO IDEA YOU WERE SO GRACEFUL, SHEIK!
GOOD HEAVINS! WHAT DO YOU CALL THAT!
AT'S A TAIL SPIN! HA! HA!
POW!
YOU TAKE HIM HOME IN YOUR CAR, BEEZIE— HE MUST HAVE A HEADACHE!
WE'LL INQUIRE AFTER HIS CONDITION ON OUR WAY HOME!
AW!

THERE, SKEEZIX, THAT'S A NICE SOFT SEAT FOR YOU. SIT STILL WHILE I FINISH THIS JOB.
JUST MY LUCK! THE BIGGEST DRIFTS ALONG THE LINE ARE RIGHT IN FRONT OF MY HOUSE!
HEY! GET OUT O' THAT! I JUST GOT THROUGH SHOVELING THAT WALK!
I'VE BEEN WORKING HARD ENOUGH TO GET IT CLEANED OFF. GOING OVER IT ONCE OUGHT TO BE ENOUGH!
GOSH ALL FISHHOOKS! NOW THE MAILMAN HAS GOT TO COME AND MESS THINGS UP!
O, WELL, IT'S ALL RIGHT. HE'S GOT A TOUGH JOB AT THAT!
O, FOR CAT'S SAKES!
I'LL SAY THAT'S NERVE! THE KIDS NOW'DAYS HAVE GOT MORE GALL— !
BOY
AND NOW IT'S EVEN DROPPING OFF THE TREES JUST TO MAKE IT TOUGH FOR ME!
CAN YOU BEAT IT! IF ANYBODY ELSE GETS SNOW ON MY WALK THERE'S GOING TO BE TROUBLE!
SKEEZIX!
HA HA HA! THAT WAS A GOOD JOKE YOU PLAYED ON YOUR UNCA WALT, YOU LITTLE RASCAL!
